Four outspoken critics of the speaker ban were rebuffed Wednesday by the Senate and House.

The Senate also stated that "it is not the place of the Senate to make an issue of the fact that USNSA has taken no action against the speaker pro proponior."

The Senate's stand was supported by the students, who said they would continue their efforts to organize an all-campus meeting to discuss the controversy.

I Went blood
Dateline Jackson

This is the last in a series of articles on the author's recent trip to Jackson, Mississippi.

By REBECK COHEN

Unprecedented Muslim diplomas and certificates of graduation from Southern University Small Colfax office in a building on Jackson's Lynch Street. This is the headquarters of the Jackson Non-Violent Movement, which group planned the Freedom Rides and had cooperation with the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC).

Terry Perlman and I went to the office after her talk on Saturday, and Monday, "Before we had time to introduce ourselves, and we were shoved into an office, and our eyes greeted some other Riders and a past colleague.

Seats were scarce in the room as people kept coming in and out.

"All right. There's a mailing list to type and somebody's got to do it," a girl from SNCC announced. Terry volunteered, and before she knew it, she was seated before a typewriter and a little green metal box containing index cards with names and addresses of Jackson ministers, teachers, and students.

"I can't believe you're all going home," said one of the Negro Riders lamenter.

"I'll just have to sit still when someone throws things at him, when he's cursed at, or even when he's the victim of outright aggression. He must be able to remain still and not even flinch. This is non-violence, and this is the power of a word."

"Few of the people who go on the Riders or who actively participate in any of the campaigns against segregationist policies expect to avoid danger or personal sacrifice. Many of them are preparing to go out of the Freedom Riders or to participate in one of the sit-ins, or to be trained in General techniques of non-violence."

"Now Terry is out on appeal again. After his trial in April, Freedom Rider Terry was convicted of the 'murder of a newswoman,' the Mississippi Free Press, which was published by some of the freedom's adult sympathizers. The slogan above the journal's name proudly claimed 'We will overcome.'"

"If you serve your sentences at all," one of Terry's associates estimated last week, "you should be going to jail in about five years."

Swim Season Opens Tom'w; Other Teams to See Action

The swimming team dives into competition by facing Manhattan College at 4:30 PM tomorrow in Wingate Pool. At 7 PM tomorrow evening the rifle team shoots against C.W. Post and Hofstra. Saturday at 2 the fencing team engages Yale University.

The wrestling team grapples the United States Merchant Marine Academy (USMMA), but the meet was postponed because the USMMA had a schedule conflict. It will be held on February 12.

The swimmers have been severely weakened by graduation and injury. With champions Nick West lost in the middle of last year and recordholder Carl Wohlleber sprained his back, Rider didn't have much to start with. Then Mike Bolgosky dropped out of the team and Bob Wohlleber suspended his back-water-skiing.

As Coach Rider put it, "I'm not a pessimist, but I'm not optimistic about this year's team. It's much weaker than last year." The top returning lettermen include Barry Shay, 2:50 for the 220-yard freestyle, and Massimo Caban, 1:00 freestyle—0.56, Martin Slagboom, 445 freestyle—5:07, and Edtolo Filip, 200 breaststroke—2:48 and Jack Youngs, backstroke.

Adding depth to the team will be returning junior Perry Alpert, Morris Levine, and Alan Orenstein, who swam all events. Since there was no freshman team last year there will be only one new addition, Girand Pessis, who will probably swim in the medley relay.

While the Beavers completely demolished Manhattan College 64-27 last year, Coach Rider "hasn't the least idea" how the team does this season will depend upon how quickly the predominantly sophomore squad matures.

Novelty and neophytes are two factors the College's women's basketball team will have to contend with this season. Previously, after a basket was made, the ball would be brought back to mid-court where it would be taken down by the forwards. Now the ball stays at the end line after a scoring play and is taken out by the guards. Generally they advance the ball to the mid-court where they pass it to one of the offensive trio.

The rule-makers have made two changes which will require more skill on the part of the lady hoopsters than previously, while increasing the game's interest to spectators.

The campaign for Coach Betty Castro's squad opens tonight against the Alumnae in Park Gym.

This year he has a "green team" with only "two veterans", Captain Ivio Masino and Junior Ray Fields. Nonetheless the schedule is as rough as ever, including the cream of the Ivy League, the US Naval Academy, and Rutgers University. Brooklyn College, originally planned for February 10, has been dropped and Lucia is trying to replace it with Cornell University.

This Saturday the fencers face Yale University. Coach Lucia does not know much about that team because the fencing season has just begun. If Yale has an experienced team, the College's chances are slim. If, on the other hand, they have a young team Lucia expects to do better.

In general, how well the fencing team does this season will depend upon how quickly the predominantly sophomore squad matures. Coach Bernard Kelley's rifle team has a 35 match winning streak. They are expected to extend it to 27 by beating C.W. Post and Hofstra here tomorrow night.
