

OBSERVATION POST

Welcome!

We're not really like this, though sometimes the pressure of putting out a newspaper makes it seem so. Actually, that's part of the pleasure of journalism, the excitement of being on the spot and part of the scene. But we also like to write with accuracy, clarity, and vividness; we want to serve the College; and we're looking for people who want the same things. If you are interested in writing, art, photography or business (or think you might be) come to our candidates' class today at 12:15 PM in the Observation Post office, Room 336 Finley Student Center. We'll be glad to see you, and we think you'll enjoy working for us.

Two Day Music Festival to Be Held Dec. 20, 21

By MICHAEL SPIELMAN

A two-day long semi-annual music festival will be initiated at College this semester.

The program, sponsored by the Music Department, will be presented entirely by the students of the faculty. It will be held in Jerome K. Aronow Concert Hall on Thursday and Friday, December 20 and 21. This is the first such extensive music program ever to be inaugurated at College.

According to Professor Fritz Yahoda (Music) the main purpose of the festival is to provide opportunity for students at College to listen to "live" music.

All music courses meeting those two days will be held in Aronow Hall. However, the concerts will be open to anyone on the college campus. Professor Yahoda emphasized that the festival will be different from the Thursday afternoon concerts by presenting "more standard" works, while the Thursday concerts feature "lesser known and rarely heard compositions."

The City College orchestra and chorus will perform in the festival as well as smaller ensembles such as the City College Faculty String Quartet, and individuals. Works to be performed will include art songs, sonatas, chamber music and concertos.

Professor Yahoda noted that the festival will culminate the College's musical activity for the semester. It will come soon after the orchestra and chorus' semi-annual concert at Town Hall.

Varied Music
The festival will be held from 9 AM-5 PM on both days. The programs will be varied so as to relate as much as possible to the different music courses at the College. "Of course," Professor Yahoda added, "we can't do this in the case of all the music courses. We couldn't expect to put on a Wagner opera for the Opera class, but we'll try to have related music wherever possible."

Anyone at the College may perform in the program. Those who wish to do so should contact either Professor Yahoda, or Professor Jack M. Shapiro (Music).

Senior Notes...

A Senior Yachting Party will take place on September 29, from 8 PM to midnight. Tickets for the moonlight cruise up the Hudson may be obtained in Room 223 Finley from 12-2 PM. They are priced at $3.50 a couple with a class card and $4 without a card.

The Senior Class will hold a formal dance at the St. Moritz Hotel on December 15. Tickets, priced at $14 a couple with a class card and $15 without a card, may be obtained in Room 223 Finley. A floor show and dinner are included, plus free coffee at every table.

Seniors wanting their pictures taken for Microcosm may make their appointments in Room 223 Finley on Thursday from 12-2 PM.

SC Hits Brooklyn College For Suspension of Student

By RALPH DANNHEISSER

Student Council last night drafted a letter to be sent to Brooklyn College, criticizing that school's administration for their alleged "violation of due process and academic freedom" in its suspension of student Arthur Steier. The resolution to send a letter passed 13-1.

Steier, a senior, was suspended from classes for the term on Friday, in what the "Brooklyn College Kingsman," undergraduate newspaper, called "a verdict—without—a—trial situation."

Steier had been an outspoken critic of the administration at Brooklyn and its policies, and had been suspended once before, from March-September 1955 for his anti-administration statements.

In a letter sent to Steier on Friday, Dean of Students Herbert Stroup gave as the reason for his suspension "continued disregard for the rules and regulations of Brooklyn College, . . . continued indulgence in untruthful statements about College officers and the College, and (his) patent unwillingness to heed the injunction of the College."

Steier was notified of his right to appeal his suspension to Brooklyn College President Harry D. Gideonse. The President subsequently turned down his appeal.

SC's letter, which will be printed in the "Kingsman's" edition tomorrow decries "the lack of specific charges" against Steier, and the absence of "a fair hearing at which he (would have) had the opportunity to answer the charges against him and to submit the testimony of witnesses."

In a separate, unanimous resolution, Council voted that a delegation from SG appear before the next meeting of Brooklyn's Student Executive Council, to "make known our views" on the suspension.

Previous to his current suspension, Steier had been notified by Dean Stroup on June 11, of his ineligibility for "officership or membership in any student organization." Stroup had cited "obvious and significant deficiencies" in Steier's record "in the area of organizational adjustment." This lack of adjustment, the letter explained, was "to the policies and procedures of students and faculty" followed at Brooklyn.

According to Steier, his suspension resulted from his continued efforts to have a system of schoolwide elections for Student Government instituted at the college. At present, the Student Executive Council at Brooklyn is composed of representatives of the various clubs.

This term, Steier was to assume the Presidency of Students for Campus Democracy, an organization formed, according to Steier, "to fight for a more democratic Student Government and for direct student representation." He interpreted his suspension as indicative that the administration "wanted me off campus so that I couldn't stir up anything" in regard to this issue.

Specific grounds given by President Gideonse in his reaffirmation of the suspension, Steier said, included his presence at a Brooklyn College Club Fair, in violation of his probation, and alleged "untruths" in Steier's statement to Kingsman after his suspension from extra-curricular activities.

The sole dissenting vote in the Council decision came from Abe Habenstreit, Class of '59 representative. Habenstreit later explained that although he agreed in principle with the purpose of the letter he objected to a particular paragraph which praised Steier as "a clear and persistent voice for a democratically elected Student Government at Brooklyn College."

"We have no information to prove whether Mr. Steier has been a 'democratic' voice, or not," Habenstreit said. "We are only in a position to object to the apparent infringement of academic freedom and due process by the Brooklyn College Administration."

Interviews . . .

Observation Post will interview candidates for the Student Faculty Committee on Student Activities (SFCSA) today at 2-5 PM in the OP office, Room 336 Finley Student Center. A statement of no more than 100 words may be submitted for publication, no later than 5 PM Tuesday.

Use of Lists Is Criticized By 2 Groups

The use of compulsory club membership lists in colleges has been attacked by both Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

At its city-wide convention held last Saturday at the Hotel New Yorker, the ADA adopted as part of its program on education the elimination of the lists at the municipal colleges.

The ACLU has also prepared a report in which the concept of membership lists comes under fire. The report, entitled "Academic Freedom and Civil Liberties of Students" is to be released within two weeks.

The ADA resolution called for "the elimination of onerous conditions for the chartering of student political and religious organizations, including requiring such organizations to file lists of members." The motion was introduced at the convention by Bart Cohen, representative of the now off-campus chapter of Students for Democratic Action at the College.

Cohen, who is also chairman of Student Governments' Civil Liberties Committee, saw in the passage of the motion "another voice raised to condemn the forcing of students to reveal their political and religious affiliations."

Alumni Association To Donate Journalism Awards Annually

By DAVE GROSS

The Alumni Association will present journalism awards for distinguished achievement in news coverage, feature writing, and total writing to students.

For photographs, series of articles, special issues, or unusual typographical layouts will be made if the Board of Judges feels an award is warranted.

The "Journalism Awards of the City College Alumni Association" has been created to encourage the continuing of the high journalistic standards at the College. The entries will be judged on the basis of journalistic enterprise, significance, professionalism and adherence to high ethical standards.

The Alumni Association states that many alumni have attained distinction in the field of professional journalism despite the lack of a "School of Journalism." Much of the credit, the Association states, must go to the "high quality of instruction" in the courses offered and to the "training opportunities which our undergraduate newspapers afford students."

Injustice

There are times when we would rather not admit association with Brooklyn College through even the vague municipal ties that bind us. Such a time has now arrived.

The heavy-handed administration of President Gideonse ("administration" is the technical term; "reign" might do just as well) has often seen fit to slap down any feeble student struggles for a measure of independence. The latest, and most offensive blow, is the suspension from school of Arthur Steier, a student who had the audacity to question the status quo.

Steier has been trying for a long time to reform the archaic setup of Brooklyn College's Student Council, which represents clubs rather than the student body. The Administration, in the form of Dean Herbert Stroup, Dean of Students, suspended him in June for "obvious and significant deficiencies" in his conduct—so glaringly obvious that they did not specify them. His chief deficiency seems to have been a blindness to the virtues of the present system there.

We find it necessary to speculate on the qualities in Steier that angered the Dean because they are only hinted at, and might, indeed, fit anyone the college took exception to. Perhaps they keep these interestingly vague descriptions for just that purpose.

After his suspension, he dared to give an interview to the newspaper, the Kingsman, which the Administrator's found "untruthful." He also was alleged to have "helped out" at a Club Fair, and this was interpreted as a dastardly breaking of his suspension. Thus he has been suspended from school. As before, the Administration has surrounded itself of platitudes and generalities as thick as a smoke-screen and just about as substantial. They find Steier "mal-adjusted," poor fellow. Everyone at Brooklyn is so smartly in step, so bubbling with good adjustment, and Steier can't manage it. At City College, he might only be advised to try a Guidance Counselor; at Brooklyn, an institution scornful of such frivolities, he got suspended.

If President Gideonse can do this to a student on such grounds with impunity, then all we can do is await his coronation. But if, as we suspect, there are people higher up with ideas of elementary fair play, then Steier will be restored to the campus he has tried to improve . . . his grievous error. We call upon the Board of Higher Education to prove that the vast difference of ethical standards between campuses can be shortened. We don't say that it can happen here—but it must not be allowed to happen anywhere.

Thanks

There are times in a student journalist's life when, cramming for an exam with a printing press booming in his ear, or pursuing a grimly silent Dean, or looking over copy at midnight with reddened eyes and trembling fingers, he wonders what madness impels him. He is seldom praised for a good story, but often hounded for a misspelling in a club note.

The truth is, we like to write, and we like to feel part of the College. But it is gratifying to feel some public interest in us, too. With this in mind, we heartily thank the Alumni Association and our old friends, the Public Relations Department, for their interest made tangible in journalism awards. We look forward to professional evaluation of our work. With this in mind, even the dawn vigils will seem shorter.

Sabre Blues

By Lew Egol

The three hustlers headed out the South Campus gate toward Lewisohn Stadium. One would never have known they were together but for one thing; each of the three carried a large collection box in his arms.

The largest box was cradled in the bosom of a student with a big letter "C" on his forehead. He was a monstrous large thing, with hamlike hands, darting eyes, and an enormous mouth, which remained open all the time.

His two compatriots were less easily recognized. The smaller of the two is best described as sad and reflective, with deep brown eyes and a crewcut. He hardly seemed aware of the presence of the others.

The third hustler had lupine features and, in a scabbard which dangled from his hip, he carried a long sabre.

"Big C" spoke first. "Let's get to the room quick and count the loot."

The three ducked into the side entrance of the Stadium and wended their way through the damp halls to Room 12. Once inside they locked the door and emptied the contents of the three boxes onto a table. A trickle of saliva curled from a corner of "Big C's" mouth as he ran his fingers through the money on the table. "Count it, my friends," he ordered the others.

The lupine one smirked, "count it yourself."

An expression of deep hurt clouded the features of "Big C." "But I am chairman," he wailed.

Sad and reflective lifted his drowsy countenance. "Let's all count it, hey."

The counting was completed in a few moments, and the money, thirty ten dollar piles was pushed to a corner of the table.

"Now what do we do," "Big C" asked.

"You're the chairman," replied the lupine one.

"Touche" added sad and reflective.

The chairman continued, "Sixteen hundred dollars short and only one day left, what can we do with three hundred bucks."

"Maybe we can buy him a kangaroo and say he got it in Australia," spoke the lupine one.

"Who would believe us?"

"The big problem is steamship fare," offered the lupine. Now if we can chop the fare from $700 to $200 one way, we're in business.

"Excellent," agreed the chairman, and as a matter of fact, a friend of mine said he could rent us a boat for $250, only we'd have to navigate it ourselves."

"There must be someone in the College who can run a boat," assured sad and reflective. "Where can we get this boat."

"I don't know but I can find out; it's called the Adrian—no, the Andrea somethingorother."

"Like you said," spoke the lupine, "you're the chairman." "Maybe we should junk the whole idea, and give the dough to the Olympic Committee."

"Or to the Post's Stevenson-Kefauver Fund" suggested "Big C."

"I'm hungry," moaned sad and reflective.

"Good idea," said the lupine, "an Ed Lucia dinner and dance, the proceeds to go to the Fund."

"It's too late to plan any big stuff now," argued the chairman, and besides only my ideas are acceptable to this committee." He continued, "How about a duel, though."

"I can see it now," reflected the lupine drawing his sword from its scabbard. "Get two fencing team members to duel to the death, and have both take out insurance policies with Lucia as the beneficiary."

"Do you really think the Administration would go for that," queried sad and reflective.

"No, I guess we're really up against it," sighed "Big C."

"Wait a minute," shouted the wolfish one, "how about the alumni. They'll kick in a bundle."

Suddenly the atmosphere in the room changed. The sun shone again, and the damp air came alive with electricity.

"Big C" reached the phone first and began dialing the Alumni Association. "My Committee is truly a good one," he thought, "and I am a truly magnificent chairman. Verily, I am." "Tomorrow I shall start a 'White Mungwee' Fund." The lupine one ran for a pay phone waving his sword above his head. "And I shall call Barney Baruch." Oh, this is a great and glorious day, is it not."

Sad and reflective sat at the table, sad and reflective. Already the workers were setting up the nuclear reactor in the room. A tear fell as he realized that the Olympic games had ended three weeks past.

Hopi Tribe To Whoop It Up South Campus Auditorium

By MARSHA COHEN

There will be a brief Indian uprising on campus, Thursday, September 20. A group of Hopi Indians will be here then to perform of their ceremonial dances in the Aronow Concert Hall of the Student Center.

The program of ritual dances, sponsored by Student Government, will be performed under the guidance of M. W. Billingsley. Billingsley has lived with the Hopi tribe for the past thirty years. According to SG Treasurer Michael Horowitz, Billingsley is the only white man to be honored with the title of Hopi Chief.

The honor and the name "Mungwee" were conferred on Billingsley, according to Horowitz, because of the Hopi chief's crusade against government action to ban the native dances as "barbaric."

Included in the program, Billingsley says, is the first performance off the Hopi reservation of the tribes "Snake Dance." One of the group of Indians, according to Billingsley, will be performing their reservation for the first time to perform at The Col-le dances are symbolic representations of Hopi legends. Years of practice may be devoted to perfecting skill in a certain dance. Each movement is carefully rehearsed in order that the presentation be perfect in every detail.

Tickets, which can be obtained at the SG ticket bureau, Room 327 Finley, will be sold at the rate of fifty cents each.

For all those who are interested, there will be prizes awarded for the best posters advertising the show. The prizes consist of $50 worth of merchandise made by the Hopi Indians. The deadline for the competition is December 1. Details of the contest will be announced shortly by Professor Albert P. d'Andrea (Art).

Mr. Billingsley has appeared with the Hopi Indians at the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C., the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology in Toronto, Canada and other leading educational institutions.

SFFC...

Election of members to the Student Faculty Fee Commission (SFFC) will be held in Room 327 Finley Student Center tomorrow at 3 P.M. Representatives from clubs, organizations and publications will be elected.

Six Newspapers

Each spring the managing boards of the six undergraduate newspapers at the College will submit to the Board of Judges no more than two samples from the academic year's issues. Observation Post, The Campus, Main Events (the uptown center's evening publication), Tech News, and The Ticker and The Reporter, the downtown day and evening publications respectively of the Baruch School will each submit articles.

The Board of Judges, members of the Alumnus Magazine editorial advisory board are: Professor Irving Rosenthal '33 (English), Kalman A. Seigal '30, Assistant City Editor of The New York Times, Morton Yarman '34, Times staff member, Robert Stein '47, managing editor of Redbook, Bernard Roshco '50, Public Relations Department of the New York City Housing Authority, and I. E. Levine '46, Editor of the Alumnus Magazine.

Cash Awards

The awards will be presented in the form of scrolls in news coverage, feature and editorial writing, and in the special categories. In addition, the news, features and special award winners will receive a $25 prize. No cash award will be presented in the category of editorial writing.

A "Welcome Dance" for the Freshmen and a "Welcome Back Dance" will be the first affair of the Sophomore class tomorrow night at 8:30 PM in the Finley Student Center Ballroom.

Although no admission will be charged, an ID card must be presented for entrance.

According to Arthur Genen, Class President, one of the high spots of the evening will be a mambo and foxtrot contest. In order to be eligible to enter the competition, at least one of the partners must be a Freshman.

Free Tickets

The winners of this contest will receive free tickets to Cabaret '59, the Sophomore Prom, and major event of the Soph season, which will also be held in the Grand Ballroom. The exact date for the Prom will be announced later.

According to Anthony Calabrese, Class Treasurer, the Prom, complete with floor show, will be considerably cheaper than most College functions and "will not be the usual cut and dried affair."

Also planned for the semester are a Mystery Bus Ride to destinations unknown and, tentatively, a skiing and an ice skating party.

The officers of the Council feel they need more cooperation from the class members to carry out their plans successfully. At present, there are about ten chairmanships open. All members of the class of '59 are welcome at the meetings which are held on Thursdays at 12:30 P.M. in Room 121 Finley.

Booters Face USMMA In Season's Opener Sat.

By MARV GLASSBERG

Somebody had better warn the Mariners from Kings Point before they show up at Lewisohn Stadium on Saturday at 11 AM to do battle with the City soccermen. It's all around the Met Conference League that the champs for the past three years are no longer present.

But what they don't know is that this season's Beaver aggregation, if it employs the exceptionally fine teamwork seen at Hofstra last Saturday, will be just as troublesome as its predecessor.

The Lavender booters certainly looked impressive while whipping a listless Dutchmen squad, 6-0. The forward line, which can no longer depend upon power alone to run up a score, by use of very neat passing and much hustle, had no trouble breaking through the Hofstra defense. The attack will probably line

Mariner defenseman Ramsey Graham passed the ball back to the goalie for clearance. It was intercepted by one of the many mudholes decorating the field, and Westl sped in and slammed the ball into the nets.

It was Westl who tallied twice two years ago when City romped at the Stadium, 5-1. Co-captain Robert LeMestre, who is now a halfback, scored once in that fray.

Coach Harry Karlin
Uncertain

up with Novak Masanovich, who tallied four times last Saturday, at center forward. Co-captain Wolf Westl (one goal) will be the inside left and Billy Sund inside right. The wings will probably consist of a vastly improved Fred Bonnet on the right and Danny McErlain, who will need spelling because of his bad ankles, across the field.

Coach Harry Karlin cautiously declined to predict a victory over the Mariners because of the fact that they are always fast, rugged, and generally in superb condition. However, he feels that his defense will be able to cope with anything the speedy sailors ship up.

And what a defense! Hofstra found it difficult to gain possession of the ball and even harder to shoot for goal. Netminder Charley Thorne only had two easy shots come his way and fullback Fred Munters passed back to him twice for clearance.

At one time a CCNY-Kings Point soccer game meant the echoing of breaking bones in the autumn air. However, in recent years the referees have cautioned both sides against the use of strong-arm tactics and the finer points of the sport once again assumed major importance.

Last fall the Beavers trekked to the Point where they took a 1-0 decision. The goal came when

United States Fencing Champ To Enter CCNY Next Year

By NORMAN ZAFMAN

Sewall Shurtz, twenty-three year old United States Foil Champion and member of the present Olympic Fencing Team, has announced his intention to apply for admission to the College next September.

The fencing star, presently a Yeoman Third Class in the US Navy, gave as the reason for his decision a desire "to continue my fencing career under Ed Lucia, with whom I have been associated both personally and athletically for more than a year; and to study at an institution with educational standards as high as those at City College."

Shurtz has been a personal fencing student of the College's coach, Ed Lucia, since July, 1955.

Since word of his impending discharge from the Navy in December, Shurtz has been approached by the representatives of several colleges throughout the country, but his mind remains "firmly set" upon coming to the College.

Last spring Shurtz trained for the National Championships and Olympics at the College, doing his track work in Lewisohn Stadium and receiving lessons from Lucia along with members of the College's Varsity.

A native of Los Angeles, Shurtz began fencing as a small boy at the Faulkner School of Fencing in Hollywood. Since then he has attained heights rarely reached in American fencing. Presently the National Foil Champion, he captured the national epee title in 1954. At the 1955 Pan-American game in Mexico City, Shurtz placed second in epee, while he was a semifinalist in the World Championships held in Rome last October.

Coach Lucia, happily anticipating the "presence of the man who we all think will lead the way to US victories in Melbourne," said yesterday, "in view of the claim that big name athletes have a tendency to go to these colleges that offer certain inducements beyond the normal, it is most refreshing to know that the US Foil Champion has decided to come to City College solely for an education, both scholastically and athletically."

Holman To Circle Globe Study Athletic Program

The man who has been "Mr. Basketball" for the past three years has gone abroad to study the game.

Nat Holman, on sabbatical leave for the year (September 1956-August 31, 1957), left Tuesday for a four-month "pleasure trip which will enable me to visit different schools and universities in order to discuss the athletic programs, particularly the basketball setups."

May See Olympics

His main stopovers will include Paris, Munich, Vienna, Rome, Venice, Istanbul, Beirut, Pakistan, Thailand, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Japan, Hawaii, and San Francisco, before returning to New York sometime in January or February. Holman qualified this by stating, "I have 'open-ticket' arrangements with the airline, which permits me to get off the plane whenever and wherever I want to. Consequently, I may take a trip to Melbourne, Australia in November for the World Olympic Games."

Before he departed on Tuesday, the fifty-nine year old mentor dispelled any rumors that he would not return to the College at the expiration of his sabbatical leave. Holman stated, "When I applied for the sabbatical last September, it was with every intention of returning to the College to resume my normal teaching load and the basketball reins in 1957. So far, there has been nothing to change my plans."

Praises Beavers Hoopsters

Concerning the 1956-57 edition of the Beaver five, "Mr. Basketball" commented, "They should give an accreditable account of themselves, despite their having to play a tough schedule. They are an experienced, seasoned team, and will hustle and play together all the time." His parting words were, "I would like to extend my best wishes to M. (Dave) Polansky and the boys for a successful season."
