

Grads Here Now For Gala Reunion

By ED MARSTON

Two-hundred and fifty members of the Class of '34 will return to the College today for the largest reunion ever held here.

President Buell G. Gallagher has proclaimed the occasion "Class of '34 Day." He has called upon the College community to observe the day in gala fashion and welcome back its alumni on their silver anniversary.

The reunion will start at 3 PM with a tour of the College. For most of the alumni the trees and grass of the South Campus will be a new sight. In 1934 the College consisted only of the North Campus and the Baruch School.

The tour will be followed by cocktails and, at 7:30 PM, a dinner will be held in the Finley Center. The invocation will be delivered by Rabbi Sidney Bagner, '34. President Gallagher will give the keynote address.

Class Loyalty

Professor Herman Redisch (Speech), President of the class said, "I may be prejudiced but I think the large reunion is due to the especial loyalty the Class of '34 has toward the College. Another reason is the increased alumni awareness of the good they can do for their alma mater."

"It is fitting that the reunion is being held in the Finley Center. The Alumni Association played a large part in the establishment of the Center and financed the furnishings and decoration of Finley," Professor Redisch added.

Among the alumni expected to attend the reunion are: Dr. Jonas Salk, discoverer of the polio vaccine; David Schonbrun, Paris correspondent for CBS; Dr. Jerome

Visitor

Ariazar Eyashiv, executive secretary of the Israeli National Students Association, will speak tomorrow, at 12:30 PM at Hillel House on "meetings with and impressions of students throughout the world."

He was also invited by Student Government President Renee Roth and Lou Nushelsky to attend Student Council as a guest observer.

Mr. Elyashiv attended the University of Tel Aviv as a law student.

The deadline for applying for National Defense Student Loans is tomorrow. Applications are in be filed in Room 208 Shepard, with Dr. Arthur Taft, Veteran Administrator.

Expert To Speak On Labor Strife

The ever-widening use of arbitration to solve labor quarrels will provide the theme for the first in a series of Paul Abelson Public Lectures in Labor Relations.

Paul M. Herzog, executive vice-president of the American Arbitration Association, will be the speaker. He will deliver his speech on "The Growing Importance of Arbitration in the Settlement of Labor Disputes" tomorrow at 6:30 PM, in the Faculty Room of Shepard Hall.

Mr. Herzog has had first-hand experience in dealing with both labor and management. He has an impressive background in this area, being the former chairman of the National Labor Relations Board and among the original members of its New York counterpart, the New York State Labor Relations Board.

The speaker presided over the New York State Labor Relations Board, as its chairman for two years, from 1942 to 1944. Mr. Herzog also has served as Associate Dean of the Graduate School of Public Administration at Harvard University.

Prof. Oscar Zeichner, Associate Dean of the Graduate Division of the College of Liberal Arts and Science, which is sponsoring the lectures in conjunction with the Graduate Division of the Baruch School, anticipates an informal and "lively" talk. He pointed out that Mr. Herzog has been "involved deeply in labor problems in the last ten years."

Story on Festival Called Inaccurate

President Buell G. Gallagher branded as "completely misleading" an article stating that the United States Government favors student participation in the Vienna Youth Festival which appeared yesterday in The New York Times.

Under the headline "US Urges Youth To Go To Red Fete," The Times article alleged that the government is "quietly and unofficially encouraging the participation of able and thoroughly prepared American students in the Communist-dominated World Youth Festival in Vienna this summer."

President Gallagher further charged that this paragraph was "not substantiated by the story, and only partly justifies the misleading headline."

According to The Times report, this attitude is attributed to two sources. It is a "reflection of the good job" done by some young people at the last Festival in "describing the United States and its attitudes," and it is a "recognition of the fact that many young Americans will be going to Vienna during the festival (July 26 to August 4), whether the State Department approves or not."

Be Prepared

Students and youths who plan to go to Vienna are being advised, the article continued, "to prepare themselves . . . to handle a wide variety of questions on the United States, its internal conditions and foreign policies."

Student Government President Renee Roth contended that on the basis of correspondence she has read, the story "misrepresented the views of the State Department," and the headline stating that students were being "urged" to attend the festival was "not warranted."

President Gallagher noted that it might be "useful" if students of "exceptional maturity attended, who clearly understand the workings of Soviet imperialism, and are not in sympathy with Communist ideals."

Miss Roth added that "we owe it to those students who will attend to aid them in becoming articulate and impressive spokesmen for democracy. But we owe it equally to all American students to inform them of the Communist sponsorship of the festival and the disservice we would do to the College by official attendance."

She agreed with the State Department in referring interested students to the Independent Service for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival, in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Gloria Steiner, Director of the Independent Service, said that her group is not encouraging individuals to go to Vienna, but rather attempting to prepare those who will be there anyway.

Professional Propaganda

She explained that those attending should know that "this is not really a festival, but a highly professional propaganda event." They should, she added, "be capable of answering questions on all aspects of American life."

To this end, the Service is preparing fact sheets on the history of past Youth Festivals, and on American Society.

Elinor Miller, President of the City College Vienna Youth Festival Club, said she was "pleased" with the State Department position as outlined in The Times article. She added that "everybody should go to the festival if they can, but I personally would hope that they are mature and informed."

Educational Progress Scored by Africans

African Achievements in Education was the topic of discussion by three African speakers last night in the Finley Center.

Educational trends in East and West Africa were explained by three graduate students at Columbia: Nehemia Antipa of Kenya, Sunny Samuel Akpaidick of Nigeria and Mulugeta Wodajo of Ethiopia.

Though emphasizing the recent progress made by Africans, the speakers also noted some present outstanding shortcomings of their educational system. First among these is the lack of good teachers and local textbooks.

Philosophy of Religion To Be Theme of Talks

"Contemporary Philosophies of Religion" will supply the over-all theme of three lectures to be given at the College this term.

Prof. Yervant Krikorian (Philosophy) has announced the appearance of three experts in the field of religion. Of these three, one is a priest, the second a rabbi, and the third a naturalist.

On Thursday, April 2, Father Quentin Lower of Fordham University's Department of Philosophy will lecture at 12:45 PM.

The following week, Prof. Jacob Taubes of the Department of Religion at Columbia University, will speak here. On May 14, Prof. John H. Randall of Columbia University's Department of Philosophy will be at the College.

Dr. David Newton (Student Life) asserted that he is pleased to see that the facilities of the Finley Center are being used to such great advantage.

The series, Dr. Newton continued, is a result of the fine reception received by George F. Kennan earlier this term when he offered three lectures on United States-Soviet relations.

Music Department Offers First of Spring Concerts

The 1959 Spring Concert Series sponsored by the Music Department will begin tomorrow at 12:30 PM in Aronow Auditorium.

The first offering of the Department will be Wolf's "A Group of Songs" performed by Prof. Constantine Cassolas (Music), tenor, and Prof. Fritz Jahoda (Music) at the piano.

On the same program will be Brahms' "Trio for Violin, French Horn and Piano." The performance will be rendered by Professors Felix Gailmir and Fritz Jahoda (Music) at the violin and piano. Michael Kates, a student, will play the french horn.

Next Thursday, the Department will present Faure's "Sonata for Violin and Piano" and "Variations for Cello and Piano" by Mendelssohn.

Future presentations will include

Schumann's "Sonata for Violin and Piano in A Minor", and "Three Etudes for the Pedal Piano".

On Saturday, April 4, the Music Department will present The New York City Handel Festival sponsored by the Department of Commerce and Public Events.

On Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17, the College's Orchestra and Chorus under the direction of Prof. Jahoda will present its Spring Concert, including works by Beethoven, Bach and Haydn. Admission to these two concerts will be $1.25.

Admission to all other concerts in the series is free. The programs will be presented every Thursday until April 16.

Due Time

As some students have felt it their responsibility to contribute to the betterment of the College in certain areas not directly concerned with scholastic pursuits, so individual instructors have made a point of broadening their interests.

Professor Stewart C. Easton (History) has demonstrated again and again that he belongs in this latter group. His devotion to the College has been unselfish. But, more important, he has never deserted the ideals of academic freedom and respect for the student as a member of this country's "intellectual elite."

No pressure was ever great enough to silence Professor Easton. When he felt criticism of Student Government was justified he did not hesitate to offer it. That this report has been recognized as one of the most important and intelligent evaluations of SG to be presented in recent years is just another one of the laurels that have accrued to the Professor over the years he has been active at the College.

He has fought with undiminished ardor for the abolition of membership lists. For this mild-mannered, quiet-voiced spokesman for student liberties the going has not always been easy. But he has allotted most time and devoted most energy when it was desperately needed.

Last week Professor Easton, the faculty advisor of Observation Post and Student Government was honored as the third faculty member to receive the Alumni Association Faculty Service Award.

OP is proud to congratulate one of the great libertarians here. And there are no quotation marks around the word great.

Keyhole Conflict

There is really nothing separating the students and faculty of the College from the meetings of the General Faculty except locked doors. This group which is responsible for initiating policies affecting the entire College population believes that holding permanently closed meetings is a fair and just policy. We do not.

All legislative bodies have the right to close their meetings and go into executive session, at which time observers must leave. However, the General Faculty has worn out this privilege by constant use.

If the policies decided upon are to effect the College Community as significantly as they obviously do, certainly "interested parties" should have the opportunity to attend policy sessions.

This view was expressed by Professor Ephraim Cross (Romance Languages). In yesterday's Campus, the Professor was reported to have said, "Students and faculty members should know how and why rulings which affect them are passed." It is comforting that Professor Mark Brunswick (Chairman, Music) has also asserted his willingness, as a member of GF, to introduce a resolution for open sessions to the group.

We definitely urge that some action be taken to remove the completely unnatural barrier which has been placed between the outside world and this inner conclave.

Counter-Move

Several weeks ago Observation Post editorially took the stand that the idea behind the World Youth Festival is a good one, but it is a shame that the Festival is Communist-dominated. While objecting to the possibility of an official delegation being sent, we urged students to attend as individuals, with the knowledge that this is a Communist-dominated enterprise and therefore they should at all times be wary of what is happening.

Yesterday a story in The New York Times revealed that the United States Government has taken an identical position, for oriented, mature students to attend the Festival as individuals.

It would be ideal if an organization such as the National Student Association could sponsor a meeting of students from all over the globe. However, the next best thing is to infiltrate the existing Festival with counter-subversive elements and seek to neutralize it. Perhaps, in years to come, it can be turned to some useful purpose, one other than that for which the Communists have been using it: propaganda.

It is gratifying that the Government has taken the first step toward counter-infiltrating the Vienna Youth Festival. The reason they have not made it an official one should be obvious—after all, when have the Reds ever given official backing to their infiltration moves?

HOW TO BE A THUMPING BIG SUCCESS ON CAMPUS

While up in the attic last week hiding from the tax man, I came across a letter, yellow with age, that dear old Dad had sent me when I was a freshman. I reproduce it below in the hope that it may light your way as it did mine.

"Dear Son, (Dad always called me Son. This was short for Sonnenberg, which used to be my first name. I traded it last year with a man named Max. He threw in two outfielders and a left-handed pitcher... But I digress.)

"Dear Son, (Dad wrote)
"I suppose you are finding college very big and bewildering, and maybe a little frightening too. Well, it need not be that way if you will follow a few simple rules.

"First of all, if you have any problems, take them to your teachers. They want to help you. That's what they are there for. Perhaps they seem a little aloof, but that is only because they are so busy. You will find your teachers warm as toast and friendly as pups if you will call on them at an hour when they are not overly busy. Four a.m., for instance.

"Second, learn to budget your time. What with classes, activities, studying, and social life all competing for your time, it is easy to fall into sloppy habits. Set up a rigid schedule and stick to it. Remember, there are only 24 hours a day. Three of these hours must be spent in class. For every hour in class you must, of course, spend two hours studying. So there go six more hours. Then, as we all know, for every hour studying, you must spend two hours sleeping. This accounts for twelve more hours. Then there are meals—three hours each for breakfast and lunch, four hours for dinner. Never forget, Sonnenberg, you must chew each mouthful twelve hundred times. You show me a backward student, and I'll show you a man who bolts his food.

"But college is more than just sleeping, eating, and studying. There are also many interesting activities which you must not miss. You'll want to give at least three hours a day to the campus newspaper, and, of course, another three hours each to the dramatic and music clubs. And let's say a total of eight hours daily to the stamp club, the debating club, and the foreign affairs club. Then, of course, nine or ten hours for fencing and bird-walking, and another ten or twelve for ceramics and three-card monte.

"Finally we come to the most important part of each day—what I call 'The Quiet Time.' This is a period in which you renew yourself—just relax and think great thoughts and smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. Why Marlboro? Because they are the natural complement to the active life. They have better 'makin's'; the filter filters; the flavor is rich and mellow and a treat to the tired; a boon to the spent, a safe harbor to the storm-tossed. That's why.

"Well, Sonnenberg, I guess that's about all. Your kindly old mother sends her love. She has just finished putting up rather a large batch of pickles—in fact, 350,000 jars. I told her that with you away at school, we would not need so many, but kindly old Mother is such a creature of habit that, though I hit her quite hard several times, I could not dissuade her.

Keep 'em flying,
Dad."

Here's more advice to freshmen—and upperclassmen too. If non-filter cigarettes are your pleasure, double your pleasure with Philip Morris, made by the makers of Marlboro.

Queen Finalists to Be Selected

By RENEE COHEN

Little more than sixty hours, a group of forty anxious hopeful coeds will be reduced to five excited finalists in the traditional House Plan Carnival Queen Contest.

Forty girls will join in a procession before five judges at the Carnival Queen Ball held on Friday night in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor. The main event of the evening, the aspiring throng will be judged by chats with the judges. Conversations will be the basis for a personality judgment, one of the tests the girls will face.

Judges and Wives

Chabon, of the Board of Directors of the House Plan, Mrs. Joan Newton, wife of David Newton (Student), and Mrs. Evelyn Brownstein, Irwin Brownstein (Student) will judge the contest, along with others yet to be chosen. Outgoing incumbent Esther views her departure with mixed sentimental reminiscence.

Her opinion of exactly being the Carnival Queen was simply, "I don't know how to express it in words. It's so hard to describe," she said.

Hechler confessed that she had the intention of entering the contest before she did. "I had a crush on my boyfriend," she explained. "He said that I could win and he would be sure to support me."

Hechler received what she termed a dream-trip to the contest in addition to a week-end trip to Placid. "I had a great time," she said.

Among the two-score entrants in the contest is Roberta Rovner, upper Freshman. "I do not really consider this a contest, but a much sought-after chance to be in the limelight," Miss Rovner declared.

'Far From Mind'

"It's really quite far from my mind," she continued, "that I would be picked from among all the girls. Actually though, I think we all have an equal chance."

Most of the girls confessed the natural fears and painful but pleasant anticipation connected with the contest.

The Ball will feature, in addition to the contest, the music of Hal Etkin and his twelve-piece orchestra and the folk singer, Oscar Brand.

About 350 or 400 couples are expected to attend the fete, according to Harold Kellerman, Chairman of the Carnival Queen Ball committee. Tickets are $4 per couple and are obtainable in the House Plan Office, Room 326 Finley. Reservations for tables can be made by leaving a $5 deposit.

A Quarter of a Century

By Morton Yarmon

Morton Yarmon, '34, Assistant Managing Editor of "Parade Magazine," recalls some equally successful classmates in this prewrite of "Class of '34 Day."

"And so we come to the end of our story," began the final paragraph of the history of the class of 1934 in its Microcosm. This is how the paragraph ended:

"And most of us realize that when we have our diplomas clutched tightly in our hands, with the shrill cry of our freshman days — thir-r-r-t-e-e-e — four-r-r — this w-a-a-a-y — still ringing in our ears, we will wonder which way to turn next."

Which way did they turn? After twenty-five years, the question is about to be answered. City College is about to learn what directions the 1,554 bewildered boys and girls of '34 took.

Silver Jubilee

First event in a series to mark the silver jubilee of the '34 class takes place today, which has been designed "Class of '34 Day" by President Buell Gallagher. Festivities start at 3 PM, when those who can come early are invited to a tour of the expanded campus. Reception and cocktails are set for 6 o'clock at the Finley Student Center, then dinner.

Here, boys and girls turned into men and women will get their first large-scale glimpse of what a quarter-century has wrought. They will eye each other shyly, blinking in half-recognition, as if a bright light suddenly had been shined in their eyes. Then, in the warmth of reminiscence, they will find how readily the years shorten. By the end of the evening they will feel as if graduation were only yesterday.

The first order of business will be the question, "And what happened to So-and-so?" And the first name to come with pride to the lips will be Salk, Jonas Salk, whose exploits with the microscope would bring enough fame to a brace of classes, not one class alone. But other names will come up, too, and it will be an evening brimming with pride.

Before it ends, they will learn that their classmates have made contributions in many ways and in many places. They have served in all branches of the armed forces and in all theaters, and they are still serving. Among those still in uniform are two lieutenant colonels, US Army, and a colonel in the army of Colombia, South America. The wheels of government couldn't spin without the Class of '34 — and that means city, state and federal governments, for members are in all branches and at all levels.

Successful Alumni

The class of '34 is found in the rabbinate and in the ministry, in the FBI, the post office and the police department. A good sized university could be staffed from those on college faculties, and the list of school principals is a long one. Lawyers, doctors, dentists, accountants and pharmacists abound. On the roster are a podiatrist, the owner of a shirt factory, a law librarian, several camp directors, an editor of a national magazine, the headmaster of a private school, a distributor for a famous soft drink and the manager of a missile project.

Stories about college days, and of the years since, will be swapped through the evening, then continued at other events scheduled throughout the jubilee year, including the homecoming celebration in May, commencement in June, and the alumni dinner in November, at which the '34 class will be honored.

Herman S. Redisch is class president, with four vice presidents; Harold J. Kaufman, Technology; Charles Reichman, Business; Oscar Rosencranz, Education, and Harold A. Winson, Liberal Arts.

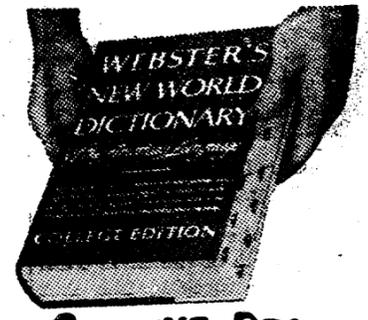

Other Officers

Other officers are Nathaniel Drabkin, Recording Secretary; Alexander Seelig, Corresponding Secretary; Sigmund I. Dreilinger, Membership Secretary; Alfred Klein, Treasurer.

Also Paul Bauman, Gift Committee Chairman; Stanley H. Borak, Anniversary Dinner Chairman; Edward Davis, Class Information Editor; Robert P. Altman, Historian; Sidney M. Bogner and M. Dennis Lee, Chaplains; Thomas V. Challenger, Homecoming Committee Chairman.

All-Met...

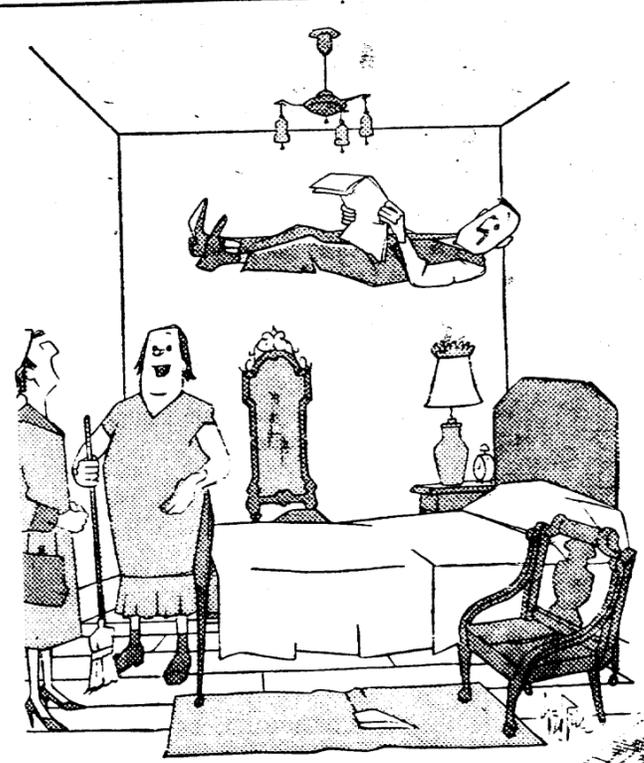

Hector Lewis, the College's 6-5 center, was named to the small college all-city second team Monday by the Met Basketball Writer's Association. Lewis led the Beavers in rebounding and was second in scoring.

Philosophy and Tennis? 'Why Not?' Says Prof.

By BERNIE LEFKOWITZ

(This is the third in a series on faculty members who pursued active athletic careers during their undergraduate days.)

Did Ty Cobb worry about original sin when he stole a base?

Does Pancho Gonzalez fret about first cause when he aces an opponent?

Could Immanuel Kant go to his right?

Simply: Can a fleet ballhawk or an agile tennis player be a philosopher?

"Yes!" says Professor Daniel J. Bronstein, Chairman of the Philosophy Department for the last six years and an ardent netman and fan for more than thirty.

"Definitely yes," Professor Bronstein reaffirmed, "when I attended the College I played tennis in the tennis because he could play on a day-to-day basis without having to "worry about cracking a nine-man lineup like a baseball team. "In tennis I could play a man-to-man game and I enjoyed that type of competition tremendously," he said.

Ton Cannonball Service

"It's funny," he continued, "the thing that stands out in my mind most about my tennis experience is playing against some guy from Fordham who had this wicked twist on his serve.

"I always had trouble with tough serves," Professor Bronstein admitted, "but I had a pretty good cannonball myself."

The versatile athlete also played baseball in the sandlot ranks. "But I was never good enough for college ball."

Tennis and philosophy are not a curious juxtaposition according to the athlete-prof. "I think sports like tennis and golf are fine for the scholastically-inclined youngster," he observed. "I would love to see more emphasis placed on these sports in our phys ed curriculum here.

"Besides those are sports that you can continue with long after you're out of college."

However, he has had plenty to do since receiving his BA in 1928. Now he is equally charming and robust as a host of a Philosophy Society tea or completing a brisk hike and an exhausting mountain-climbing stint near his Adirondack summer resort home.

afternoon, studied in the morning, and was captain of the chess team at night—or something like that at least."

His philosophical interests never seemed to interfere with his net game, for the lean, still spry-looking teacher competed for three years in the intercollegiate ranks.

"We never had a championship team," the professor recalled, "but I enjoyed it enough to become tennis coach for six years from 1936 on."

When his undergraduate days ended, Dr. Bronstein's net career was not finished. He participated in the sport until a few years ago when he was hampered by a bur-sitis condition.

THINKKLISH

English: SLOW-WITTED BASEBALL PLAYER

Thinklish translation: The guys who patrol the fences on this man's team include a slugger (cloutfielder), a braggart (shoutfielder) and a sorehead (poutfielder)—reading from left field to right. The clod in question—a loutfielder—rarely breaks into the line-up. He thinks RBI is the second line of an eye chart. But he's no doubtfielder when it comes to smoking. He goes all out for the honest taste of fine tobacco . . . the unforgettable taste of a Lucky Strike!

English: POLICE STATE

HOW TO MAKE $25

Take a word—institution, for example. With it, you can make an aquarium (finstitution), a bowling alley (pinstitution), a fireworks factory (dinstitution) or a saloon (ginstitution). That's Thinklish—and it's that easy! We're paying $25 for the Thinklish words-judged best—your check's itching to go! Send your words to Lucky Strike, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, N.Y. Enclose your name, address, university and class.
