Suggested procedures for selecting student representatives on the Student Council and the Activities Committee have been rejected by SFCSA yesterday. Although the procedures were presented to SFCSA unanimously, the Student Faculty Committee on Wednesday, November 5, unanimously rejected the proposal.

Two student members of the committee, Sandra Rosenblum and Neil Grumer, declared that the plan is unacceptable because it overlooks the infeasibility of the plan. It was pointed out that the proposed method of voting would be time consuming and time consuming.

Teacher Criticizes New York
For Puerto Rican Conditions

By CHRIS HAMLIN

Education of Puerto Rican youth in New York is hampered by the conditions which they find when they arrive in this city, a specialist in education of Puerto Rican youth said at the College yesterday.

Speaking before the Education Society, Mrs. Mildred Garvin, who has been teaching in New York for 20 years, said that there is no defense for what we do to Puerto Rican children.

At present, four of the student members are elected in school-wide balloting, the President of SFCSA, who is in the fifth undergraduate member.

The only opposition against maintaining the same procedures was voiced by Prof. Podell, who described the existing system as "representation by default."
Youthful Creativity

A new opportunity is being offered to aspiring writers presently taking English 1 and 2 courses, the pre-prescribed composition courses. English 1 stresses correctness in grammar, diction, and structure and the aim of English 2 is improvement in organization, force and interest.

Students taking these fundamental courses often have their creative writing talent go unnoticed while students taking advanced English courses walk off with all the honors.

Observation Post, in an effort to give recognition to talented English 2 students will select for publication what it considers "to be the best theme of the month". The outstanding theme of the month will appear in print and we hope will serve very necessary purposes—that of giving well deserved recognition to the young writer and criticize the creative work of their peers.

The first theme will be published in next Tuesday's issue.

All-College Elections

The present system of direct elections on a college-wide basis of students to the Student-Faculty Committee on Student Activities (SFCSA) was reviewed and approved by the Committee yesterday.

The Committee on Composition of the English Department will submit the themes which in its evaluation deserve publication to Observation Post.

The outstanding theme of this month will appear in print and we hope will serve very necessary purposes—that of giving well deserved recognition to the young writer and also of giving students at the College the opportunity to read and criticize the creative work of their peers.

The first theme will be published in next Tuesday's issue.

Harriers Place Third In Met. Meet; Conclude Season With One Victory

By WARREN GREENBERG

The College’s injury-ridden Harriers third place in the CCNY Championships. Co-captain Mel Siegel, who took third place, prevented a sweep by Hunter.

The team scored for the meet were: Hunter, 21, Brooklyn 52, and Queens 85. Since this is the third time Hunter has won the meet, they got permanent possession of the Municipal College Cross-Country Trophy.

As the College counts all multiple meets as a series of dual contests, Wednesday’s activities were considered as two defeats and one victory on the season’s record.

The meet, following a season-long pattern, saw the Harriers hampered by injuries to key runners and by a series of bad breaks that cost the chance of retiring the cup themselves.

The leading Lavender runner John Rhodes, fractured his ankle in a recent meet with Adelphi and will not be able to run in indoor track for more than a month.

Coach Harry deGirolamo got bad breaks but it is not. It is an emphasis on running for the injuries and bad breaks.

The Beavers this year had only one junior and no returning letterman. Next year’s squad will have all of this season’s top men—Brief, Rohde, Siegel, and Weinless—plus Delgado and Thomas, as well as Delgado and Thomas, and Casey, Petillo, Mantrip, and Luster from the freshman squad. Many people forecast that on next year’s team, the Beaver’s seventh and eighth men will be able to break thirty minutes.

With all this, the Lavender victory might be “Wait till next year,” for the consensus that the meets with the College, Brooklyn Always Tough.

Looking back at this past season, ” said Coach deGirolamo, “we did as well as could be expected considering the breaks we had.”

“Looking back at this past season,” began Coach Harry deGirolamo, “we did as well as could be expected considering the breaks we had.”

“This season, the Lavender runners have his pick of last year’s top men. They have his pick of last year’s top men. The Lavender track team, even though it has lost Stan Dawkins, George Best, and Ralph Taylor, should be the class of the Collegiate Track Conference (CTC) this season. There will be a host of returning lettermen and Coach deGirolamo will have his pick of last year’s undefeated freshman team.

Although the Beaver’s season is officially over, some of the Harriers will compete in the CTC Cross-country Championships tomorrow. Among those slated to run are Mel Siegel and Dennis Clark.
