The First Secretary of the French Embassy and advisor to the Security Council will speak before the Government and Law Society tomorrow at 12:25 PM in Room 106 Wagner.

Mr. Jean-Francois Roux will discuss his Algerian experiences and his nation's policy with regard to Algeria.

College Commemorates John Dewey Centennial

John Dewey, one of the foremost educators of our time, will be honored by the College tomorrow at the first of two programs commemorating the centennial of his birth. The programs are entitled "John Dewey Today."

The world-famous philosopher's controversial theories will be discussed by Dr. Mason W. Gross, President of Rutgers University, who will discuss "John Dewey and Enemies" in Aronow Auditorium at 12:30 PM.

Charles Frankel, Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University, will evaluate the effectiveness of new approaches to education created by Dewey when he speaks on "John Dewey: Legacy." Certain groups contend that educational fads and frills are due to Dewey, according to Prof. Herbert Park Beck (Education) Chairman of the President's Special Committee on the John Dewey Centennial which is co-sponsoring the programs. "They use Dewey as a shield," he said.

Dr. Gross is "very outspoken" in attacking groups opposed to Dewey, the Chairman said. Prof. Frankel is interested in "wonderful things Dewey has done for us," Prof. Beck said.

A special student panel has been organized to question both Dr. Gross and Prof. Frankel at the conclusion of their talks. Students in the audience will also have an opportunity to bring up questions concerning John Dewey.

The second program honoring Dewey will take place on Thursday, November 12 at 8:30 PM in Aronow Auditorium. Four distinguished educators are scheduled to speak.

The Colleges Chapter of the American Association of University Professors is co-sponsoring the programs along with The President's Special Committee on the John Dewey Centenary.

Two Former Members Of Sorority Tell Story of Sorority Discrimination

Two former members of Sigma Tau Delta (STD) told yesterday of the sorority meeting at which, they said, an 18-year-old Negro girl was "undoubtedly" denied the privilege to pledge because of her race.

"The three sisters who blackballed her said nothing about her personality during the discussion on whether she should be accepted as a pledge," said Myra Gladstone, a lower junior.

"They didn't even get to know her—they didn't make any attempt to know her during the rushes," added Beverly Lynton, a lower sophomore.

The two girls were interviewed after they had attempted unsuccessfully to see President Buell G. Gallagher to discuss with him their version of what had occurred at the meeting. Statements by members of the administration had indicated, the girls said, that there was some doubt the Negro co-ed was rejected because of her race.

Miss Lynton and Miss Gladstone also said they had intended to present to Dr. Gallagher "some indications" that some members of the sorority excluded non-Jewish names when mailing out invitations to freshmen to attend open rushes.

The girls said they had sought to reach the President at about 12 Noon yesterday, but were informed by a secretary that he was "gone for the day." They said they would attempt to speak to him today.

Another former sorority member, Rebecca Patt, who says she probably will rejoin the organization, told Observation Post yesterday in a separate interview that she had resigned "because it was my personal assumption the girl was rejected because of her race."

Miss Patt, who declined to comment in detail on the meeting on the grounds she could not remember all of the discussion and disclosure would violate sorority policy, added:

President Buell G. Gallagher
To Get Story

"I assume this was the reason on the basis of the discussion. Apparently some people felt her race merited discussion, and it was brought up."

The Negro co-ed also was questioned yesterday, but declined comment. The girl, whose name is being withheld, was asked to relate how she was informed she was not accepted, but she declined, explaining:

"I don't want to hurt any of the members of the sorority."

Four of the twenty members of the sorority resigned within a few days of the rejection of the Negro girl October 16. The four are Miss Lynton, Miss Gladstone, Miss Patt and Miss Sandy Kudlowitz, a former dean of the organization, who now has returned.

The sorority, on October 20, met and the members affirmed unanimously that a girl's personality and not her race would determine acceptance as a pledge in the future.

But Miss Lynton and Miss Gladstone said they do not intend to rejoin the organization.

"After the October 20 meeting, which I did not attend, I called one of the girls who had said she was opposed to a Negro in the sorority," Miss Lynton explained. "She made it very clear she wasn't going to go out of her way to get to know a Negro girl."

"She said the Negro girl wasn't going to be asked to be pledged this term, that the unanimous decision was something for the future," Miss Lynton continued. "She also said something to the effect that anything could be evaded in the future by stating personality as reason for a negative vote."

"I decided not to return because I personally felt that there had been no great change in any of the three girls and that it was entirely possible to keep a Negro girl out on the basis of prejudice," Miss Lynton said. "I felt the crucial point was that the Negro girl was not being asked to pledge at that time."

Miss Lynton and Miss Gladstone also gave this description of events at the October 16 meeting:

The early part of the evening was devoted to social talk between sorority members and twenty to twenty-five "rushes." The "rushes" left at about 9:30 PM and then the sorority members held closed votes on which "rushes" would be invited to a closed rush.

(After the closed rush there was to be another round of voting to determine who would be pledges. At a later date the sorority would vote to determine which of the pledges would be accepted as sisters.)

Nobel Winner Recalls Student Days

Twenty-three years ago a student at the College led what he now describes as a hard life, traveling three to four hours a day on the subway to and from the Bensonhurst area of Brooklyn and working nights and weekends as a haberdashery salesman.

Nevertheless, the student, with exception, earned A's or B's on all his courses. A chemistry major at first, and later a pre-med major, his lowest mark was a C earned in a chemistry course in titrimetric analysis.

The course, a lab, ended at 6 and that's when I had to start, so something had to give," says Dr. Arthur Kornberg, the College's first alumnus to be awarded a Nobel prize.

Dr. Kornberg told Observation Post of his depression era career at the College, from 1933 to 1937, in a telephone interview last week from his home near Stanford University, where he is a professor and executive head of the department of biochemistry.

"Things could have been easier," says the Nobel laureate, who won the 1959 prize in medicine with a former colleague at New York University, Dr Severo Ochoa. "My college life was not a happy picture of leisure."

There are no regrets, however.

"I'm certainly grateful for the free education," he said. "It's difficult to say, now, if I would have been able to receive a college education if I had not attended City—in any event it would have been delayed."

His savings from the haberdashery salesman's job helped him get started in medical school, at the University of Rochester, he explained. He was able to save money, he said, because his father, who owned a hardware store, "made sacrifices much beyond the call of any duty."

OP Editorial:

Guiding Principles

"Now charges of discrimination . . . are particularly serious at City College where freedom from discrimination of any kind has been the guiding principle for more than 110 years." So stated Mr. Israel E. Levine, the College's Publicity Director, in a statement issued Monday attacking Observation Post's handling of the Sigma Tau Delta (STD) action denying the privilege to pledge to a Negro girl at the College.

Yes, Mr. Levine, we agree with you. Discrimination is serious, and particularly so at City College. All of the College's traditions and principles speak forthrightly against this ugly phenomenon. But strangely enough, it appears that some people at the College speak with far less forthrightness than the College's traditions and principles.

Yes, Mr. Levine, these charges are "serious," and Observation Post has treated them as such. But an unfortunate fact is that some individuals at the College have not as yet seen fit to take the charges and the evidence to support those charges seriously, but only the manner in which those charges were presented.

Observation Post has given to you, Mr. Levine, and to the entire college community the proof of a specific case of discrimination. There are indications that the exclusion of a Negro from Sigma Tau Delta was possibly not even the only instance of discrimination that took place in that sorority.

It deserves, Mr. Levine, careful investigation, not out-of-hand rejection in order to save some conception of the purity of the College.

We note that nowhere do you, Mr. Levine say that the facts printed by Observation Post concerning discrimination in this case are untrue. No, the whitewash brush cannot effectively be put to work here. We cannot allow a smoke-screen of innuendo to obscure the hard truth: that an incident of discrimination has been brought before the college community, and that the community has not, as yet, united to face the possible consequences of this truth.

As shockingly false as your charges are, Mr. Levine, at least a few of them must be answered.

Basic in your charges is that certain Observation Post quotes were inaccurate. You quote Miss Sheila Janicola, a member of STD, as saying a quotation attributed to her concerning the existence of discrimination "in all parts of the college" was inaccurate. Strangely, in this case, and in other charges you attribute to others, and those you make yourself, you fail to give the clear-cut answers given to you by editors of Observation Post at a conference you yourself called last Friday.

Observation Post stands by the quote, and the reporters who took this particular quote have sworn and are willing to swear again that it was completely accurate. The quote was, in fact, re-read to Miss Janicola before it was printed, to insure its accuracy.

You assert that Miss Janicola stated that an Observation Post reporter had investigated discrimination at the College for a year and a half and "had been unable to come up with any evidence at all." You completely neglect to state that editors of Observation Post informed you that they had not been investigating discrimination at the College, although perhaps they should have.

It was one thing to make a value judgment and take the word of certain sorority sisters over that of the editors of Observation Post. It was another to completely exclude from the statement any of the denials made by OP editors—in your office, at your invitation—only a few minutes before you issued the statement to a representative of The Campus. Obviously, the statement was prepared long before you got around to obtaining OP's side, and presumably it was too much trouble to reword the statement, if not to question whether all that Sigma Tau Delta members said was true.

You did not even interview a representative group in your "attempt" to get at the facts. Why were the three girls who supposedly voted against the Negro girl on the basis of race not spoken to? Why were neither Miss Lynton nor Miss Gladstone consulted? Isn't it possible that the Negro girl herself might have been able to shed some light on the situation? These omissions are important, and strange indeed.

As a general blanket for your charges you assert what has already been charged and answered before. Namely that Observation Post, by "implication," has said that there is "widespread" discrimination at the College. Now you are the one to be charged with failure to provide evidence to substantiate your charge. We doubt that this failure is due to forgetfulness.

If your actions and reactions on this subject were typical of only yourself, Mr. Levine, then we could dismiss them as only the reactions of one person. But in this instance you are not, unfortunately, typical of only yourself.

Evidence continues to be published bringing this incident completely into the light. But instead of using this published evidence as a base for true investigation, many at the College are still defending the basic morality of the College. The only way to show true morality is to act in a truly moral manner. The only moral manner here is to root out discrimination, and not to ignore it.

Honesty, as well as morality demands nothing less.

Dear Editor:

Observation Post is to be commended for its report on an incident of racial discrimination in one of the College's sororities.

There are those who are understandably angry at the hue-and-cry which the story has aroused in some segments of the metropolitan press and the way it reflects on the College's reputation in this respect. Perhaps this will serve as a reminder that all is not perfect even in a "liberal" college.

Of course, as President Gallagher has noted, sororities and fraternities are "exclusive" groups and "are not organized for the purpose of being democratic."

It is to be hoped, however, that aroused opinion in the student body as a whole, can help in those instances in which prospective pledges who would be admirable members of the fraternity or sorority concerned, are rejected solely because of race or religion.

"My career was so abbreviated in a sense, that I spent little time on campus," he said. "At that time bonus credits were offered for A's, and so I took fewer credits than normally required for graduation."

But one man and one incident stands out in his memory. He asked if any one event at College had helped determine the course of his life.

"Is Dean Gottschal still the Dean?" he responded. Informed that Morton Gottschal, (Dean of College of Liberal Arts and Science), was, Dr. Kornberg said,

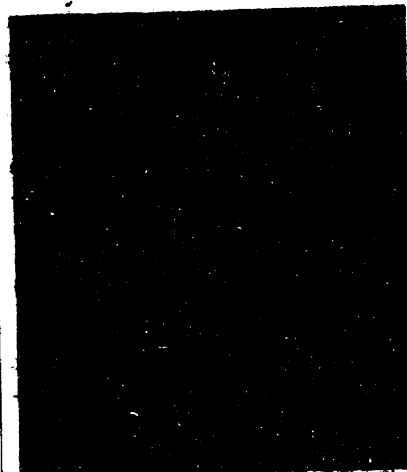

"I certainly remember him with gratitude. He was extremely kind and helpful to me."

"I had planned a career in chemistry, and I went to see him to talk about prospects," Dr. Kornberg related. He indicated a teaching career in chemistry was pretty hopeless. There had been no appointment in the department in 2 or 3 years and were anticipated.

"About that time," he said, "when it appeared obvious a search and teaching career in chemistry was not an economic possibility, I shifted to medicine."

Fellowship Program Created Aid Promising Students

A new program to help more students at the College of Arts and Sciences has been launched by the Committee on Curriculum and Teaching.

Letter sent to all faculty members by the committee states that the program calls for the identification, selection, and guidance of students whom the committee feels are promising fellowship candidates.

According to the letter, those students selected for the program will have informal conferences with the faculty members at which they will receive advice regarding programs of study and in which they might improve themselves as potential applicants for fellowships.

Faculty members are needed to confer with designated students, "make suggestions when there is something to be said" and in general to point out the students their weaknesses and how these weaknesses may be overcome.

Dean Sherburne F. Barber (Liberal Arts), a member of the committee, said yesterday, "We sent out letters two weeks ago to the faculty in an attempt to attract about sixty mentors, needed for the program. We have received only a dozen replies to date."

The letter said that identification of the students could be accomplished through examination of records, advanced placement applications and exemption examination applications, and a request to members of the faculty for names of students who have given evidence of special talent or ability.

A percentage of sorority members had to vote affirmatively for the aspirants—to be invited to the closed rush, 60 per cent; to be a pledge, 80 per cent; and to be a sister, 90 per cent. These percentages were not counted in the voting if the required percentage was attained.)

The "rushees" attending the rush, eight or nine were rejected for the closed rush. The "rushee" to be considered for the Negro girl.

She began to discuss the girl's "quality," Miss Gladstone said, "It was not long before someone raised the issue of the girl's race. It was decided to have a show of hands to see if there were any girls interested in inviting her to the closed rush, and if there were, we would discuss the racial Miss Lynton and Miss Gladstone. In a closed vote taken after more discussion, the Negro girl was accepted for the closed rush. A ballot including four ballots, several abstentions and several affirmative ballots two former members said.

Some girls were disturbed by the reference to race and asked for further discussion, knowing there continued to be four ballots at later voting the could not be accepted," Miss Lynton said. "If the girl was going to be rejected because of her color, she saw no purpose in it happening at a later stage when it hurt her more."

The discussion from then on centered on the question of race," Miss Lynton continued. "We started talking about friendships with girls of different races."

The girls said that they could not be friendly with a Negro to the extent of inviting one to come, or having one as a member of their social organization," Miss Lynton said.

The girl said she couldn't feel comfortable with a Negro," Miss Lynton continued, "the girl wanted to be in the sorority whom she could be able to get close to, be with them, get blind dates for them, attend social functions to have at her house and induce to friends."

"She said she could not do this with a Negro," Miss Lynton said. "Another said her neighbors would be very hurt."

"Some girls wanted to see if this Negro girl and others would be rejected in the future on the racial issue—whether those girls who blackballed her intended to do the same in similar cases in the future," she said.

She said the vote on this question was three negative, seven abstentions and ten affirmative.

On the matter of some sorority members allegedly excluding non-Jewish girls as "rushees," Miss Lynton said she would tell Dr. Gallagher a member of the sorority told her before the term that in previous terms when names were taken from a master list of freshmen, "some girls chose only Jewish names to send invitations to."

"I was told this was a cause of friction at times between those who followed this practice and those who didn't," Miss Lynton said. Miss Gladstone said she also had heard that some members struck non-Jewish names from the master list.

Dr. Kornberg served as secretary of both the Biology and Physics Societies and as a member of Inter-Club Council. He also won second year honors, was elected Phi Beta Kappa, and graduated cum laude.

Despite some evidence of participation in extra-curricular activities, he recalls little of his life as a student.

"My career was so abbreviated in a sense, that I spent little time on campus," he said. "At that time bonus credits were offered for A's, and so I took fewer credits than normally required for graduation."

But one man and one incident stands out in his memory. He asked if any one event at the College had helped determine the course of his life.

"Is Dean Gottschal still there?" he responded. Informed that Morton Gottschal, (Dean of College of Liberal Arts and Science), was, Dr. Kornberg said:

"I certainly remember him with gratitude. He was extremely kind and helpful to me."

"I had planned a career in chemistry, and I went to see him to talk about prospects," Dr. Kornberg related. He indicated a college teaching career in chemistry was pretty hopeless. There had been no appointment in the department in 2 or 3 years and were anticipated.

"About that time," he said, "when it appeared obvious a search and teaching career in chemistry was not an economic possibility, I shifted to medicine."

And that, of course, explains why Dr. Kornberg won the Nobel prize in medicine and not in chemistry.

Entertainment will be provided by a boy-girl team from Brooklyn College, which will lead in folk singing and dancing, and by Yonathan Sack, the famous multi-instrument artist, as well as by a number of Israeli musicians.

SZO to Hold Internat'l Nite

The Fourth Annual International Night, sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization (SZO), will be held Saturday at 8:30 PM in the Grand Ballroom. The event is SZO's initial social event of the year, and introduces its program for the following months.

The Student Zionist Organization has sponsored International Night since it was suggested four years ago by Ernie Tamari, who is now President of the Evening Session SZO.

Fellowship Program Created Aid Promising Students

A new program to help more students at the College receive fellowships has been launched by the Committee on Curriculum and Teaching.

A letter sent to all faculty members by the committee states that the program calls for the identification, selection, and guidance of students whom the committees are promising fellowship aid.

According to the letter, those students selected for the program will have informal conferences with the faculty members at which they will receive advice regarding programs of study and in which they might improve themselves as potential applicants for fellowships.

Professors are needed to confer with designated students, "make suggestions when there is something to be said" and in general to point out the students their weaknesses and how these weaknesses may be overcome.

Dean Sherburne F. Barber (Liberal Arts), a member of the committee, said yesterday, "We sent out letters two weeks ago to the faculty in an attempt to attract about sixty mentors, needed for the program. We have received only a dozen replies to date."

The letter said that identification of the students could be accomplished through examination of records, advanced placement applications and exemption examination applications, and a request to members of the faculty for names of students who have given evidence of special talent or ability.

A percentage of sorority members had to vote affirmatively for the aspirants—to be invited to the closed rush, 60 per cent; to be a pledge, 80 per cent; and to be a sister, 90 per cent. The "rushees" attending the rush, eight or nine were rejected guests for the closed rush. The "rushee" to be considered for the Negro girl.

She began to discuss the girl's "ability," Miss Gladstone said, "It was not long before some of the members raised the issue of the girl's ability. It was decided to have a show of hands to see if there were any girls interested in inviting to the closed rush, and if there were we would discuss the racial eight or nine sorority members present in the show of hands they were interested in having the girl invited to the closed rush, Miss Lynton and Miss Gladstone. In a closed vote taken after more discussion, the Negro girl was accepted for the closed rush. A ballot including four affirmative ballots, several abstentions and several affirmative ballots the two former members said.

Some girls were disturbed by the reference to race and asked for further discussion, knowing that there continued to be four affirmative ballots at later voting the girl could not be accepted," Miss Lynton said. "If the girl was going to be rejected because of her color, we saw no purpose in it happening at a later stage when it would hurt her more."

The discussion from then on centered on the question of race," Miss Lynton continued. "We started talking about friendships with girls of different races."

The girls said that they could not be friendly with a Negro to the extent of inviting one to come, or having one as a member of their social organization," Miss Lynton said.

The girl said she couldn't feel comfortable with a Negro," Miss Lynton continued, "the girl wanted to be in the sorority whom she was able to get close to, be invited to them, get blind dates for them, attend social functions to be held at her house and induce to friends."

"She said she could not do this with a Negro," Miss Lynton said. "Another said her neighbors would frown and her parents would be very hurt."

"Some girls wanted to see, if this Negro girl and others would be rejected in the future on the racial issue—whether those girls who blackballed her intended to do the same in similar cases in the future," she said.

She said the vote on this question was three negative, seven abstentions and ten affirmative.

On the matter of some sorority members allegedly excluding non-Jewish girls as "rushees," Miss Lynton said she would tell Dr. Gallagher a member of the sorority told her before the term that in previous terms when names were taken from a master list of freshmen, "some girls chose only Jewish names to send invitations to."

"I was told this was a cause of friction at times between those who followed this practice and those who didn't," Miss Lynton said. Miss Gladstone said she also had heard that some members struck non-Jewish names from the master list.

Beaver Booters Bound for Adelphi; Lavenders Confident of Victory Today

By STEVE SOLOMON

The Lavender Soccermen journey up to Garden City, Long Island today to dispose of the Adelphi Booters and get one step closer to the New York State Championship.

With confidence at an all time high after a brilliant performance against RPI, the College should not have too much trouble with an Adelphi team which has only two victories and one tie in eight games.

Adelphi fields a team with only five veteran letterman, including goalie Ray Hill. High Scorer Frank Schnur with eight goals to his credit this season and John Amato who has tallied seven, represent the brunt of the Adelphi offense.

The Garden City eleven played the Long Island Aggies last week, a team which the College trimmed 10-1, and came off with a 4-0 decision. However, they failed to impress anybody when they lost to Pratt, 11-3.

Heinz Minnerop indicated yesterday how important the victory over RPI was in terms of the remaining games. "We always knew we were a great team, but now we know we can take care of the big teams when we have to."

"It was amazing," Minnerop went on, "how everyone suddenly came to life in the second half to save us from defeat. When you're trailing to RPI 3-2 and you know one defeat will end your season, there's a lot of pressure on you."

"We might have lost really big if we would have made just one mistake in the second half. Instead we ran RPI into the ground. The pressure didn't bother us and now we now can take any team we play."

Today's game with Adelphi and Saturday's game with Long Island University are important in that the College must win to keep in contention for the championship. If they are still undefeated by Tuesday, the Pratt game will become the "big game" of the season.

It is almost a certainty that the winner of the Pratt game will be invited to the National Championships at Storrs, Connecticut, provided they complete the season undefeated.

Heinz Minnerop
'Confident'

The problem of overconfidence which has led to many startling upsets in all sports does not pose a threat to the Booters. "If we are too overconfident in the beginning of a game and play poorly, we usually straighten out pretty fast," said Heinz Minnerop after yesterday's practice.

Beavers Over-Run By Seamen, 37-18

By JOE LOWIN

On a slow track, still soggy from the rains of the previous night, the College's cross-country track team lost to a well-stocked Kings Point squad yesterday at Van Cortland Park, 37-18.

Two Beaver runners sustained minor injuries due to the dangerous conditions of the five-mile course, and a third claimed he was just slowed up. Sophomore Marty Weinless, who finished seventh in the race with a time of 30:29, came over the finish line with his body and uniform bespattered with mud and dirt and with cuts and bruises on his knees, elbows, and forearms. "I was coming down the cemetery and tripped over an uncovered root of a tree," explained the young harrier. "I must have slid down the hill at least ten yards," he said.

Another soph, Dennis Clark, injured himself. At about the mile and a half mark, he spiked himself on the inside of his right ankle. He was able to finish the five-mile race with a time of 32:30, but required first-aid treatment from Lavender Coach Harry deGirolamo afterwards.

The Beavers were led by a third sophomore, Johnny Rohde, who was the only one of the College's runners to finish in less than thirty minutes: his time was 29:48. "It could have been at least ten seconds better," he lamented, "but I had a stitch in my side all the way across the cemetery."

Bill Rovick of Kings Point, who finished only nineteen seconds ahead of Rohde and placed fourth, also complained about the track. "It was very, very loose. In some places you have a depth of six or seven inches of said." Beaver Co-Captain Jean Brief gave a conflicting account of the race. After finishing with a disappointing 30:10 mark, he shook his head, shrugged his shoulders, and said in an accent unmistakably French: "The track is slippery and full of mud. You know, you lose your rhythm."

Despite the poor conditions under which the race was run, Kings Pointer Bob McNamara finished in the remarkable time of 27:52, to take first place. The next three runners, all Merchant Marines, finished within twenty-four seconds of each other and less than thirty minutes.

Coach Harry deGirolamo made no complaints about the conditions. "The team ran very well; the other team was just stronger. Our boys are getting valuable experience under their belts—you have to look at it that way, too."

Booter . . .

Heinz Minnerop continues on his merry way scoring goals. He flipped two into the net Saturday against RPI to raise his three game total to nine.

If he continues at this pace he will complete the season with thirty goals, seven more than the record held by Billy Sund.

Marco Wachter is getting a bit stereotyped. He scored two goals in his first game, two goals in his second game and two goals in his third game. Poor Marco, he finds it so hard breaking scoring habits.
