Attacked Coed Sues NY City For Injuries

Marianne Ronis, the CCNY coed who was assaulted in a corridor on the third floor of the Finley Student Center last October, is suing New York City for $100,000.

In the claim against the City, now under investigation by the City Comptroller's Office, Miss Ronis charges that she sustained "personal injuries" as a result of the incident.

Miss Ronis received cuts about the head and face. She was taken to Knickerbocker Hospital after the assault. Miss Ronis remained in the hospital for two days and was absent from school for two weeks.

The assault occurred last October 10, in a corridor outside Room 316 Finley, then the Tech News Office. Miss Ronis, a staff typist for Tech News, had completed her work for the day and was leaving the building. As she walked down a deserted corridor in the West wing of the Student Center, an unidentified man struck her several times about the head with a bucket handle.

Her assailant has not yet been apprehended.

Prom Planned For April 1st

Tickets will go on sale tomorrow for the College's first school-wide Spring Prom, to be held on Sunday, April 1 at the Roosevelt Hotel Grill Room.

Admission to the dance, sponsored by the Inter-Class Council, is $4 a couple. Entertainment will be provided by an eight-piece dance band, and two famous "mystery guests," to be announced later. In addition, several students are scheduled to entertain.

Tickets can be obtained daily between 11 AM and 1 PM at the Ticket Bureau, Room 154 Finley, or from members of the Inter-Class Council, who will be wearing buttons with the legend "Spring Prom Tickets." Ticket sales will end on March 21.

The Spring Prom has been inaugurated this semester, according to Martin Krauthamer, Junior Class Vice President, because of a definite need for a school-wide dance in the spring term. He hoped that the Prom would become as popular as the annual fall All-College Prom.

Students interested in performing at the Prom should contact Krauthamer at FO 4-1348, or through Box E-3 in Room 151 Finley.

Election . . .

A meeting of the publications to elect a representative to the Student Faculty Fee Committee will be held tomorrow in Room 337 Finley Student Center at 11 A.M. Each publication may send one representative. The number of attending publications will constitute a quorum.

MEs to Hold Annual Parley With Colleges

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME), will hold their Annual Regional Conference at the College on April 19.

Ten colleges, including Rutgers and the University of Puerto Rico, and expected to send about 250 delegates to the spring event. An award will be given to the delegation which has the highest number of students attending, multiplied by the distance traveled.

Highlighting the Conference will be prizes worth $150, given to the student with the best technical paper. The contest is designed to stimulate original writing.

Rams Win Debate Tourney As Beavers Fail to Place

A Fordham University team took top honors in the first Metropolitan Invitational Debate Tournament held Saturday at the Finley Student Center. The Rams led sixteen other Eastern colleges and universities, including City College, to claim both the team and the individual debator trophies. The City College team failed to place in the tournament.

Wolfgang Schaechter, debator from Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, delivers his peroration at the first Metropolitan Invitational Tournament which was held Saturday.

At the end of the day-long debate both Fordham and St. John's College emerged with a 7-1 won-lost record but Fordham led in the point scoring, 418 to 392. A freshman on the Rams' team, John Doyle, took the individual scoring prize by amassing 121 points.

Each school sent two teams to debate the affirmative and negative of the topic: "Resolved: That the Non-Agricultural Industries of the United States guarantee Their Employees an Annual Wage."

Participating in the tournament, in addition to the College and the College's Baruch School, were: Barnard, Brooklyn, Brooklyn Poly, Columbia, Fordham (Arts and Education), Hofstra, Manhattan, New York University (Washington Square), St. John's College (Queens), and the United States Merchant Marine Academy. Late entrants in the competition were: St. Peter's, Rutgers (of Newark), and St. John's University College (Brooklyn).

The College's Debating Society organized the tournament which now promises to be an annual event. Mel Drimmer, president of the society, said that this was the first debate tournament ever held exclusively among colleges and universities in the metropolitan area. This was also the first intercollegiate event to be held on the South Campus.

Drimmer, who awarded the trophies to the Ram victors, said that the team representing the College at the tourney had never debated before and, as novices, did much better than their 1-7 record indicates.

A foreign flavor was lent the proceedings with the presence of two visiting debators from McGill University of Montreal, Canada. The duo, in all seriousness, offered to debate the company on the topic: "Resolved: That the United States Has Passed from Barbarism to Decadence Without Passing Through Civilization." Since the topic had already been chosen and prepared, the offer could not be accepted.

Cagers Halt Losing Streak at Nine; Coast Past Queens College, 84-68

Superior rebounding power and hot shooting hands enabled the College's basketball team to end a nine game losing streak Friday night as the Beavers romped over Queens 84-68 in Wingate Gymnasium. The victory, second of the season over Queens, clinches third place for City in the Municipal College Conference, and raises their record to 3 and 14.

Queens was in the game only for the first few minutes as the Beavers outrebounded the Knights 57 to 33 and snapped the cords on forty-three per cent of their shots from the floor.

George Jensen, who has been the big gun for City in recent games, once again came through with a solid performance. Jensen led the scoring with twenty-four points on six of eleven from the floor and twelve of thirteen from the foul line. He also ripped off fourteen rebounds.

Second high for the Lavender was Syd Levy with twenty points. Levy also dominated the backboards, snaring a game high total of twenty-four rebounds. Bob Bass was high gun for the Knights with twenty points—fourteen in the last quarter.

The Knight's captain, Leo Saldinger opened the scoring on a drive, after grabbing the center tap. After two foul shots by Jensen tied the score, Don Hill pumped in a jump shot to give the Queensmen their final lead.

A three-point play by Jensen at the two minute mark gave City its first lead at 5-4. Another Syd Levy taps in a two-pointer, as Queen's Don Hill defends. George Jensen (3) and Carl Hochman (9) get set for rebound that never came.

New Haven RR Leads Coed From Nob Hill to Broadway

By PETER FRANKLIN

A trip to Boston to see a friend led to a role in a Broadway play for Lieselotte Singer, an upper sophomore at the College.

During January intersession Lee got a part in, "The Ponder Heart," which was making its trial run in Boston.

Knowing that shows, as they go from town to town, pick up extras, Lee auditioned for a part. Much to her surprise and pleasure, she got the part of a spectator in the court room scene of the play. She was also made understudy for Helen Quarrier, who plays the part of Treva in the show.

Lee, whose talents run from being a sandle maker in a leather goods shop in Greenwich Village, to a dramatics counselor during the summer, is now appearing in the play on Broadway.

In addition to her performing on Broadway, Miss Singer is active at the College. Last term she played the lead part in Dramsoc's production of "Hello Out There." She also serves as a reader to one of the blind students at the College.

Lee, who was born in Vienna, came to the United States in 1938. She attended the High School of Fashion Industries in New York City, where she majored in Fashion Design.

Upon graduation, she entered the Baruch School of Business, where she spent one term there before switching to the School of Liberal Arts.

Now that she finally has her feet on the Broadway stage she's aiming high—in more ways than one—her secret ambition is to play Peter Pan.

Jerry Cook, an upper senior, will represent the College with a paper on "The Purification of Germanium." The paper previously won a contest at the College.

Joseph Heindel, chairman of the convention committee and past president of ASME, plans a tour through the Tech School's facilities for the out-of-towners. Refreshments will be served and a satirical color film, "A Day in the Life of a Mechanical Engineer" will be shown.

ASME consists of over 50,000 Mechanical Engineers throughout the United States. One hundred eighty students comprise the City College branch, which features lectures by men in the field and various social events as part of their regular term program.

Bio Magazine Reveals Rare Walking Plant

The coming issue of the Biology Review will publish an account of a newly discovered microscopic plant that spends its life crawling up and down Christmas trees.

The discovery was made by Joan Eiger, a senior, and Professor Joseph J. Copland (Biology), while they were working together on a project sponsored by the Biology Department.

The plant is a species of clubmoss and was found on a field trip into one of the particularly noxious swamps in New Jersey.

The rare piece of greenery was named X Lycopodium copalandii in honor of Dr. Copland.

The complete scientific details of the discovery will appear in the next issue of the Biological Review, which will appear on or about March 1. The magazine will cost twenty-five cents.

Taylor Tackles Dinner, Foes, With Equal Relish

By BERT ROSENTHAL

Wrestling teammates of Al Taylor, the College's outstanding pound competitor, may kid Taylor about the vast amount of food he consumes at the dinner table, but Al's performances on the mats, certainly cannot be derided.

Taylor, regarded as the team member with the largest appetite, also the Beavers' biggest winner. He has stolen the spotlight headlines this season because of the overwhelmingly easy manner with which he has handled his mat foes. As a matter of fact, Taylor ended his varsity wrestling career Saturday with consecutive victories to his credit.

The last time Taylor suffered a dual meet setback was Feb-

Al Taylor

Fe, Fi, Fo, Fum . . .

ary 12, 1955, when he yielded to a Kings Point man. Thereafter, his rise to the heights of the wrestling ladder was astronomical. The following week, he overthrew his NYU opponent and included that season with a pin against Brooklyn Poly.

When the 1955-56 wrestling season opened, Taylor continued his "pinning" mastery. His individual five meets produced five successive wins as a result of his amazingly rapid times.

On no occasion was he ever extended beyond the second period. Ironically, the pin skein was halted by a Kings Point man, February 16. The Mariner staved off Taylor's aggressive offensive finishing tactics, and held the Beaver matmen to a 17-7 decision.

Credits Coach, Brother

Taylor credits his veteran mentor, Professor Joe Sapora, with developing him into a winning wrestler and a respected individual. "The coach," says Taylor, "cares more about the individual than the team winning. He would rather teach each man sportsmanship and leadership even in a losing cause."

On a par with Sapora in the development of Taylor has been his brother Irv, who wrestled at the College in 1941, for the evening Session squad. "If it wasn't for my brother, Irv, I wouldn't be on the wrestling team today. He was the one who advised me to be a wrestler."

An unusual twist of fate occurred in 1954, when Al, after completing his first varsity year, entered the Junior Metropolitan Championships. He was performing right well, until . . . he was matched with his brother Irv in the quarterfinals and was eliminated!

Undaunted by this setback,

Taylor returned last year to capture the first place trophy in the 136½ pound class. Further mementoes of his brilliant career include: a first place triphy for the New York Developmental Tournament; a first place award for the Junior Olympics; a first place trophy in this year's New England Amateur Athletic Association Union tourney; and a fourth place medal for last season's Senior Metropolitan Championships.

"Through wrestling," quotes Taylor, "I have gained self-assurance and developed poise. It is one of the best conditioning sports there is."

Al may be dissatisfied with the rigorous dieting problems wrestling presents in keeping his weight down and physical stamina in fact, but the sport of wrestling and the College in particular, are more than gratified that he has found a happy medium.

By the way, what's next on the menu . . . wrestling menu, that is?

Letters

Rhythm Revisited

This letter concerns one of your news articles of February 14, 1956. It supposedly was to announce the advent of a new dancing lounge, but it read more like an abuse on "Rock and Roll" music.

First of all I would like to clear up some terminology. This music isn't called "Rock and Roll" music by anyone except some silly disc jockey, Alan Freed. It is Rhythm and Blues. "Rock and Roll" is two years old, Rhythm and Blues 200 years old.

True, on first hearing some of it may sound a bit loud and some of it may actually be just plain loud. But, it offers so much in the way of vocal and group harmonization, rhythm and soulful music done by unadulterated artists that to reject it as a whole is just plain ignorant.

Rhythm and Blues never will be appreciated by everyone, but neither is anykind of music. But, before one rejects it, one should take time out to listen carefully to the better R & B before one passes judgment.

Mermen Down Brooklyn In Season's Final Meet

By BARRY MALLIN

Led by Jimmy Johnsen's three wins, the College's swimming team coasted to a 51-33 victory over Brooklyn Poly Tech, Saturday night at the Tech pool. This was the last dual meet of the season for the Beavers, and the win enabled them to conclude the campaign above the 500 mark, five wins and four setbacks.

Johnsen, most consistent scorer on the team, paced the attack where she spent one term 440 yard freestyle events. He will be the mermen's main hope in the Met Championships this week.

Richie Silverstein, Jerry Lopatin, and Shelly Manspeizer also contributed to the Lavender cause with victories in the 50 yard freestyle, 200 yard backstroke and 200 yard breaststroke, respectively.

City jumped off to a quick lead with triumphs in the first three contests, and before the Engineers could catch their breath, they were on the short end of an 18-5 score.

The Techmen came to life momentarily with successive victories in the 200 yard individual medley and the diving event. This was short-lived, however, as the Beavers broke the meet wide open with wins in the next four races to clinch the triumph.

With the outcome of the contest already decided, Brooklyn easily gained the last event, the 400 yard freestyle relay.

On Friday and Saturday the mermen will climax the season, when they take part in the Met Championships at the New York University pool.

Matmen Edge Warriors; Taylor Stays Unbeaten

Tick-tock, tick . . . a mere one and a half seconds. That was the margin of difference as the College's wrestling team eked out a dramatic 16-14, victory over East Stroudsburg State Teachers College Saturday in the flood-ridden Pennsylvania city.

With one bout remaining on the customary eight event program, the score was 13-12 in favor of the Beavers. The Lavender needed only to tie to assure a triumph, while a decision or a pin would have swung the tide in favor of the Warriors.

Senior heavyweight Jimmy Zoubandis, who was suffering from a shoulder injury, was pitted against Stroudsburg's Andrew Gall. Zoubandis gained a temporary early lead, but a belated third period rally by Gall evened the score at 8-8.

In wrestling, however, a point is awarded to a wrestler if he "rides" (holds top position) on an opposing matman for a minute or more than his opponent "rides" him. According to the official timeclocks, Zoubandis had accumulated two minutes, seventeen and a half seconds of "riding time," while Gall held the upper hand for three minutes and sixteen seconds. Thus, when the stirring bout ended 8-8, each team received two points for a draw decision, and the Beavers clinched an exciting 16-14 win.

The victory provided the winners with a 4-4 record for the season, the highest standard that the College's grapplers have attained since the 1950-51 campaign, when they also finished with the same mark.

Seniors Finish Strong

Two other Beavers completed their varsity wrestling careers in a blaze of glory. Captain Sal Sorbera won his gruelling 123 pound match, 5-3, from "Spike" Petrino, and 130 pounder Al Taylor climaxed an undefeated intercollegiate campaign with an 11-6 decision over Don Gravera. Taylor's unbeaten streak is actually nine straight; seven this year (he did not wrestle at Temple) and includes two pins he registered at the end of last season against his NYU and Brooklyn Poly adversaries.

Other point producers for the Beavers were Sonny Golia, with

The College's fencing team scored a 15-12 victory over Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) Saturday at Cambridge for the Engineers, who have won five.

Elliot Mills, the College's star saberman, paced the Beavers with victories in each of his three bouts, extending his winning streak to fourteen.

Going into the final round, the Lavender led 12-6. It clinched the victory in the foil division, when captain Morton Glasser and Joel Wolfe scored successive victories.

The Beavers won seven of the nine foil bouts. Glasser won all three of his matches, while Wolfe and Paul Tannenbaum each took two out of three.

Not to be outdone, the sabermen, led by Mill's three straight, also won seven of nine contests. Marty Wertlieb and Manny Fineberg also were undefeated, each winning two.
