Four students at the College were placed on discipline probation last week for their admitted attack on two slow students who were disturbing registered Civil Defense Protest circulars last week.

Acting upon the recommendation of Professor Richard Brotman (student Life), who investigated the recent incident and suggested action, Dean James S. Peace (Acting Dean of Students) said that in addition to some of the incident will be listed in the students' files. The administrative action was taken at the last meeting last week.

Disciplinary probation, the Dean explained Wednesday, means that, off second offense will incur more serious consequences. He did not specify what the consequences would involve. "They have to be considered good behavior," he warned.

The four students, whose names were not released, apologized for their actions before the hearing, the Dean Peace said.

Richard Jacommo and Eric Eilberg of two students who were assaulted, were distributing leaflets at 135 Street when they were attacked by the four Hungarian refugees, who seized the three.

"The students didn't stop to see what the leaflets said. I just said 'What have we here?' and stepped on the circular," Jacommo asserted.

Marxist Writer Attacks HUAC "Thought Control"

The House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) has stiffened knowledge of work in the United States, Annette T. Rubenstein charged yesterday while speaking before the College's Club to Abolish HUAC.

Dr. Rubenstein was recently subpoenaed to appear before HUAC. The teacher-author is the secretary of The Fund for Social Analysis, an informal organization of individuals interested in aiding research on problems of Marxist theory and its application.

"It is important," she said, "that in attacking the Fund the HUAC has been able to go a step further in infringing on academic freedom... it (HUAC) is trying to inhibit freedom of research, of scholarship, of freedom of thought itself."

On May 11, Dr. Rubenstein is scheduled to testify before the HUAC. They could not want the names of the fund's members or award winners," she said, "because they are publicized as much as possible. She emphasised that HUAC wants the list of rejected applicants and donors.

"The law is a very technical thing," she explained. "You can only refuse to answer on grounds of the Fifth Amendment in order to protect yourself, not to protect others. Therefore, if I were to tell them that I am the secretary of the Fund, I would not be able legally withheld the names of donors and rejected applicants.

"They could do nothing," she said. "If at the hearing I simply said 'I have never heard of this man or woman'... I have the right to say that, too."

The formation of a union involves the workers in the north and south campus cafeterias, but does not affect snack bar employees.

Dr. Ruth E. Sabel, Personnel Coordinator of the City University of New York, said that Local 302 for an election under the terms of an Employee Representation Plan adopted by the BHE on January 28, 1961.

According to this plan "Employees of the BHE have the right to self organization. They may form, join, or assist employee organizations for their mutual aid or protection. They may select representatives of their own choosing to consult and negotiate with administration authorities of the College or Board. They also have the right to refrain from any or all of such activities," it stated.

"At the present moment the only issue involved in this election is whether or not the cafeteria employees want Local 302 to represent them," according to Dr. Sabel.

Mr. José Garcia, General Organizer of the Employees of the Cafeteria Workers Union, said that "at the present time conditions are very bad at the City College Cafeterias. At Hunter College the Spanish speaking workers, especially, have had no vacation for fifteen years. This is why a union is needed."

"All indications are that the workers will vote in favor of the union very heavily," said Mr. Garcia.

The College's cafeterias have earned a net profit of $18,154 thus far this year, Professor John Burton (Breeza) announced.

He added that the cafeteria employees received a ten cent an hour increase in wages last month, bringing the minimum salary to $1.25 an hour, with the exception of "about a half dozen workers."

Other Managing Board positions will be filled by Barbara Schwartzbaum, Features Editor; Larry Bortstein, Sports Editor; and Laurence Montag, Business Manager.

On the Associate Board are Barbara Brown, Assistant News Editor; Betty Paltz and Paul Ascone, Assistants to the Editor; Robert Gold, Photography Editor; Dave Rothchild, Sports Editor; and Grace Fischer, Managing Editor.

Professor Johnson Selected President of Writers’ Group

By DAVE ROTHCHILD

The American chapter of Poets and Playwrights, Essayists, Novelists (PEN), an organization of writers with branches in sixty countries, elected Professor Edgar Johnson (Chmn, English) as its president on Monday.

“Naturally, I felt honored and pleased,” commented Prof. Johnson on his recent election. “There are about 500 members in our chapter,” he continued, “among whom are some of America’s most distinguished writers, so it is truly an honor to be president.”

Member authors include Pearl Buck, John Dos Passos, Robert Frost, Arthur Miller, Eleanor Roosevelt and Herman Wouk. PEN is an organization of professional authors who have had at least two books published. Its purpose,” explained Prof. Johnson, “is to promote harmony among writers of different countries, and understanding between the peoples of these lands.”

Prof. Johnson also stated that “writers who acquiesce to the PEN Charter feel that literature is addressed to all mankind. Consequently, PEN feels that literature should be absolutely free from political censorship of any sort.”

During last year, the American, British and French chapters of PEN have protested imprisonment, for political reasons, of various writers. “Also,” at present, we feel that the Russian government has trodden upon the Charter of Madame Ivanis, a friend of the late Boris Pasternak, and her daughter Irina,” and we are writing to bring what diplomatic pressure we can to bear on the government to compensate the committee,” stated Prof. Johnson. Several cablegrams have been sent to Premier Nikita S. Khrouchtchev by Miss B. J. Clute.

Tea...

The College’s Young Democratic Club will hold a Student Faculty Tea today in Room 348 Fineus from 3 to 5 PM. Mr. James Johnson, speaker, will present a program of patriotic music and an essay on the American Movement. The Tea will feature a dance of the Y.D.C. and all students are invited.

Old Grads Never Die

In just a matter of weeks many of you will be graduating—especially seniors.

You are of course eager to go out in the great world where opportunities are limitless and dreams most essential. At the same time your hearts are heavy at the thought of losing touch with so many classmates you have come to know and love.

It is my pleasant task today to assure you that graduation need not be the end of contact with classmates; all you have to do is join the Alumni Association and every year you will receive a bright, newsy, chatty bulletin, chock full of information about all your old buddies.

Professor Johnson, Political Science instructor, Mr. Norman Rosenberg, and outgoing R.G., President Bob Saginaw. One last look.

President Gallagher came to the College nine years ago as a little known educator from the South. He is leaving to become chancellor of the largest system of State Colleges in the country—the California State University.

“I have no pleasure in leaving City College. I doubt that any College president in the country has as exciting opportunities as the President of the City College. Someone who wanted things settled would not be happy at this College. It grows—it is real.”

And we have grown. North Campus was all there was to the College when Prof. Gallagher came here in 1953. The spires of Shepard, and Old Army Hall.

The Library, and all of South Campus came in the early years of Dr. Gallagher’s tenure. For the future there are the already familiar white and green slates of the Tech building and the City University, for which Dr. Gallagher threatened to resign if it were not approved. “I will not preside over the downfall of this College,” he said later.

Dr. Gallagher will not keep in close contact with the College once he moves. “The day after commencement I shall put my waste-paper basket on my desk and tip it over—my work at the College will be ended.”

Bob Saginaw described himself as having been “a shy freshman.” He came a long way. “I’m going to miss City College. It has done a lot for me.” Saginaw will attend either NYU or Columbia law school.

...at the entire PHYT state in which we have a goal. He presented 4000 signa-tures to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller calling for the proposed imposition of union hall as the Municipal College. The bill that created the City of Albany was scenic. Well, the trip to the proposed site of the Municipal College leaves us. After all the publicity of] my dismissal I'm beginning to feel like an old soldier. End of quote, end of story. Mr. Norman Rosenbloom is leaving after ten years. He is coming to the Executive Council of the American University and Law Society, a "broadened" way of looking at things. The acting chairman of his department, Fred. Ivo Duchacek, "regrets it." The Department secretary "regrets it." Mr. Rosenbloom has "mixed feelings." He's not falling.

The June '61 term ends in three weeks. It's all over but the commencement exercises. Thirty for the semester.

An OP Review

Social Studies Journal

By GRACE FISCHER

From farms to farms, from the fall of Rome to the rise of a ruthless congressional lobby, the Spring term's Journal of Social Studies is as fascinating as it is diversified.

The four essays of the Journal span more than 1700 years, and leap from a view of stone ruins and ornate Corinthian columns to the shimmering wheat fields of the Midwest.

One might wish perhaps that the Journal did not encompass so vast a realm, that all the essays revolved around a single unifying theme, as in last semester's issue. Nonetheless, the varying subject matter of the quarter is worthwhile and fruitful. Above all, the compilers of this issue have composed not of staid scholarly works, but of stimulating scholarly works.

This stimulating quality, enhanced by lucidity of writing style, is exemplified in the first essay. Written by Theodore Dudik, former editor of the Journal, it has the most contemporary subject matter, the motion picture. It is characteristic in that it illustrates a common failing of at least three of the four efforts—ineffectiveness.

Mr. Dudik's basic tenet is that the motion picture is, or ought to be, an art form at all times. One is sorely tempted to contradict such a statement when theater marquees continuously display such enticing titles as 'She Monster At Large' or 'Sex Kittens Go To College'. Yet this vulgarization of a true art medium is precisely what the author deplores.

The solution for the threatened decadence of the film art, decides the author, is humanism. It is on this word, humanism, that the whole work ultimately hinges. And it is the failure of Mr. Dudik to adequately define this concept, other than to mention that it focuses on man because man is the central figure of this art, that is the source of its decay.

The climax of this essay takes the reader on a tour of the cinema, into the over-ambitious, and sometimes over-complicated, production of the film called "Psycho". The author can't help but find the film wanting, and certainly not a vehicle for the type of humanism he espouses.

The third essay is the第四 effort and is an attempt by John Birch Society when in its propaganda it accused Presidents Roosevelt and Truman of wanting to establish socialist or communist States.

The AMA may even hold the distinction of being a precursor to the John Birch Society when in its propaganda it accused Presidents Roosevelt and Truman of wanting to establish socialist or communist States.

It is an anti-climax however when, after the alarming and somewhat one-sided facts presented in this essay, the author concludes that it will be "interesting" to wait and see what the AMA's next step will be in the face of President Kennedy's new health insurance proposals.

No attempt is made by Mr. Beiser to generalize the phenomena which the AMA represents, or to analyze and appraise the function of government health plans, other than to warn of the danger of decay. But is not one of the nation's true art from its ability to survive? Too much is left unsaid, yet perhaps even the questions that the essay raises the reader to ask himself are to its credit.

"The American Medical Association: Lobby Extraordinaire" by Edward Beiser, a junior at the College, is a revealing paper on the vivid study of economic self-interest.

"The Unholy Alliance" by Mr. Beiser points out that the political history of the famous, or infamous, doctors' group, Mr. Beiser writes, "can be considered forty years after warning against the evils of lobbying, the AMA in 1949 reported the largest expenditure of any pressure group registered under the federal lobbying laws.

The ugliness of some of the methods used by the Association in its fight against any form of compulsory health insurance is documented in the case of a man who was psychologically forced, while his wife was in the hospital, to sign a form post card to his congressman opposing government health plans which, in actuality, he supported.

The AMA may even hold the distinction of being a precursor to the John Birch Society when in its propaganda it accused Presidents Roosevelt and Truman of wanting to establish socialist or communist States.

No attempt is made by Mr. Beiser to generalize the phenomenon which the AMA represents, or to analyze and appraise the function of such an organization in the context of a democratic society.

Does there exist a single or primary explanation of history?—that is the intriguing question posed by the student of history. Using the example of the differing causes of the fall of the Roman Empire promulgated by historians, Ronald Legem goes on to despair of there being any central cause. All explanations, he says, are explanations of at least three of the four efforts—ineffectiveness.

The final paper on "Henry Wallace and the Farmers Fight for a New Deal: 1930-1932" by Barry Solbo is enlightening and well-written. The chapter headings alone indicate the lively quality of the piece—for instance, "Roosevelt and the Farmer's Fight for a New Deal: 1930-1932" by Barry Solbo is enlightening and well-written. All in all, the Spring issue of the Journal of Social Studies, which went on sale at the College Wednesday, deserves, and is sure to receive from most of its readers, an emphatic "well-done!"
President Buell G. Gallagher said at the Student Government Honors and Awards Dinner that during his nine year stay at the College he has attempted by his actions to instill responsible student initiative.

The President, administration, faculty and students at the College all seem unanimous in their desire to develop this trait.

However, rapport in all areas has not been a reality this semester, nor has student initiative been greeted with encouragement. The conclusion of an old term does not alleviate the old problems. Nor does it erase the satisfaction of significant victories.

This semester has demonstrated the evidence that wherever these groups have acted in unison, there has been an effective settlement of problems.

The men in Albany who suggested the idea of a tuition were silenced by the united opposition of those who believed in the students' right to free higher education. After countless speeches, petitions, rallies and resolutions, free tuition has remained a reality.

The establishment of a City University, stimulated by the College's successful master's programs, was supported with equal enthusiasm by students, faculty, and administration alike, and there can be no doubt that such strong endorsement weighed heavily as a factor in the bipartisan support which this measure received in the State Legislature.

Revocation of the Smith Act ban this semester, after its inception five years ago, has been urged since that time by students and the General Faculty and President Gallagher.
This petition, unhesitatingly, was influential in obtaining its revocation.

Unfortunately this unanimity in spirit was not demonstrated in other areas. Students attempt to develop responsible initiative were met with anything but encouragement.

Student initiative, in attempts to broaden responsibility, and to increase awareness of issues concerning students as citizens has been met with opposition by some and conformity and cowardice by others.

A Student Government Committee when attempting to discuss and make proposals concerning tenure were told that this question was out of the realm of student interest.

The role of the administration in this year's Civil Defense protest is indicative of this. There was an obvious attempt on the part of the administration to minimize the spirited participation of 200 students in a peaceful civil defense protest. I am attempting to minimize the idealistic forthright and courageous stand of these students, fear of any great resurgence of student activity was shown alongside of a conformity and acceptance of the organized insanity of the Defense.

Alongside of those students, who through their own initiative have continued to demonstrate their abilities in the political and social sphere, and those who are earnestly interested in the formation of a meaningful student self-government, are those who would like to see the jurisdiction of Student Council narrow further and see the students follow the herd.

The solution which the SG Reorganization Committee offered this term, is in the formation of a new constitution which offers a reallocation of responsibility and a reaffirmation of student claims to self-government. The passage of a constitution of this nature remains for the future and in this area the most important battles are yet to come. We freely acknowledge the spirit of the suggestions forward to positive and active bases.

No doubt there are those at the College who would feel less ill the ease if no student took idealistic stands, if there were no student initiative—if there were no investigation of the cafeteria, discussion of the tenure system or students on the Curriculum Committee. After all, students might upset some comfortably established traditions.

LIGHT UP AN L&M, and answer these questions. Then compare your answers with those of 1,383 other college students (at bottom of page).

Question #1: As a college student, do you believe that you are taking the best advantage of your educational opportunities?
Answer: Yes. No.

Question #2: Some college men are wearing trimmed beards. Do you think most girls will be attracted to men with trimmed beards?
Answer: Yes. No.

Question #3: Do you think that American colleges tend to overemphasize football and other sports to the detriment of the status of academic accomplishments?
Answer: Yes. No.

Question #4: How many cigarettes do you smoke a day, on the average?

The L&M Campus Opinion Poll was taken at over 100 colleges where L&M has student representatives, and may not be a statistically random selection of all undergraduate schools.

The L&M Campus Opinion Poll—Peter, Renee, Bobbie...You wish you could have done better. You've learned more than they have. Maybe not. You look for your roommate who teaches—a Mr. He deserves a title by the standards you set forth. But you find out there's no place for him, he doesn't belong. Call it idealism; call it anything you want but you've lost something and the loss stays in your mind longer than it should because you're an undergraduate.

"It wouldn't be happy if the students weren't for the underdog." "I didn'tnoinspection. That's what he said, really, that's what he said." "It's not good enough for a man at a college to just want to teach, except in rare cases." "To me, teaching alone is a full time profession..." "Of course, I've been over the concerns the students have shown me..." Idealism in our substance or have we been told by those who still can remember. But the sentimental student sees no reason why idealism has to be given up. Your inexperienced eyes gaze upon a titleless man who teaches—Mr. He deserves a title by the standards you set forth. But you find out there's no place for him, he doesn't belong. Start to wonder who does belong. Call it idealism; call it anything you want but you've lost something and the loss stays in your mind longer than it should because you're an undergraduate.

"What time is it...Twenty to...What time...a quarter, to..." "If you've taken any of Mr. Rosenberg's courses you've learned. And if you don't want to learn, you will still be educated in any case. You study the teacher; study your classmates. And after class they all become friends. You meet some of the finest people you've ever met and you try to take everything with a certain attitude and perspective because you're an undergraduate...

"Yes I said yes I will Yes." "Marginal propensity to save..." "The best of times; it was the worst of times..." "No, I don't want the text book..." "If you've taken any of Mr. Rosenberg's courses you've learned. And if you don't want to learn, you will still be educated in any case. You study the teacher; study your classmates. And after class they all become friends. You meet some of the finest people you've ever met and you try to take everything with a certain attitude and perspective because you're an undergraduate...

"Steve Solomon LSo. 5 89455...Steve Solomon LSo. 6 89455...Steve Solomon LSo. 7 94746...Steve Solomon LSo. 8 94746..." The years pass by quickly. You have to laugh when you recall you were an engineering major for an entire freshman year. If there wasn't so much math and science in the curriculum you would have made it more. It was the best of times. You're in your senior year.

"Looking out up on this vast group of graduates..." "What time is it...Twenty to...What time...a quarter, to..." "Yes I said yes I will Yes." "Marginal propensity to save..." "The best of times; it was the worst of times..." "No, I don't want the text book..." "If you've taken any of Mr. Rosenberg's courses you've learned. College's Garbage Dump To Be Greenhouse Again

By DAVE SCHWARTZMAN

For six years the College's greenhouse, tucked in the shadows of Finley, had been used as a garbage dump. Now it's filled with begonias.

The glass and wood structure had been used by nuns for growing flowers for their table. When the College took over the Manhattanville Convent of the Sacred Heart and made it South Campus, the greenhouse was abandoned.

At the beginning of last term, Tony Lothman, a biology student, saw the greenhouse and thought he saw his opportunity. "Someone collects begonias," the brown-haired horticulturist said. "I collect begonias."

The sheltering Lombardy Poplar and Sycamore Maple that stand beside it, do not conceal the presence of flowers of all varieties are grown in the plastic insulated room and large crates of peat moss stand where stacks of old newspapers and assorted garbage were once before.

In addition, your irresponsibility in news coverage, you persist in an almost unbelievable low ethical standards commonplace in college journalism. Observation Post is infamous for its biased, slanted stories which, in particular, always appear around the time of student elections each semester.

Beyond your ineptness in news coverage, you persist in an almost unbelievable low ethical standards commonplace in college journalism. Observation Post is infamous for its biased, slanted stories which, in particular, always appear around the time of student elections each semester.

In addition, your irresponsible journalism is highlighted in your neglect to print "qualifications for office" of all student aspirants.

Whatever suggestions are made aimed toward improving the newspaper at the college, you and your colleagues cry "unfairness." I contend that the students own the college newspapers since each is forced to contribute to the support of the papers. (The student press receives approximately 35% of all student fee money.) Furthermore, we, as students, should have the right of full access to the materials (and this, I emphasize, will and should in no way impinge upon the right of student editors) printed in the papers. If this be censorship, then I say let's have censorship. And if you oppose this viewpoint, you have every right to start your own newspaper and sell it, thereby rightly becoming your own boss and censor.

As for an investigative criticism is concerned, responsible student leaders have time and again called for the establishment of a PUBLICATIONS BOARD geared toward improving the journalistic quality, responsibility, and impartiality of all student publications, but with particular emphasis on the student press. I for one will strive to help create such a board.

But perhaps the only real recourse which the student body can have to your personal organ of expression, OBSERVATION POST, is to vote it (via referendum) out of existence, just as students voted to create the paper fifteen years ago.

loot by that much in the meet’s final match as the Lavender succumbed, 14-13. Now Lanamith, along with sword competitors Jerry Mouland, Richard Blanche, and Mike Goldsmith, this year’s captain, are about to step into the world of even more rugged competition.

Larry Groehl and Jerry Kaplan have joined Borah as former members of the Beaver wrestling troupe. Groehl, who scrapped as a heavy- weight, and Kaplan, who saw action at the other extreme, as a lightweight, were game guys whom we remember as always being in a match, no matter what the opposition had going.

Coach Harry Karlins’s most recent soccer team had the worst record of any Beaver band in fifteen years, even though the slate showed a +7-5 at season’s end. And certainly the greatest part of the success the team had, and none of the supposed “slump” can be attributed to individual is dubbed, will tread the hardcourt planks of Wingate Gym peering peremptorily over our shoulder and seeing what has gone before. And the many who are leaving will always have the satisfaction of knowing that the knowledge of their efforts has not just evaporated.

We can all wish them best of future success and thanks a lot. There goes one of them now . . . hey, . . . goodbye, guy . . .

character of life at the College to the youthful journalists he proudly noted its “open-endedness.” He spoke humble words of appreciation at his final press conference, but he spoke them with calm self-assurance.

“He under his calm exterior, his quiet words,” a former student-editor said of the College’s departing President, “one feels an immense sense of power inside the man.”

Sam Huff Jokes, Shows Movies, Sells Cigarettes

Sam Huff, a combination football player, cigarette salesman, and raconteur, paralyzed his talents before a capacity audience in Room 212 in Finley yesterday.

Huff was invited to speak by Richie Silverstein, secretary of the Alpha Mu Sigma fraternity.

Sam Huff

Appears at College

Huff rambled on verbally for a while, injected his own personal brand of old-folks West Virginia humor into the discussion. He told the crowd, which was packed to the rear of the room with awed listeners, that John David Crow is the best all-around back in the National Football League, that Johnny Unitas is the greatest quarterback alive, and that Ernie Stautner, the old man of the Pittsburgh Steelers, is the toughest lineman he’s ever faced.

Football Film Shown

A film of the 1950 Giant season, narrated by noted sportscaster Chris Schenkelt, followed a question period in which Huff predicted the defending champion Philadelphia Eagles can not repeat without quarterback Norm Van Brookes.

Athletic Season Nears Termination; Aura of Hope Excludes Diamondmen

By PAUL ASEN

Most of the College's athletic teams, submerged in a sea of de-emphasis with little support from the student body, managed to complete seasons ranging from successful to hopeful. The baseball team was the exception—it couldn't win.

The athletic scene is not over yet.

It's Not Over Yet For Three Teams

Three of the College's teams have not completed their season as yet, and in addition to the opposition, will have to

The Lacrosse team ends its season tomorrow against Lafayette at the Leopard's Easton, Pennsylvania campus.

The Beavers' Johnny Orlando will attempt to extend his season, as yet, and in addition to the opposition, will have to

The track team which took fifth place in the CTC Championship meets in its last outing, hopes to place in a few events with Hamato and Delgado showing the way. The tracksters took 2 of 3 dual meets this year.
