Dorms in Manhattanville Approved 'In Principle'

The members of the Administration Building Committee agreed "in principle" on the establishment of men's dormitories in Manhattanville at the Committee's meeting last Thursday afternoon, according to Dean Morton Gottschalk (Liberal Arts).

No specific plans, however, have been made, and the number of students to be accommodated, as well as the number of buildings to be devoted to dormitory space, is as yet undetermined. Of the two buildings that have dorm facilities, Founder's Hall has three floors of single rooms, with provisions for about 100 students. While Academic Hall has dorm space on the top floor.

Some of the classrooms which are at the northern end of the building property may be ready for use in the fall. As to the transferal of an entire department to Manhattanville, no plans have yet been made.

Since the Committee feels that a ten-minute break is long enough to commute between the buildings now used and those in Manhattanville, special arrangements of programs for students who have to travel there will not be necessary. As Dean Leslie W. Engler (Administration) pointed out, 130th Street is not much further away from Finley Hall, and most of the delay is not caused by the distance, but congestion in the corridors, particularly around exits.

II - The Administrator and the Man

By Jerry Ludwig & Jerry Rouse

When Jerry Wright became President of City College in December, 1941, he confronted with a multitude of diverse and unique problems, some of which he had faced with the job, and others which arose because of the war and its ensuing ramifications.

Chosen from a list of more than 160 candidates, President Wright had the opportunity to exercise the qualities which the Special Board Committee had known. His ability to adapt to "precaution, effectiveness, and dignity," in spite of "an extraordinary number of large and acute problems," was demonstrated during his tenure as Acting President was needed now more than ever.

The Board had recognized Dr. Wright's complete familiarity with the situation at City College, and had further recognized it to be a "splendid asset in creating a climate moving forward with an aggressive handling of its problems."

But it was going to be very difficult to move forward. The school was overcrowded, particularly in need of new funds, and suffered the particular difficulties peculiar to all the new wrangling about the required two year ROTC course during the existence Consolidation, City College had at this time the largest voluntary corps in the world.

In addition, in April, 1943, the Second Service Command se announced that the ROTC students would be required to perform more than 12,000 troops had been classified through here. Then in May, 1943, the Army's Special Training Program opened at the College.

Ed. Note

This is the last in a series of two articles on Dr. Henry N. Wright, returning President of the City College.

One of the most troublesome situations arose out of the quickening of communist influences within the student body. The Committee was organized to investigate the situation in New York City colleges. Throughout the entire investigation. President Wright brought to the much needed calm and dignity required at this difficult time.

While cooperating with the Committee, President Wright continually emphasized what was in the best interest of the students and faculty. He strove to attain a closer association with all student groups, but while maintaining an "open-door" policy towards constructive student organizations, he had little sympathy for those who created unrest for the sake of merely causing confusion.

When President Wright took office, student activities were comparatively undeveloped side by side with the student body. It is only during the last few years that such departments as Student Life and the Guidance office, the administration, and faculty. He strove to keep his proper prospective.

In looking back upon his administrativ years at City College, a tenure ranging over of the most disturbed days of the world has ever known, President Wright feels a genuine satisfaction in the realization he has acted according to "the standards and the ideals that he had the courage of his convictions.

Jerry Noble Wright has called upon as President of the City College to stand by his beliefs and stand up for his beliefs. President Wright has always attempted to maintain his simple principle: "Nothing that he has ever done for the years."

He is the author of "First Course in Theory of Numbers," and a member of "The World's Great Church."

In keeping with the situation at City College and the demands of the educational interests of the city, the leadership of which should come from City College. Senator Leal and the Guidance office, the administration, and faculty. He strove to keep his proper prospective.
