

Luce Banned From Speaking At The College

By VIVIAN BROWN

an organizer of last summer's student trip to Cuba was banned yesterday from speaking at the College, being the third speaker in two weeks to be prohibited from appearing at the City University.

Philip Luce, who is one of four individuals under Federal Grand Jury indictment in connection with State Department ban on travel to Cuba, was scheduled to address the E. V. Debs Club next Thursday. According to Sylvia Mazelis, president of the group, the refusal was anticipated in the light of similar actions on two other campuses. Levy Laub and Steve Stintot, both under indictment on the same charge, were prohibited from speaking at Brooklyn and Queens Colleges, respectively, as a result of actions by the schools' Students.

The decision to forbid Mr. Luce's appearance was rendered by Irwin Weinstein (Student Life) who made his judgement on a General Faculty Policy Statement which is distributed by the Department of Student Life to all clubs and organizations.

The clause in question states that persons under legal indictment for a felony or awaiting appeal from a conviction may not discuss any phase of the indictment or conviction.

When questioned as to whether the decision would be reversed if Luce discussed a topic other than "The Student Trip to Cuba," Weinstein said he would reserve comment until further investigation of the regulation.

Commenting on the action, President Gallagher noted that as he understands the rule, it "states that I may not speak here if I am under indictment for a felony, no matter what his topic is."

The President added that if it were up to him he "would let him speak here." He said, however, that far as he knows, the rule was in existence for at least ten years. Yesterday's occurrence was further aggravated by the discovery that no rule in the Board of Higher Education By-laws mentions

Upton Sinclair, Class Of 1897 To Speak Here October 30

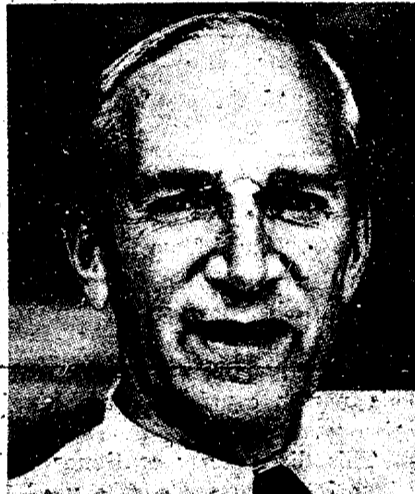

Upton Sinclair, who graduated from the College sixty-six years ago, will return this month as the English Department's guest. The Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist will speak in Aronow Auditorium on October 30 at 3 PM.

Mr. Sinclair entered the College at the age of fourteen, and subsequently worked his way through both this school and Columbia by writing magazine stories.

As early as 1906, with the publication of his best known novel, The Jungle, an exposé of the conditions of workers' conditions in the Chicago meat packing industry, the author proposed the socialistic philosophy as the only solution for labor's problems.

An extremely prolific writer, Mr. Sinclair published ten books between 1939 and 1949, including Dragon's Teeth, a tract on Nazism. The work, which is part of the Lanny Budd series, was awarded the 1942 Pulitzer Prize.

Not reserving his political convictions to the literary world, Mr. Sinclair founded the Intercollegiate Socialist Society at the College in 1905 and was later a frequent candidate in California elections. He ran on the Socialist Party ticket for Congressman, Senator, and

Bloom Rules Civil Rights Bill Out Of Order At SC Meeting

Student Government President Ira Bloom ruled out of order late last night a motion supporting the students facing the death penalty in Americus, Georgia, for their role in the civil rights struggle.

The motion fell outside of the purposes of SG, Bloom asserted, because it did not concern "students in their role as students."

SG Vice-President Gerard Pessis said, "I support the chairman's decision, noting as precedent Council support of the Birmingham Vigil. This motion is out of order because the student's aren't dead."

Council upheld Bloom's ruling by 13 to 5 votes.

A new resolution was introduced which provided that Council should co-sponsor with the College's branch of the Congress of Racial Equality a program to inform students here of the situation in Americus. This motion failed by an 8 to 8 vote.

The College's delegates to this summer's National Student Association's Congress reported to Council last night. The major question set before Council was whether the NSA should limit itself to educational issues or take stands on controversial political issues also.

Larry Steinhauer '64, declared that dissension and alienation would follow if the Congress took controversial stands. It was pointed out that some 30 Colleges have already withdrawn (the NSA represents over 400 of the 1800 accredited colleges in the United States; and though it gained 28 new schools this year, it had never before had a school withdraw).

John Zippert '66, and Bob Atkins '64, both favored an increase in political activity by the Congress.

Atkins said that while the Congress had discussed controversial matters, its resolutions were watered down and not enough "action" was taken. Believing that students are the future leaders of the nation, he declared, they must be aware of the issues of the day.

Delegate Eric Eisenberg pointed to two immediate problems faced by the Congress. He charged that the withdrawal of 30 schools had caused the influential National Staff of the Congress to become more cautious. He also asserted that college delegates are not always elected by the students directly, but are in some cases appointed by the administration or student government, which means they do not necessarily represent the views of the students of their colleges.

The delegates unanimously deplored student apathy towards NSA and urged redoubled efforts to "let the students know about NSA."

It was also suggested that the College's delegation should consist of the President and Vice-President of SG, the NSA coordinator, and the editors of the student newspapers as well as the regularly elected delegates.

Fourteen Contest Seats In Special SG Election

Fourteen candidates will vie for seven Student Council vacancies in a special election next week.

One of the candidates, Eric Eisenberg, was temporarily disqualified Tuesday when Elections Agency Chairman Barry Domber was informed by the Registrar that Eisenberg was actually a member of the Class of '64.

When informed of his disqualification Tuesday night, Eisenberg declared that a mistake had been made, noting that he has only ninety credits, not the ninety four required for membership in the Senior Class.

Eisenberg's candidacy was disallowed yesterday when the Registrar's Office admitted that a mistake had been made.

Eight hopefuls, Raymond Goldfield, Howard Simon, Jay Becker, Robert Levine, Fred Newdom, Sol Sheinbein, Carl Weitzman, and Eisenberg, will battle for two empty seats in the Class of '65.

In the Class of '67, with three vacancies, there are only two candidates, Gloria Feiman and Linda Eisman. Under SG's constitution,

Union Opposes Parity Plan; Asks Separate Scale for Profs

Although the settlement of the threatened public school teachers' strike probably will result in a pay raise for City University faculty members, the United Federation of College Teachers (UFCT), formed in April, is not entirely happy with the results.

Dr. Israel Kugler, president of the UFCT, Local 1460 of the AFL-CIO, stated that the traditional parity agreement tying college salaries to the public school salaries had several faults and its use now would only "further compound these inequities."

Dr. Kugler was commenting on Board of Higher Education Chairman Gustave Rosenberg's request to Mayor Wagner for a CU faculty pay increase totaling $2.5 million.

Ban The Ban

Any person under legal indictment for a felony or awaiting appeal from a conviction may not discuss any phase of the indictment and/or conviction.

Three speakers under Federal indictment for visiting Cuba this summer in violation of the State Department ruling, have been banned from campuses of the City University. The most recent, Philip Luce, was denied permission to address the Eugene V. Debs Club at the College. The General Faculty statement above was the basis for the refusal.

This ruling, it seems to us, is a clear violation of the democratic principle which presumes a man innocent until proven guilty. Neither Mr. Luce, nor Steven Martinot, who was banned from speaking at Queens College, nor Levi Laub, who was banned from speaking at Brooklyn College, has yet been convicted of any crime. Still they are denied the right to speak on campus, a right guaranteed any person invited by "a student organization in good standing, whether his point of view is thought to be congenial or repugnant."

There are two arguments usually used by those who defend the ban, against persons under judicial consideration. The first is that he should not be allowed to use the campus as a soap box from which to prejudice the jury; the second is that anything he says may tend to incriminate him—hence the ban is really an instrument for his own protection. The latter argument is easily disposed of; surely it is up to the person involved to decide whether he wishes to endanger himself. The first argument appears to be more tenable. It, however, does not apply in this instance. These speakers are involved in a test case which, in all probability, will be decided by the Supreme Court. The students who visited Cuba this summer do not dispute the fact that they disobeyed the State Department ruling. There is no jury to prejudice. Certainly, in this case, it would be a greater service on the part of the College to encourage discussion of the issue than to stifle it.

Blind to Justice

It is tragic indeed that the year which has seen the valiant struggles of Southern Negro and Vietnamese students seeking their rights as humans, should also bear witness to the reappearance of Student Government's perennial "vanishing cream," the students as students clause.

The student in the institute of higher learning has, after too many centuries of "ivory tower dwelling," finally come to the realization that a university in its truest sense is not bound by the gates which surround it.

Accepting President Ira Bloom's apparently isolationist viewpoint, one can perhaps understand why he might not wish to correspond with the governor of Georgia. The fact that Student Council defeated a second motion, that which proposed an educational program to inform students at the College of the Americas, Georgia, situation, is completely shocking.

Three students have been sentenced to death because they wish all men to be free. Eight students on the College's Council have refused to allow a presentation of the facts here.

Countless students throughout the world have learned that education is broader than books. When will our Students Government close their books and open their eyes?

Unless otherwise noted all clubs will meet at 12:30 PM today.

O Portrait Of A 'Holler Guy'

Triple Threat Beaver Mike Pesce: Offense, Defense And 'Top Mouth'

Every team, good or bad, in any sport, usually has on it one member commonly known as a "holler guy." There have been some good ones down through the years including men like football's Bobby Lane and baseball's Pee Wee Reese. The College's soccer team has one of this "dangerous breed," dangerous that is for the opposition. His name is Mike Pesce.

Pesce plays one of the halfback positions which in itself is probably one of the toughest spots to play on a soccer field. Unlike the fullbacks, who play only defense, and the forwards, who play solely offense, the halfbacks must be ballhawks and play both offense and defense.

'Old Pro' Gets Butterflies

The halfbacks must be strong, fast and must have a surplus of stamina. The five foot, ten inch Pesce fills the bill. In addition to his speed and fine shot Pesce has an extra good "head." In less mystical terms, Pesce is an expert on heading the ball. He moves the ball with his head with as much precision as many people can when they throw it.

Mike, however, is more valuable to the Beaver booters than his excellent physical attributes indicate. Out on the field, he sends a constant barrage of verbal instructions to his teammates. "I try to get them to give a little extra," Mike explains.

Has A Good "Head"

In last week's opener, Mike pleads guilty to "over-doing it just a little." The battling Beaver added that perhaps he was a little nervous as it was the first game of the season. Hearing that an "old pro" like Pesce still gets butterflies before a game might make some of the sophomores on the squad feel a little more at ease. Even if Mike was nervous, it was hard to tell.

His teammates have a tremendous amount of respect for the handsome Italian and Mike is as high in his praise about the other

Beavers. Mike has played with Beavers Neville Parker, Tom Sieberg and Erwin Fox ever since freshman ball. "It's been a pleasure to play with these guys," Mike is quick to add.

Kopczuk For All-American
The glib halfback also jumped on the Walter Kopczuk bandwagon. The sophomore Beaver goaltender has impressed Pesce to the point where Kopczuk might very well be Mike's choice for All-American if he has a vote.

The Brooklyn game Saturday is extremely important to Mike. Brooklyn is the traditional battle for the Beavers and they haven't beaten the Kingsmen while Pesce has been on the team.

When wished good luck in Saturday's game, Mike, true to the characteristics of a holler guy replied, "We'll win."

All The King's Men...

By HARVEY WEINBERG

The College's soccer team will "come home" this Saturday. At most universities across the nation the "homecoming game," in any other sport, breeds a lot of rallies, parties, bonfires, and what-not.

It would be too late to have a rally for this year's homecoming game but it would be a nice thing to see more than a "gathering" of spectators in Lewisohn Stadium for this match.

Actually it is more than a homecoming game; it might very well be THE game of the season for more than one reason.

For one thing the opponent is Brooklyn College. If this game is anything like some of the past season's contests, then it should be a knock-down, drag-out fight. The other thing is that we have a good team. It might be good enough to make the NCAA tournament but only time will tell. Of course I'm prejudiced and I may be letting my school spirit blind me from reality. One thing I am sure of though—Saturday game with Brooklyn's Kingsmen will help clear the fog, if any, blocking my vision. This game will be a real test of Beaver strength.

Sunday the football Giants will play a crucial game across the river. Even if you wanted to pay money to see it you couldn't. The Beaver soccer affair is equally crucial and there's no admission charge.

The Beaver Varsity Club has come up with the idea of presenting the College's top athlete of the month a trophy. The idea is a wonderful one, and I go along with it except for one thing; I, supposedly, will be one of those who will help select the number one Beaver.

After watching the game at Post last week, I figure there's just one problem—there're too many good athletes at the College for one award.
