A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF
THE CITY COLLEGE OF NEW YORK
YOLANDA T. MOSES

Over the past 150 years, the City College of New York has established a tradition of excellence, as it has enhanced the lives and expanded the intellectual horizons of countless individuals. Among our most celebrated qualities is the fact that our students and faculty reflect the cultural diversity, talent, know-how, and ambition that typify New York itself. Our renowned educators are dedicated to helping students achieve their highest potential and providing them with everything they need to get ahead in their chosen field. As a result, students graduate with the confidence that they are fully prepared for whatever field they choose to pursue.

At City College we take pride in the fact that we are among the top ten colleges and universities in the number of graduates who have earned doctorates, that CCNY is a leading source of alumni who have been elected to the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering, that City College is among the nation's top sources of minority engineers and doctors, that eight of our graduates have won the Nobel Prize. In the years ahead, we look forward to furthering these accomplishments and setting new and greater records of achievement.

This evening is a celebration of 150 years during which all who have shared a thirst for knowledge and a will to succeed have been given the opportunity to learn. With the support of those in attendance tonight, students from all over the world can continue to choose City College, knowing that they will receive an excellent education which will plant their feet firmly in the future. City College has always recognized that the students are our future. We proudly equip them to lead the way.

Thank you again for making it possible.

Sylvia Rhone

Welcome to the City College of New York Sesquicentennial Celebration, and on behalf of the Vice Chairs, Dinner Committee and the many dedicated students of CCNY, thank you for your support.

We are delighted to have co-chaired this benefit gala. A strong education has always been the key to success, and City College has been producing success stories for the past 150 years. The school is world-renowned for its exceptional programs and courses of study, taught by the top practitioners and most highly-regarded faculty in each diverse field of study.

It is no wonder then that CCNY alumni have distinguished themselves in virtually every field of human endeavor. Perhaps the single greatest example of such excellence is our honoree this evening, and we are extremely proud to salute him tonight. General Colin Powell is one of City College's most distinguished graduates and his extraordinary accomplishments are an example to us all.

GENERAL COLIN L. POWELL '58

Born in New York City on April 5, 1937, Colin Powell was raised in the South Bronx and, in 1958, graduated from The City College. That year, he embarked upon a distinguished military career which led not only to his becoming one of our nation's most important figures in the areas of national security and defense, but also one of the most respected men in America.

As the twelfth chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Powell served as principal military advisor to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and the National Security Council. Prior to that, he served as Commander in Chief, Forces Command, headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia. His numerous awards and decorations include the President's Citizens Medal and the Purple Heart.

Congratulations to CCNY on its 150th Anniversary and to General Colin Powell.

Anne and Seymour Gartenberg

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

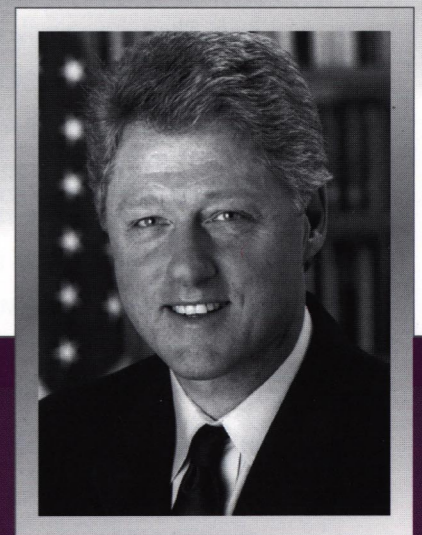

January 10, 1997

Greetings to all those gathered to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the City College of New York.

Excellence in education is the key to our future. For 150 years, the faculty and staff of CCNY have been offering an ideal learning opportunity for their students and preparing them for the responsibilities that lie ahead. Our nation relies on schools such as yours to supply the knowledge and skills necessary to compete in the twenty-first century. I am confident that The City College of New York will continue to endow future generations with expertise and guidance.

Best wishes for a memorable celebration.

Bill Clinton

—Robert B. Catell, Chairman & Chief Executive Officer of Brooklyn Union

“The combination of Brooklyn Union and LILCO will be good for our customers and good for New York. Here’s why.”

Each company has unique abilities. Together, we’ll be a stronger, more competitive energy company for both our customers and the region we serve.

Customers of both companies will get innovative products and services and lower energy prices. And we see lower energy prices spurring growth and new jobs from New York City to Montauk Point.

Brooklyn Union has an enviable record of customer service. Recently, we earned a customer satisfaction approval rating of 93 per cent—one of the highest ratings in New York State. These same people who serve you today, will serve you tomorrow.

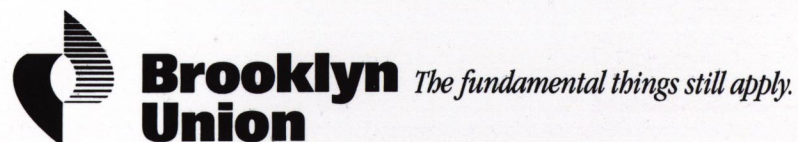

The service and the attention of the new company will continue to be local and focused on the territory in which we live.

Many of you are familiar with our long-standing commitment to the communities we serve. That will certainly continue. Our Cinderella Program has helped refurbish thousands of housing units in our service area. It even serves as a model for other communities. We also work with neighborhood groups to encourage business development and to support the arts, culture, health and education.

This is a time of exciting change for us, but the fundamentals will never change: pride in our work, care for our neighborhoods, respect for our customers.

They’ve made us what we are—successful today, confident of the future.

A TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE. A HISTORY OF SUCCESS.

FOUNDED IN 1847 with the goal of expanding opportunities for all who sought an excellent education, The City College of New York has been a primary avenue to economic and social advancement for generations of New Yorkers who otherwise might not have had the chance to attend college. One hundred fifty years after it began, CCNY remains a beacon of hope and opportunity to those individuals who will shape our future.

Above, center: Townsend Harris, the businessman who used his presidency of the Board of Education to urge New York City to establish a municipally supported college. He later negotiated the first U.S. trade treaty with Japan.

Left: The original home of the City College at Lexington Avenue and 23rd Street. The first class of 149 young men entered in January 1849.

Above: Lacrosse is the sport in longest continuing play at City. The team was established in 1887.

Lower, right: The College moved to its Collegiate Gothic campus on St. Nicholas Heights in 1907. This view looks east toward the main building, Shepard Hall.

Lower, left: "Read a book, take a walk, make a friend" counseled City's third president, John Huston Finley. Under his leadership from 1903 to 1913, City became internationally known for its academic excellence and urban mission. Here he addresses faculty and guests at the dedication of the new campus in May 1908.

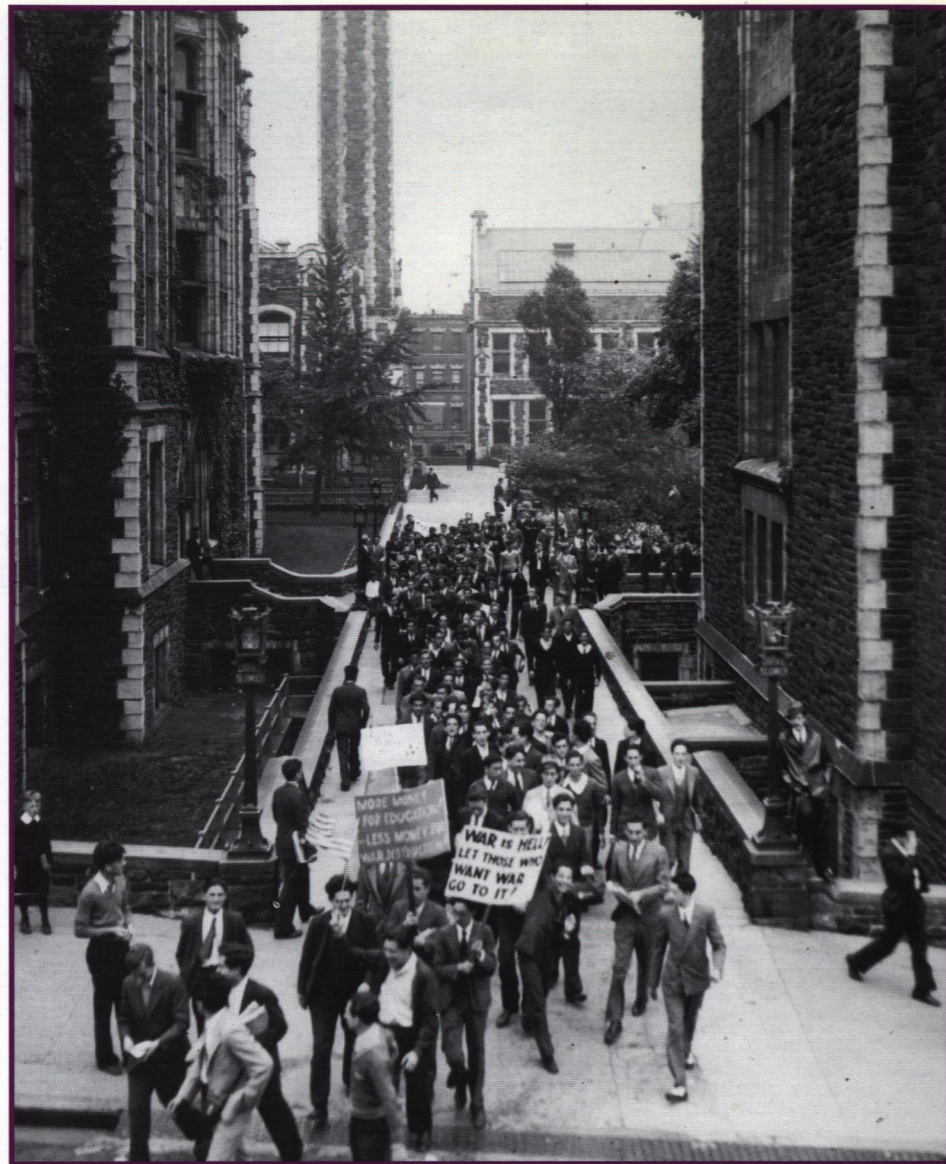

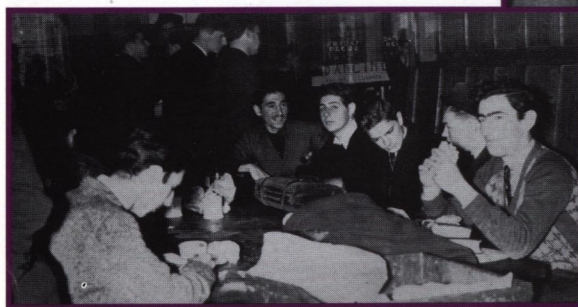

Above: Between 1917 and 1966 Lewisohn Stadium brought thousands to the City campus to hear noted performers and orchestras. Frequently used as a municipal meeting place, City students also used the Stadium for athletics and military drills. It was demolished in 1973 to make way for an academic center.

Right: Many City College students in the 1930s participated in antiwar and anti-Fascist movements and marches, such as this one in 1933.

Below: An alcove in the old lunchroom of Shepard Hall in the 1930s where students pondered the problems of the Depression and the rise of Fascism. Alcove regulars included Irving Howe and Irving Kristol of the Class of 1940.

Left: City College students taking the Pledge of Allegiance in the Great Hall of City College on Monday, December 8, 1941 after having listened to the President's declaration of war on the radio.

Below, left: "something had caught my eye – young guys on campus in uniform..." Colin Powell wrote in My American Journey. City's Reserve Officers Training Corps in exercises in 1958. The Drill Hall, "focus of my life," during college years, is to the right.

Below: City's student chapter of the Society of Women Engineers in 1950. The College became fully co-ed in 1951 when women were admitted to the College of Liberal Arts and Science.

Bottom: Studying on the subway – an integral part of City College life since 1907. This photograph was taken in 1942.

Center: The City College tradition of academic excellence and alumni success is exemplified by Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter (Class of 1902), at the dedication ceremony in 1958 of the bust of his friend Morris Raphael Cohen (Class of 1900). Cohen taught philosophy at the College until 1937 and its main library is named for him. President Bueil G. Gallagher is on the right.

Below, left: Since 1919, when legendary New York Celtics player Nat Holman arrived as coach, basketball has been the quintessential City College sport. Here the Beers are in play during the 1949-1950 season when they won the NIT and NCAA titles - a unique record.

Below, right: "I...met a CCNY fixture, called... Raymond the bagel man, though he sold pretzels." For over thirty years Raymond provided students with warm pretzels and warm greetings.

Left: Students enjoying spring on the terrace of the College's North Academic Center, located on the site of Lewisohn Stadium. Opened in 1982, the NAC includes more than 2,000 offices, lecture halls, classrooms and laboratories as well as the main library and the student center.

Center: A sixties scene on the College's South Campus. The South campus is now home to state-of-the-art Herman Goldman Center for Sports and Recreation.

Below: Tradition and modernity are both on view in this photograph of City College's science building, named for Robert E. Marshak, the internationally distinguished physicist who was president of the College from 1970 to 1976. The tower of Shepard Hall is also visible.

Congratulations to General Colin L. Powell on a well deserved tribute to his distinguished career!

We celebrate City College's 150 years of service in providing superior education.

CCNY was tuition free when we attended.
Today, unfortunately, there is a low tuition, but hard-working students continue to receive the benefit of an excellent education at a "scholarship" price.

Left: The City College Summer Surveying Camp of 1909 and (just below) of 1990. In 1849 the College's first President, Horace Webster described the new school as an experiment in "educating the children of the whole people." The experiment has been a profound success and Webster's vision is today more potent than ever before.

Bottom, left and right: The classroom and the laboratory are the heart of the College. In an archaeology laboratory (left), students study artifacts they excavated from a downtown Manhattan site.

THERE ARE LIMITS TO WHAT

In life, what carries us forward is not just meeting expectations, but surpassing them.

And no one exemplifies this more than
General Colin L. Powell
