Opponents to Club Lists Will Hold Open Meeting

A meeting to discuss what steps should be taken to combat the newly instituted membership list in Room 120 in Twa. People who are opposed to compliance with the new procedure, all interested students and faculty members are being asked to attend.

Arnell Adolf, President of Students for Democratic Action, said, "We should consider what it will do about the ruling believe all the clubs should get together and do it in a united course of action at this meeting."

Martin Gruberg, Student Council Vice President, stated yesterday that he is completely against the idea of compulsory membership in student clubs. "I am trying to introduce a plan to the Student Faculty Committee on Student Affairs (SFCSA) which will put a student's record of membership back on a completely voluntary basis," Gruberg explained. "The Department of Student Life can check on the validity of this volunteered information through the club presidents, but no club can be forced to club membership and not attempt to stifle it as the SFCSA has done in its recent ruling," he added.

The compulsory membership ruling was passed November, and last amended, by the Student Faculty Committee on Student Affairs (SBX3SA) which was composed of students, faculty and other members. It was originally instituted membership listing for any club. "I am Lockheed that although a referendum of the College's newspapers was contained no such clause."

The proposal is a revised edition of President Gallagher's proposal in that it would allocate sixty percent of the stipends for studies pertaining to a teacher of Russian history, of the highest approval of the bill. He said how- ever that federal scholarship money should bear no relation to the "national emergency" provision which he was dismissed deprived himself of tenure in his employment and their being re- ceived.

Three can be your lucky number. Tomorrow at 12:15 PM come enter "The Man and Observation Post" first candidates of the seniors. You'll get a taste of the newspaper game—most the extra-curricular activity of the College. There are openings on the news, features, syndicate and department so come in and become a part of the mad newspaper."

The proposer Oscar Janowsky (His- tory) expressed the opinion that the Soviet Army and the Communist Party were united to oust Malenkov. This, he felt, seems true because Nikolai Bulganin controlled the Army and Nikita S. Khruchev (Commu- nist Party Secretary) the Communist Party organization. Prof. Janowsky further asserted that there were secret communists in the College.

The proposal, according to Dr. Gallagher, was made to the Senate Internal Affairs Committee whether he had been a teacher of Russian history, of the highest approval of the bill. He said however that federal scholarship money should bear no relation to the "national emergency" provision which he was dismissed deprived himself of tenure in his employment and their being received.

President Reiterates Position Acclaiming 'Freedom of Press'

In a letter to the Tablet, official organ of the Brooklyn Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, President Alfred H. Lasker reiterated the principle of "full public press freedom" and criticized the dictatorial censorship of the press. The letter was a reply to the Catholic paper which had headed its attack of the Observation Post and the Ticker Baruch Center newspaper, "CCNY Papers For Immorality." The story...the letter continues, "unfairly attacks the Catholic paper which is the advocate of student rights. As such, it is in the interest of the majority of the Country College students, who regard the freedom of the press as the基本 core of our university life."

Three Headed Female Scans All Directions

Students at the College are undoubtedly being reminded "Look to the Past, look to the present, look to the future." This week, if one understands the admonition, is the chief adornment of the College's three-headed feminine emblem. "Romulus, Rhea, Prophesia," is how the seal puts it. Its three peering heads symbolize youth, maturity, and old age, respectively. Although the three visages appear Greek, they are derived from Greek mythology, according to Professor Walter Felton (History) an authority on the subject. He suggests that it may be of Indian origin, since it is the Arabian origin of the Arabian origin of the Arabian origin of a three-headed image. The exact date of the origin of the Greek drawing is unknown. A three-dimensional seal was first created by Professor Addison of Andover (Chn, Art) during the College's Centennial, in 1926. The seal, "Romulus, Rhea, Prophesia," was suggested by a former professor who taught at the College during the latter part of the nineteenth century.

Lure of Tugboat Boys: Prof. to Canal Holiday

By ROBERT KEENAN and JAY CARR

At least one of the 150 College men has found a solution of the problem of what to do with a winter holiday. This year, a faculty member has found the solution. He arranged for a trip to one of the tankers, the California, from Texas to Florida, for an eight-day, fourteen-hour round trip. The work is long and strenuous, but the trip is exciting and enjoyable. The Professor manages to dovetail cruise trips, photography and writing to while away his vacation time.

A few years back, Prof. Shipley decided to take an auto trip through the northern states. The Professor manages to dovetail cruise trips, photography and writing to while away his vacation time.

During the recent Christmas vacation, he was scheduled for a cross-country train trip, to record his impressions of the states he went through.

Vivad Experiences

Professor Shipley emphatically doesn't fit the stereotype of the cloistered academian. In pre-professorial days he held variety of jobs. Following his graduation from Western Reserve University, St. Louis in 1919, he tried his hand at a number of different vocations, from reporter for the St. Louis Post Dispatch. After four years as a newspaperman, he returned to school, this time at the College of the City of New York, and eventually became a professor. He was appointed to the faculty of the City College in 1925.

Washington Fought Redcoat Army
Where History Scholars Now Study

By SAUL SOFER

Two hundred years ago, not even a history librarian could have halted the tumult which occurred on the site where the History Library now stands. The rebel American armies, under Generals Washington, Putnam and Greene, held off the British redcoats of General Howe on the very spot where today's students serenely study their history.

The Continental Army, according to the history books, was in dire peril of defeat after the British completely routed them in the battle of Long Island. Washington, feeling that he could not hold New York, thought it best to destroy the city, desolate the country around it and withdraw up the Hudson River. If carried out, this plan according to military experts, would have forced the British to abandon New York and the mouth of the Hudson. It would have left them on the edge of winter without quarters, and in the end probably would have shortened the war.

Under pressure by Congress, Washington reluctantly dropped his plan and accepted the alternative of entrenching his forces.

Washington, Putnam and Greene and other heroes of the struggle cheered their spirits and roused them to noble exertion and final triumph.
