Walpin Takes Presidency By 43 Votes

Running on a platform calling for the elimination of "outside politics" from student affairs, Gerald Walpin '52 ("Student Needs") captured the presidency of the Student Council last week by a vote of 43 votes over the total of Irwin Schwartz '52, his only opponent. The count was 1,422 to 1,379.

Schiffleur Wines In an effort to prevent cheating on examinations, Gerald Walpin '52 with 4,036 votes was elected to fill that position. Marv ran unopposed and to the student a broader outlook on life by integrating the courses instead of merely teaching. Marv ran on the "Student Needs" slate and gained 1,150 votes, while Kurt Schlesinger '53, his two opponents, drew 665 and 348 votes respectively. Drucker has also been in record for ruling "outside politics" out of order.

Letters may be submitted to the Dean of the Math Department or can be typed in the OP office, 7A36.

Following up a report of the Committee on Safety, the Council has recommended the establishment of a student register to prevent the complications that have arisen in other colleges. The four-day Student Safety week will be sponsored by the Student Safety Council, the Alpha Phi Delta, and the Sigma Alpha—Alphabets and the Evening Time Student Council will be asked to cooperate with the Department of Student Life in setting up the anti-rioting squad. This semester several members who have been brought to the Student Life office have been assigned to the inebriated. They were not students at the College and a few of them were found to be very uncooperative. Prof. Kurt R. Lowes, president of the Student-Faculty Ad-Hoc Council, asked all students not to leave their belongings unattended in the lunch room.

Student Council approves a plan of accident insurance for the students of the Uptown Center. The plan starting in September 1951, and underwritten by the U. S. Life Insurance Company will pay the claim directly from the bills submitted if it is so desired by the student.

The premium is very reasonable due to the fact that the student body is using its purchasing power as a group. The premium is $7.00 for men and $5.00 for women.

The purpose of this insurance is to cover all medical expenses resulting from each accident—whether at school, home while travelling, working, or on vacation.

2. Provides full coverage while participating in athletics—up to $500 for each injury.

3. Provides 24 hour coverage on the Office on charges of stealing coats and to him as the one returning the use of such coats.

5. Provides full protection for occupational injuries—students are covered while working part-time.

6. Benefits are paid in addition to any other insurance owned.

The tests were given to all male students taking Hygiene 1, 2, 3, and 4.

6% of the Upper Sophomores fared all the tests, while the students who failed all the tests in the Hygiene 1 classes totalled 11%. In the overall average, only one of all the students passed every test.

Women's Wants

Approximately 1,100 members of the College do not have an adequate infirmary or quiet room for resting. These are the women students. Something has been attempted—a cot has been set up behind a screen in South Hall in the women's locker room. Needless to say, it is not especially restful.

Space and financial limitations have been offered as an excuse. We've been noticing a good deal of construction work going on about the school. Surely one classroom can be set aside and outfitted in one of the building for the benefit of those girls who feel ill. We recommend the Hygiene Building as the logical choice; medical supervision would be close at hand for those women needing it.

It might be wise to start the ball rolling now. More and more women will be coming to City now that the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences has been opened to all. Such a large segment of the school should not be ignored.

Election Funds

The tight tee shirts were "eye-catching as the slate names were tricky; in this election campaign.

Observation Post proposes that a complete revision of the election regulations made which would forbid excess spending in election campaigns.

First the Facilities Committee or the Election Committee should sell all material used in the campaign. A sliding scale for expenses should be set up.

The Fee Plan should help finance the program inasmuch as student elections are truly the largest student activities of the term.

An increase in the election fee together with Fee Plan aid should equate the independent candidate with the slate participant. This is basically what is in effect, isn't it.

Observation Post sincerely doubts the advisability of permitting school-wide slate to continue. There are some valid reasons for class slates but insignificant ones for large school-wide slates.

Dear Joe,

By Marty Denkch

The term is almost over and I will be home in three weeks. Don't pick me up at the train station because I will be coming home by car. A professor, who will be a guest instructor at Chicago this term, will give me a ride. We are splitting the gas.

I don't know whether the local papers carried it or not, but there was quite a man up here at the school. Seems that a couple of Statistics students on last year's championship team, admitted tritzy to throw games. Well, all hell broke loose. Everybody went around mourning as if the College was being closed down. They get a fuzzy philosophy up here. If you got a good hall-club, you got a good college and it's something to be proud of. If the team loses, or if the players do something wrong, then the school's rotten and you should try and make out you don't go there. There ain't no pride in the academic standing of the school and people are always trying to find ways of transferring out.

When they got a football team, nobody goes out for the squad and nobody watches the team play; but when they scrap the team, everybody starts yelling to bring back football. I tell you Joe, it's a very lonesome place.

We got a mighty fine baseball and Lacrosse team too, but hardly anybody ever sees the games. You might say that the spirit and standing of the school depends on a winning basketball team. I'll be sure to come back to where people got some common sense.

We got some mighty queer political ducks up here also. All year round they discuss country politics; but at election time, they all swear that all they warn ever heard was that they were going to free the slaves. We got some mighty queer political ducks up here also.

House Plan Elects

Bob Gommevoos '21 was elected president of the House Plan Association, the College's largest social and cultural organization. He was a member of the group the past year and will help to operate the plans for the next. Bob is in his senior year and plans to major in Economics.

Others elected were Pete Connolly '23, Larry Schwartz, and Buddy Shmez, who are respectively the Vice-President, Treasurer, and Student Council Delegate-elect for next semester.

Dear Joe,

The kel of a boat plows up the watery road to Bear Mountain. The deck is stream with lounging Beacons—male and female. The smooth rhythm of the waves is by laughter, now by feminine shrieks.

It's Sunday, May 20, and the annual CCHY boattride to Bear Mountain, and the descricption that accompanies it, is vivid. If you've paid your $1 or will be on Pier 5, North River, at 10:00 A.M., this is what is in store for you.

The ship may be a boat and the sea may be a river, but you won't mind. The girl beside you may not be Ava Gardner, but the cool breezes and the seashore will help you forget that. Though your sense of smell tells you that it's the Hudson, you may convince yourself... but no, let's not go overboard on this.

Still, our urban stream has some advantages over the Atlantic. When you step on her feet as you dance, there's no need to apologize; blame it on the rocking of the boat. As you walk up to the refreshment stand and order up two cokes, you'll bless the smooth rhythm of the waves.

One of the major attractions of the day will be a baseball game between uptown and downtown City, which will give many a chance to "show-off." We'll be sure to go overboard on this.

The series, sponsored by the College's English Department, is named in honor of the late John H. Finley, third president of the College and editor of the New York Times.

Helen Rogers Reid, publisher of the New York Herald Tri- bune, will deliver the third annual John H. Finley lecture on "Newspaper and Society" tonight at 9:00 in the Faculty Room.

Since time immemorial, the editors have taken it upon themselves with one exception to gather together the yearbook pages, to make our am Т world has not seen fit to establish a state university. And in this modern day and age the charges of discrimination and so-called "quota" systems in most of our leading schools rings louder than ever. If this does not make City College's place in our society as leading schools rings louder than ever. It does, do something to change the situation is entirely different. I find it mean a well-deserved pride in the tradition usually means a long line of famous grads, but this is, of course, meaningless. Any college that has been in business for half a century or more has graduated some of the most famous. Do we then, at City College, have any other tradition that is more lasting? I think the undergraduates of City College can stand a lesson in school spirit.

Real Tradition

When Napoleon found the going rough in his ill-fated Egyptian campaign he summoned his army to China and mounting the shoulder of the ancient Sphinx thundered down to his charges: "Soldiers of France, the ages look upon you!" In a like fashion do we, at City College, have any other tradition that is more lasting? I think the undergraduates of City College can stand a lesson in school spirit.

The tradition of teaching us to have pride in our colleges and to contribute some small bit to its improvement in return for all that it gives you. Even in athletic darkness this past season, the College had many shining moments. How about Joe Saporosa, diminutive wrestling coach, whose greatest achievement was not being there! But Joe was sick in a hospital bed his team carried on in grand fashion. A tribute to the boys, a tribute to Bill Loughlin who stepped into a full-time coaching position with no pay and little publicity. But the greatest tribute must be payed to Saporosa who didn't lift a finger. As a coach he had brilliantly succeeded in teaching his charges more than a few holds and releases; he taught them a lesson they will never forget. He taught them not to quit and he proved that we do teach more than winning at City College. We teach sportsmanship and resourcefulness. My own personal experiences center around the boxing team and Coaches Yustin, Siruta and Ed Such who did not fail in teaching us higher goals than merely winning. They showed us the meaning of fairplay and above all, pride in wearing a City College uniform. For the same reason I found it my duty to report the release of Dave Polansky from his teaching position. To more than four thousand students Polansky represented these ideals and I didn't think, and still don't think, that City College can afford to lose him or his breed.

Up to You

Take advantage of all that City College can give you, but don't fail to give something in return. Take part in its activities, go out for its teams, join its committees, give something in return.

Attitude

Don't criticize anything without trying to do something change it. Every institution has its good and bad. Don't carp about the bad. Work with the good and eliminate the bad. Make something of your college career worth remembering. The 1962 class gave Felix Frankfurter and Langston Collier. The former rose to glory, the latter died a horrible, early death. That's life!
