Waiting...

Professor Sam Winograd, whose policies and purchase of athletic equipment have been questioned by the NYC Department of Investigations, is waiting for the fate of Prof. Winograd, former Faculty Manager of Athletics who now teaches gym classes, is up to President Buell Gallagher and the BHE.

College Runs Own Athletic Inquiry; BHE May Act Monday: Cavallaro

The College is conducting its own investigation into charges of malpractice in purchasing athletic equipment, President Gallagher announced yesterday. At the same time, Dr. Joseph B. Cavallaro, chairman of the Board of Higher Education, revealed that "official action" on the case, which was brought to light by the report of a City investigation, may be taken at the BHE meeting Monday. The charges were made public in metropolitan newspapers.

President Denies Existence Of Holman Case Transcript

By HANK STERN

There is no complete transcript of the Board of Higher Education meeting last week at which Nat Holman was dismissed from the College, President Gallagher said yesterday. A stenographic record of all motions made at the meeting, and all decisions reached, will be revealed to the public next Monday, but there is no record of exactly what was said by Board members at the meeting.

James V. Hayes, attorney for the ousted basketball coach, stated Wednesday that he has "no recourse now but to resort to the courts" in an effort to acquire the transcript, the existence of which was denied by Dr. Gallagher.

Joseph B. Cavallaro, chairman of the BHE, had earlier refused Hayes' request for the transcript. He said: "the Board has never made public whatever notes may have been taken from discussions in closed meetings."

President Gallagher also disclosed that Lewis A. Wilson, who is New York State Superintendent of Education, has the authority to overturn the BHE ruling if he feels it is unwise. Holman's attorney, therefore, will not have to attempt to prove that the BHE decision was illegal, but must show that it was unjust.

Nat Holman
Is There a Transcript?

The report was submitted three months ago by former New York City Investigations Commissioner James H. Shiels. A statement issued late Wednesday by President Buell G. Gallagher revealed that although he received the report from Dr. Cavallaro in December 1953, he "decided not to take formal action until the trial of Professor Nat Holman and Harry (Bobby) Sand had been completed, so that there could be no confusion between the two inquiries and to avoid the possibility of prejudicing the case of the two men then under trial."

The College is now conducting its own investigation into athletic practices, Dr. Gallagher stated. He added that he would "now proceed to complete the inquiry and to take such action as might be warranted."

Dr. Gallagher refused any other comment on the subject of the investigation. Yesterday morning, Professor Sam Winograd, former Faculty Manager of Athletics, visited Dr. Gallagher in the President's office.

Last night, Prof. Winograd angrily denied that he was guilty of any wrongdoing. "I don't care if they've got forty investigations," he said, but "I welcome any fair inquiry into the matter."

Professor Winograd repeated that he received "no kickbacks in any shape, color or form." He said it was "time to stand up and fight" against those who are trying to pull the red herring across the trail. "They should stand up and be counted," he declared, as

OP Forum to Consider 'Freedom of Expression'

A forum on "Freedom of Expression at City College," sponsored by the Observation Post, will be held next month. The forum will be a part of the observance of Academic Freedom Week at the College.

Three students and three faculty members will serve on a panel to consider whether or not there is an atmosphere of fear at the College, and whether members of the College community feel free to express views on controversial subjects.

The discussion will be the first in a projected series of OP forums on matters of interest to students and faculty. Other topics, such as "Is The College Run Democratically?" and "What is Our Athletic Policy" are planned for later this semester.

Jerome R. Ludwig, Editor-in-Chief of OP, will serve as moderator of the forum. Student

Queens Press Asks Ad Ban Referendum
The two Queens College student newspapers are sponsoring a petition calling for a student referendum on the controversial advertisements by "subversive" organizations.

The petition is being circulated in an effort to exert pressure on college administration to allow a referendum. The Rampart, one of the two papers, sponsored the petition and The Crown, the other student publication, has urged students to sign.

Printed LYL ad
Several weeks ago, The Crown printed a paid advertisement of the Labor Youth League, an organization listed on the US Attorney General's subversive list. Publication of the ad resulted in Queens College's Student Council approving a resolution prohibiting such ads in student newspapers.

On March 2, Queens College's Student Faculty Committee on Student Activities, ruled that the Student Council was within its rights in passing the ban on advertisements.

Signatures of thirty percent of the Queens College student body are required to place a referendum on the ballot.

Fountains...

Eight new water fountains have been installed in the Main Building, at a cost of $1410. Each new fountain has two spouts, making it possible for two people to use them simultaneously. They have replaced fountains which are as old as the Main Building itself, forty-seven years.

Manny Halper
To Serve on Panel

panel member will be Manny Halper, SC President, and Andrew Meisels, former OP Editor-in-Chief, and Hank Stern, managing editor of OP.

Among the faculty members to be invited to the forum are Professor Kenneth B. Clark (Psychology), chairman of the Student Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, and Professor Ephraim Cross (Romance Languages).

The areas of freedom of expression to be discussed include classroom discussions, faculty conferences and student newspapers.

Prof Attacks BHE Methods

Professor Emeritus William Bradley Otis (English), has denounced the action of the Board of Higher Education in dismissing Nat Holman as "more characteristic of a Russian police court action than that of an American jury."

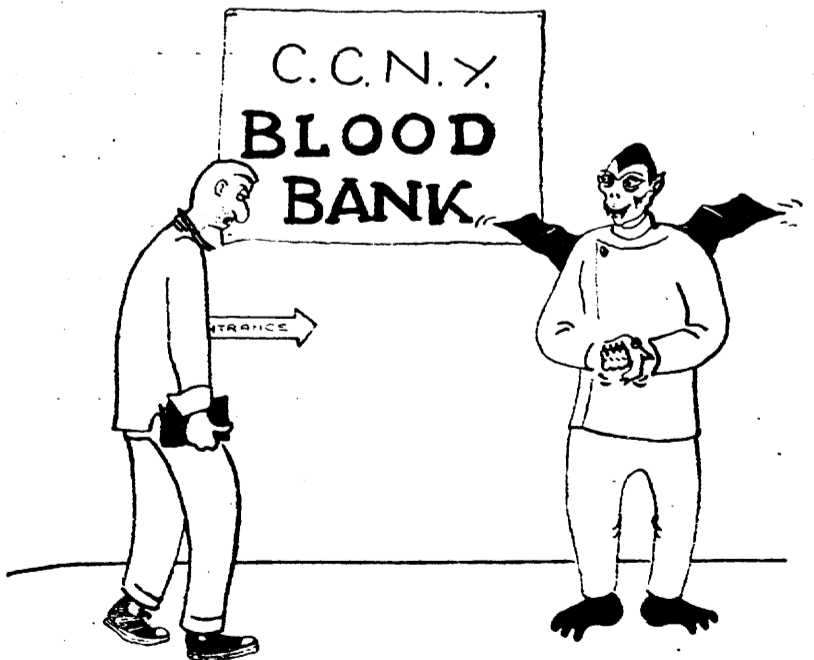

Professor Otis, considered one of the most respected faculty members at the College when he retired in 1948, issued his statement yesterday after learning that the BHE would not release the transcript of the meeting to Holman's lawyer.

"I've known Nat Holman for 34 years," Prof. Otis said. "I consider him one of the three greatest influences for good among the students in City College history," he added, ranking Holman with John Huston Finley, former president of the College, and with Professor Morris Raphael Cohen, noted philosopher.

He termed the process "by which a man is found innocent by a trial committee and is dismissed by the board. Somebody is trying to save face and make Nat the scapegoat," he said in angry tones. "Board members are not star-chamber representatives of New York. It is their duty to explain themselves. A man's honor is at stake," he added.

Professor Otis retired from the College faculty after teaching for 45 years. He is now writing a book on English literature.

THANK TO
ANDY MEISELS

Pledges for donations to the College's Blood Drive will be accepted all next week.

This year the College is in a City-wide competition with all other metropolitan colleges. A goal of 1000 pints has been set for C.C.N.Y. to maintain its position as highest donor in New York. Tables will be set up around the College to permit students to register more easily for the blood bank.

Artie Diamond of Alpha Phi Omega is chairman of the Student Council Blood Bank Agency and in charge of the drive. He will be aided by members of APO and the Webb Patrol.

No Cause for Joy

Today marks an anniversary, but we can find no cause for celebration. Just one month ago the General Faculty Committee on Student Affairs turned a document over to President Gallagher, a document born after three months of intensive study, a document which was to revolutionize the entire field of student-faculty relations here at the College,—the Presidential Committee Report.

However, GFCSA, showing a marked reluctance to change the existing state of affairs, could not resist drafting a text of its own, a missive that negated the very proposals on which the Presidential Committee Report was based. Thirty-one days have gone by since the conflicting statements were placed on Dr. Gallagher's desk. During this period no decision on the report has been issued from the President's office.

It is unfortunate, but continued inactivity will kill the Presidential Report as surely as a negative vote. The student body can ill afford to let this happen. That is why OP is continuing the fight for positive action, continuing in the face of determined opposition on the part of those who "do not wish to influence the President's decision," and that is why we will continue, and not stop until the Presidential Committee Report has been approved.

Ah, Wilderness

With Spring just around the corner, we would desire nothing better than to return to nature in the best of the Wordsworthian tradition. But unfortunately, to the City College student, life in the great out-of-doors has come to mean sitting on a stone bench and inhaling carbon monoxide fumes from passing cars.

And yet, just scant blocks from our sun baked campus lies a part of the original forest primeval. In common nomenclature this bit of paradise is known as Manhattanville.

However, even this is to be denied to us. At present the only souls allowed to pass through the hallowed portals are flies, bees, gym-bound females, and groups of awe-stricken students who periodically tour the prehistoric ruin that will someday become the Student Union.

President Gallagher, we beseech you to throw open the gates. Our urban legions would like to bask in this rustic splendor. Let them enter the promised land. Spring is in the air.

A Step Forward

The Presidential Report, as sweeping as it is, cannot by itself bring the students and faculty closer together. We are deeply gratified to find that the Student Council Social Functions Agency with the aid of Miss Cynthia Benzing (Student Life) has embarked on a program of its own.

Starting today, a series of informal student-faculty get-togethers will be held in Knittle Lounge, from 2:30 to 5:00 PM. The first, sponsored by the Class of '56, will enable students to come down and meet their instructors outside the stiff formality of the classroom relationship.

This system has proven a great success at many other universities. There is no reason why it can't work here at City College—if the students want it to.

OP would like to commend those responsible for putting this far-seeing program into effect and wishes them every success in carrying it out.

II—"Cinderella" Slips

(Last of a series)

By JERRY STREAR

On the night of March 28, 1950, Norm Mager broke loose from two defenders to score a driving lay-up and 18,500 hoarse spectators at cavernous Madison Square Garden went wild. It was the night of the second half of the unforgettable "grand slam." Nat Holman

The College had attained basketball greatness. Nat Holman had his "dream" team at the age of 52, after thirty years of coaching at the College.

Nowhere was the gripping emotion at the College more evident than in the OP lead story the following day describing Mager's monumental deed: "A skinny bag of bones," it read, "with five stitches in his forehead, blood trickling down over one eye, and more guts than any one human being has a right to possess, led Nat Holman's blistering Beavers to a 71-68 victory over the Bradley Braves in the finals of the NCAA Tournament in the Garden last night."

Nat Holman was "Mr. Basketball" of the nation. He won the Helms foundation award as the coach of the year. The Board of Higher Education adopted a resolution praising Holman.

This product of New York's lower East Side, once regarded as professional basketball's greatest performer, had capped a brilliant coaching career by piloting the only team ever to win both the NIT and NCAA post-season classics. Since 1919 he had guided City College teams to 383 victories as opposed to 132 defeats.

Scandal

The pulsating atmosphere at the College continued through the initial games of the following season. It was wonderful. But it was only a shimmering bubble that broke very easily when pricked.

Inside of a year Ed Roman, Floyd Layne, Al Roth and Ed Warner were indicted for taking bribes. The Board of Higher Education met and proclaimed that the City College would no longer be allowed to play games in a commercially operated sports arena. It was all over. The shimmering bubble had burst, both for Holman and the College. Mager's basket had been the beginning and end of the "golden age," all in a single motion.

In a statement printed in OP on March 2, shortly after the four CCNY and five other college players were taken into custody by District Attorney Frank Hogan, Holman said: "The Grand Slam and all the past accomplishments have meant much to the College but the future of these boys means even more. The tragedy may lie with us who put them there. Of what value," he continued, "is it to us if we win a championship and our boys land in jail? Perhaps we have been looking at this whole matter through the wrong end of the telescope. It is our job now to build up what has been knocked down."

As for his ex-players, he summarized in the words of the Bible: "Forgive them for they know not what they do."

Suspension

Holman finished out the season and took a sabbatical leave, his first from the College. On November 17, 1952, after an investigation by the BHE Intercollegiate Basketball Committee, a report was submitted to the Board. On the basis of his report, charges of "conduct unbecoming a teacher," "neglect of duty," and "disobedience" of a directive of the Board and its committee were preferred against Holman, Professor Frank S. Lloyd (then Chairman of the Hygiene Department) and Bobby Sand, Holman's assistant. They were suspended by President Harry N. Wright the following day. Holman returned immediately from Spain, where he was vacationing with his wife, to contest the decision.

The trial began in May of 1953. It dragged on for ten months. The three-man investigating committee of Mr. Gustave Rosenberg, Mr. Porter Chandler and Mr. John J. Morris heard a wealth of conflicting testimony during that span.

Then on February 24, the committee recommendation to the BHE hit the front pages. Holman was exonerated of all charges by a vote of 2-1. He was found not guilty of the charges. Instead, it was acknowledged that he was operating under a system sanctioned by the College—a system under which basketball and the players were the big thing; a system under which his "Cinderella" team won the 1953 NCAA and NIT championships.

"our procedures are completely above board."

The report, which was publicized as lead story in Wednesday's New York World-Telegram and Sun, is said to deal with malpractices in buying equipment. It reveals that the College paid more for such supplies as basketballs and team uniforms than other colleges in the metropolitan area, including Hunter and Brooklyn Colleges.

The firm that sold the College the equipment at higher prices, according to the report, was owned by a personal friend of a College athletic executive. The firm was later identified as the Circle Athletic Supply Company, which is owned by Bernard Saracheck, Yeshiva University basketball coach, and Louis Eisenstein, a referee in the National Basketball Association.

Professor Winograd was Faculty Manager of Athletics from 1947 to June 1952. When President Emeritus Harry N. Wright replaced Winograd as Faculty Manager with Prof. Arthur Des-Grey, he praised the former architect of the College's athletic policy by stating: "We regard your entire administration of this responsibility as having been motivated by complete loyalty to the College."

Dr. Cavallaro's statement that the BHE had the Sheils report; contradicted Prof. Winograd's denial, reported yesterday in The Campus, of the Telegram story that "the Board of Higher Education is studying a report of possible irregularities . . . by certain City College executives."

Little remains to the veteran of Gettysburg and second president of the College but his aloof expression and military stance.

Even his scabbard is empty. The sword once feared as the Excalibur of the Civil War has been stolen—by banditti from an NYU fraternity, some say. It was, according to legend, the weapon surrendered by General Lee to General Grant, Webb's commanding officer.

Recently, white footprints starting from the General's pedestal, rumor has it, testified to his nocturnal searches for the sword. The scheduled chemical bath is expected to soothe his troubled spirit.

OPinion

Question: Do you think that the current Congressional investigations have curbed the teachers' freedom of expression?

Stanley Ofsevit, U. So. 1:
I think that teachers are afraid to bring up controversial issues, not only because of the Congressional inquiries but also because of the hysteria against Communists and liberals.

Ray Forsyth, L. Sr. 7:
I feel that they are unjustified, uncalled for, intimidating and have limited teachers' freedom of expression.

Bela Bell, L. Fr. 1:
If teachers wish to express opinions contrary to our current policy, such as agreement with a particular phase of activity within the Soviet Union, they are not free to express these views, as they should be in an intellectually free society.

The Right to Drive

By Hank Stern

They keep saying CONY is a subway college, and they are right. The majority of our students head promptly for the holes in the sidewalks at 137th or 145th Street the minute classes end. Nevertheless, the tendency to blame that old devil "student apathy" for all the weaknesses of student activity here is just a bluff. Student activities are not strong to begin with, but the thing weakening them is not lack of interest, but superabundant restrictions. Less red tape and fewer regulations (the rule book now is 72 pages long) would help a great deal in this direction.

One of the great battles of modern times is the fight to win the use and control of the family car from the protecting parent. The initial struggle usually deals with learning how to drive. A victory ensues when the license is finally secured. After all, if the State of New York says you're a good driver, how can mere parents argue.

Next big problem is usually insurance. This is rather expensive, and the student must be either well-heeled or unusually persuasive to secure the documents necessary to provide $10,000 coverage for the fellow you bump into.

If Dad doesn't use the car, things will be easier than if he's a steady driver. You see, driving is as habit-forming as drinking, and it is as hard to wrest the wheel as the bottle from grasping hands.

IN THE still of the night—high above a sleeping American city—an unidentified aircraft is spotted. In a matter of seconds a lightning-like jet interceptor takes to the air. Unerringly, with an Aircraft Observer showing the way, the Air Force F-94 Night Fighter speeds to intercept the stranger. The Aircraft Observer is the man behind the pilot—the officer who keeps America's planes flying on course and on target. Without him the Air Force couldn't do its job.

What is the Aircraft Observer?

He's a Radar Officer . . . employing an all seeing eye that penetrates where human sight fails.

He's an Aircraft Performance Engineer Officer . . . knowing everything there is to know about his plane . . . keeping it fit for the skies and ready for action.

He's a Navigation Officer . . . plotting his plane's course . . . with an entire crew depending on him for a safe flight.

He's a Bombardment Officer . . . in full control of the plane over the target area . . . the Air Force Officer who "lowers the boom" on the enemy.

What the Aircraft Observer gets

He earns over $5,000 a year. His silver Aircraft Observer wings give him prestige and distinction, and he wears the bars of an Air Force Lieutenant. They mark him as the eyes, ears, and brains of America's Number One flying team.

What it takes to be an Aircraft Observer

The Aircraft Observer must be sound of limb, keen of mind, and above all, must have the determination to be the best.

To qualify as an Aircraft Observer you must be single, between 19 and 26½ years old, and a high school graduate. However, it will be better for you and the Air Force if you stay in college and graduate before you apply. Then you, too, can be one of the best . . . as an Aircraft Observer.

MEET THE NEW MET CHAMPIONS!

Appraisal

By Joe Marcus

"They worked hard all season and certainly deserve the glory that is coming to them," stated head swimming coach, Prof. Jack Rider. Rider, of course, was referring to last Saturday's amazing performance of the swimmers in winning the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Title for the first time since 1948.

At the beginning of the season no one predicted that the Lavender mermen would defeat such teams as New York University or Kings Point to take the title. However, after watching the first meet of the year against Brooklyn Poly, other teams learned that the Beavers would be contenders in the race for the annual Francis P. Wall Trophy. Manhattan College and Fordham University proved easy matches for the high flying mermen. Incidentally, both of these squads handed the Lavender swimmers defeats last year. On December 19 the Beavers met the weakest team in the league, Hunter College. In this meet Coach Rider experimented by throwing in many men in order that they get more experience. Howie Schloemer competed in the Individual Medley for the first time in his career and missed breaking the City College mark by just one second.

The Beavers' winning streak of four came to an end one month later as a powerful Columbia University team handed the Mermen an eight point beating. In this meet the Lions were forced to go to the 400-yard freestyle relay in order to win. The Beavers then journeyed to Easton, Pa., to face a highly rated Lafayette squad. The Leopards proved to be very tame and the Beavers ripped them quite handily.

Next came the first real test on the Lavender's Metropolitan intercollegiate schedule. Kings Point invaded with a team that figured to be one of the top contenders for the championships. The mermen overcame an early deficit to sweep the breaststroke, 440-freestyle and relay events winning 52-32. A new star arose for the Beavers in the person of Steve Keston, who, while competing in his first meet as a varsity member, defeated the champion Howie Schloemer in a nip and tuck race in the 220-yard freestyle.

The highlight of the dual meet campaign came as the swimmers defeated NYU, 44-40. The Beaver trio of Tony Sousa, Bob Kellogg and Ben Trasen captured the 300-yard medley relay and from then on the team couldn't be headed! Against Brooklyn College, the one man given any chance of beating Schloemer in the 220 yard freestyle found out that the powerful champ was too strong in the final meet of the year. The man in question was Jerry Tiernan who stopped Howie two years ago, but times have changed. The Beavers rolled up their biggest point score of the year by defeating the Maroon, 63-21.

The Metropolitan Championships were next and the Lavender completed the year by winning with great performances by Schloemer in the 220 and 440, while teammate Keston placed third in each of these events. There was also the great one-two finish of Vic Fulladosa and Bob Kellogg in the breaststroke championship. Spectators won't forget the excellent performances of Lou Ruffino and Ben Trasen who wound up in second place in the one meter dive and the 100 yard freestyle championships, respectively. Another fine showing was turned in by the Beaver medley trio of Sousa, Kellogg and Trasen who placed second behind Kings Point. In the 150 yard medley individual championship Kellogg, Fulladosa and Norm Moscovitz placed fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively to garner six points in the team total. In the 200 yard back stroke Tony Sousa and Arnold Farber placed fourth and fifth respectively to pick up five additional points. In the most exciting race of the day, the Beaver quartet of Trasen, Jay Glat, Keston and Schloemer were beaten by two-tenths of a second by NYU in the 440-yard relay.

But there were also some heartbreaks as Stan Worchel, who had worked hard all season, won his heat of the 100 yard freestyle and placed second in his division of the 220-yard championships but failed to make the finals. Jay Glat, was awarded only fifth place in the 50-yard freestyle and therefore didn't make the finals. The 50-yard race was the only race in which the Beavers failed to tally a single point.

Tomorrow Schloemer will attempt to defend his 440- and 220-yard championships in the Eastern Intercollegiate Title Events at Lehigh University. Also representing the Beavers will be Keston, Ruffino, Worchel, Trasen, Kellogg and Sousa. A few victories would make this team the greatest squad in the school's history. Anyway the team and coach deserve the praise of everybody at the College.

Lady Beavers Cafeteria Security... End Campaign

Boasting a respectable record of 7-4, the women's basketball team closed out its season last night against St. Joseph's College bowing 52-41.

Prior to last night's affair the team was undefeated in its last five encounters, taking the measure of Wagner, Rider, Adelphi, Hofstra and Brooklyn College. The Gals' three setbacks were administered by Queens College, Hunter and NYU.

Coached by Miss Marguerite Wulfers the Beavers have demonstrated a sharp defense.

The leading scorer is Judy Levin, averaging 14 points a game. Sandy Berman and Barbara Dette have netted 12.7 and 11.5 points, respectively.

In one of the finest games of the year the Beavers fought from six points behind in the last three minutes to tie the score in regulation time and won 47-46 in overtime against Rider College in the Rider gym.

A nullified basket in the second half was the turning point against NYU. The Violets went on to win 60-56 in a hard fought contest as the Beavers were unable to come closer than two points to the winners.

The hoopsterettes have averaged 44 points during the last five games. The opposition has been held to 34.

College officials have remained silent on whether any additional safeguards have been instituted in the cafeteria since the $600 robbery over the Lincoln's Birthday weekend. George Shuster, cafeteria manager, stated he was "not responsible for the College buildings," and added that all other information must come from the College authorities. Leslie W. Engler, dean of administration, declined to comment on any reports, claiming that he has been out of town and only just returned from Chicago.

This Is Holman

Holman was elated. The student body considered it their victory. But the recommendation had to be reviewed by the BHE for approval. That approval never came. The minority decision of Mr. Chandler outweighed the majority verdict. Holman was declared guilty.
Nat Holman, a man who coached City College teams for thirty-two years, was ordered to retire within thirty days. He has been permanently suspended by the College.

"Mr. Basketball" hasn't proved his integrity to the BHE, which lauded his actions in 1950 and condemned them in 1954. The question now is: can he salvage his lost reputation? Only time will tell.
