Charter Day To Be Revived In Newly Renovated Great Hall

The Chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico will be the featured speaker May 9 at the College's first Charter Day ceremonies in seven years.

Dr. Jaime Benítez will address students and faculty members here at the traditional ceremony which will be Latin-American-United States relations. The celebrates the anniversary of the Free Academy's founding in 1847. The central theme of the celerenovated Great Hall will be decorated with the flags of the ancient universities of the Western Hemisphere for the occasion.

The administration has also stated that a "significant announcement regarding developments of a curricular nature" will be given that day.

President Buell G. Gallagher refused to comment Tuesday on what this development would be, saying only that his address would concern "Latin-American Studies."

Charter Day had been discontinued in recent years because of the unavailability of Great Hall for the ceremonies. The movement of the Technology Library from the ornate auditorium to Steinman Hall made possible its resumption.

OPostnotes...

● Omicron Delta Epsilon, the Economics Honor Society at the College, is also now accepting applications for membership.

● A Symposium on the "Crises in Civil Rights" will be held in the Grand Ballroom Finley at 12:15 PM. Norman Hill, assistant program director of CORE, Percy Sutton former President of NAACP, and Herbert Aptheker will participate.

Costly Publicity Curbed by Council

Looking towards the coming April elections, Student Council last night adopted two publicity-control resolutions.

Council voted to ban the use of commercially printed material and College mailing lists by candidates.

Charging that one council member spent over $50 to promote himself, Miss Schriebstein hoped the measures would "limit the amount of money spent in SG election campaigns."

In another action, Council defeated a bill which would revive classroom voting. Classroom voting had been dropped last spring.

Petition to Abolish SAB Begun; But SAB Won't Mimeograph It

The mimeographing of a petition urging the abolition of the present Student Activities Board system was prevented by the SAB last week.

SAB Vice-Chairman Richard Schweidel refused to approve the petition on the grounds that it did not contain the name of a sponsoring organization or official. If this regulation wasn't followed, Schweidel said, anybody could ask to have things mimeographed by the College.

The author of the petition, Jac Radoff, maintained that a petition is sponsored by the people who sign it. He also cited the SAB Publicity Regulations which provide for "the maintenance of

Court's Decision Yields New Hope On Tuition

The constitutionality of the law which removed mandated free tuition is being questioned by a group of Democratic lawyers.

According to Edward N. Costikyan, the Democratic County Leader for Manhattan, the lawyers are now researching the case. "If it's unconstitutional we'll bring it to court," he said, "but we're not just going in for a political gimmick."

A New York State Court of Appeals decision prompted the investigation. In that case the court ruled, in effect, that irrelevant riders are unconstitutional because they do not give the Legislature any real opportunity to consider the issues.

The provision of the State Education Act mandating free tuition was removed by a rider on the Scholar Incentive Law. The question now is whether that rider was irrelevant.

Previous anti-tuition efforts have been confined to the Legislature

Council Criticized By SG Treasurer

Student Council was severely criticized last night by SG Treasurer Ted Brown.

Brown, a past president of SG, objected to the way Council meetings have been run. He was also critical of SG's objectives.

"I'm rather disgusted with the foolishness of this meeting," he declared, "They spend their time bickering."

"Council is searching for issues," he added, "It lacks direction and understanding of the goals of Student Government."

RESCUED FROM STAR-GAZERS:

'ESP' May Actually Work, Psychology Professor Says

Extrasensory perception may once have fallen into the realm of star-gazers, tea-leaf readers and Grade B movie producers, but according to Gertrude Schmeidler (Psychology) ESP may really work.

Some teachers may get along better with some children as a result of it, Prof. Schmeidler noted in a lecture on the phenomenon Thursday.

Discussing the history of, and experiments in ESP, Prof. Schmeidler cited an experiment in which school children were first asked whether they liked their teacher and were then told to fill in a card the way they thought their teacher had filled in a similar one. At the same time the teachers were asked which pupils they preferred.

When the results were tallied, the children who liked their teacher and who were liked by their teacher scored well above chance expectation. In cases where neither student nor teacher liked each other results were way below chance.

The major factor in these patterns seemed to be a certain rapport between the individuals involved.

One experimenter worked with newly-weds and engaged couples and found their ESP ability together way above average. Another took twins and engaged couples with the same results.

In experiments which she has conducted over the years, Dr. Schmeidler has discovered that those students who think ESP is impossible generally score below average, while those who are open minded or believe in it score above chance.

Woodrow Wilson Grants Given To Six Students At College

The highly coveted Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation grant has been awarded to six students at the College.

Aimed at encouraging students to enter teaching careers, the award covers tuition and fees for the first year of graduate work, plus $1500 for living expenses.

The six winners were former SG President Ted Brown, Nelly Furman, David Graves, Jay R. Hauben, Brian B. McDermott and Walter Scheps.

In addition, twelve students here received honorable mention.

Brown has also been awarded the National Science Foundation fellowship.

Court Reform

The decision to reactivate the student court was received here last Friday with little fanfare or excitement. The Student-Faculty Discipline Committee's action, however, should have an overwhelming influence on the growth of student rights and responsibilities at the College. It is also indicative of the change Dean Willard Blaesser has made in the Department of Student Life.

The first student court at the College did not die, as is generally supposed, when it was amended out of existence by the new SG Constitution. This was merely an official recognition of the administration's refusal to allow the court to function for the last five years. Dependent for its cases upon referrals from the Dean of Students, the court, unlike other judicial bodies, had anything but an overcrowded calendar.

Fortunately, this will no longer be the case. A self-declared advocate of greater student powers, Dean Blaesser has been a primary force behind the re-activation of the court and the Student Faculty Discipline Committee. His efforts are appreciated and we eagerly await their fulfillment and extension.

It's About Time

Tuition is at long last an issue in New York State. For the first time, the general public is aware of the crisis in the state's public educational system. And what made it happen? The very bus trip to Albany from which many students returned despondent, bemoaning the death of the free tuition.

The Associated Press picked up the story. Newspapers all over the state ran front page articles. In the City, whether you read the N. Y. Post or El Diario, you found articles explaining the facts and editorials demanding the return of mandated free tuition. And, perhaps even more important, upstate papers gave the tuition issue a full spread.

Lobbying goes on almost constantly in Albany while the legislature is in session, but everybody — from cab drivers to the legislators themselves — had to admit they had never seen anything like the thousands of aroused students who descended on the Capitol March 11.

The Abrams bill may still be buried in committee, but now the people of this State know it is there. If they can be kept aware, if free-tuition remains an issue, the democratic process will eventually take care of everything else. Even the most adamant upstate Republican Assemblyman is susceptible to pressure from his constituents.

A Common Need

The striking miners of Hazard Kentucky and the foreign students aided by World University Service are separated by thousands of miles and centuries of cultural tradition. They have one thing in common, however, and that is poverty.

The students are particularly pressed for money to continue their education while the children of the striking miners, according to a recent on-the-scene report, do not even have the shoes in which to go to school.

A booth has been set up in the Finley Trophy Lounge to collect funds for the miners; food and clothing may be sent to the Trade Union Solidarity Committee, P.O. Box 1050, G.P.O., Brooklyn 1, N. Y. Students will be asked to contribute to the World University Service at Friday's Student-Faculty basketball game and throughout next week.

Salk, Kornberg and Hofstadter: Who From Federation Is Next?

Science

Nobel Prize-winning scientists Jonas Salk, Arthur Kornberg and Robert Hofstadter were all graduates of the College and many members of the Science Federation hope to follow in their footsteps.

Some of the clubs are active in projects which utilize the members' training. The Amateur Ra-group will be working with other scientific groups observing the eclipse. "We go on field trips and

In order to get first hand information, the Psychology Society has a group of members working in the Manhattan State Mental Hospital.

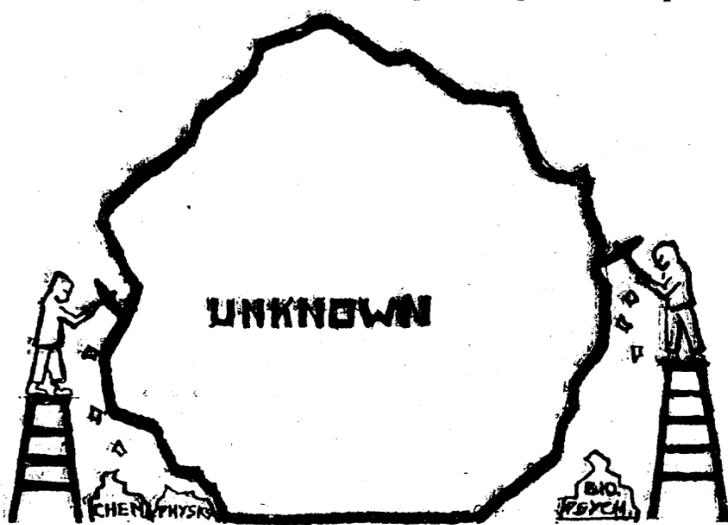

The Science Federation has the difficult task of co-ordinating activities between these highly independent and self-sufficient member societies.

Marvin Megibow, president of the Pre-med society, Caduceus, said, "The Federation, so far, has done nothing at all for us. It has become useless and bureaucratic."

"The Math Society has few problems that require the intervention of a higher organization," said its president, Arnold Reinhold. "We could do without the Federation," he added.

The purpose of the Science Federation was originally, to maintain relations with the Student Activities Board (SAB) for benefits to the member Societies. David Liebowitz, chairman of the Federation said, "The Federation is here to ask SAB for anything the societies want." He admitted that a problem existed in the lack of interest and co-operation shown towards the Federation, because, "most of the Societies don't want anything from SAB."

The Science clubs maintain their own relations with the College's publicity agents and manage projects without assistance. The outcome is that the Science Federation is considered by the majority of the societies to be potentially beneficial, but so far not really necessary.

The College's alumni have made many scientific discoveries. Who knows which collegian, now a member of the Inter-Campus Science Federation, may chip away the next little bit from the unknown.

The Astronomical Society has its own radio station and communicates with "hams" throughout the world. The club and its members have contacted such far out places as the North and South Poles, Zanzibar and Tanganyika.

"A solar eclipse expedition to Maine this summer," is planned by the Astronomical Society. The have meetings in the Observatory in Shepard."

The Biological Society and the American Meteorological Society frequently sponsor speakers at the College while the Baskerville Chemistry Society publishes a journal that helps Chemistry majors keep up with current developments in chemistry.

Teachers To 'Pass' Basketball At Student-Faculty Game Tom'w

Do you want to bounce a ball off your favorite dean's head . . . find out whether Mr. Brownstein has red hair on his legs . . . see Dean Blaesser in shorts?

Such strange desires may be gratified, Friday, during a Student-Faculty basketball game for the benefit of the World University Service (WUS).

House Plan Association, the Inter-Fraternity Council and Student Government are sponsoring the game which will be held in Wingate Gym at 7:30 P.M.

Although they don't play as well as the Harlem Globetrotters, the faculty stands to be as funny.

The faculty crew will include such well-known basketball greats as "Jumpin" Jim Peace, Ed "The Scilt" Sarfaty, "Leapin" Roger Russell, "Pumpin" Pete Spowert, and "Rippin" Robbie Graham.

Referees will be ace whistle-blowers like Dr. Martha Farmer, Dr. Carolyn McCann and Mrs. Lisa Avedon.

The faculty game will follow the second annual HPA-IFC all-star game. The Houseplanners won last year—the first game in a "feud."

President Buell G. Gallagher will also be on hand. The former college hurdler (yes, President Gallagher was an athlete in college) will return to the sports arena to throw up the first ball.

Pershing Rifles Win Drill Competition

There's more to marching than just "Hup 2, 3, 4," and Company A-8 of the College's Pershing Rifles knows it well.

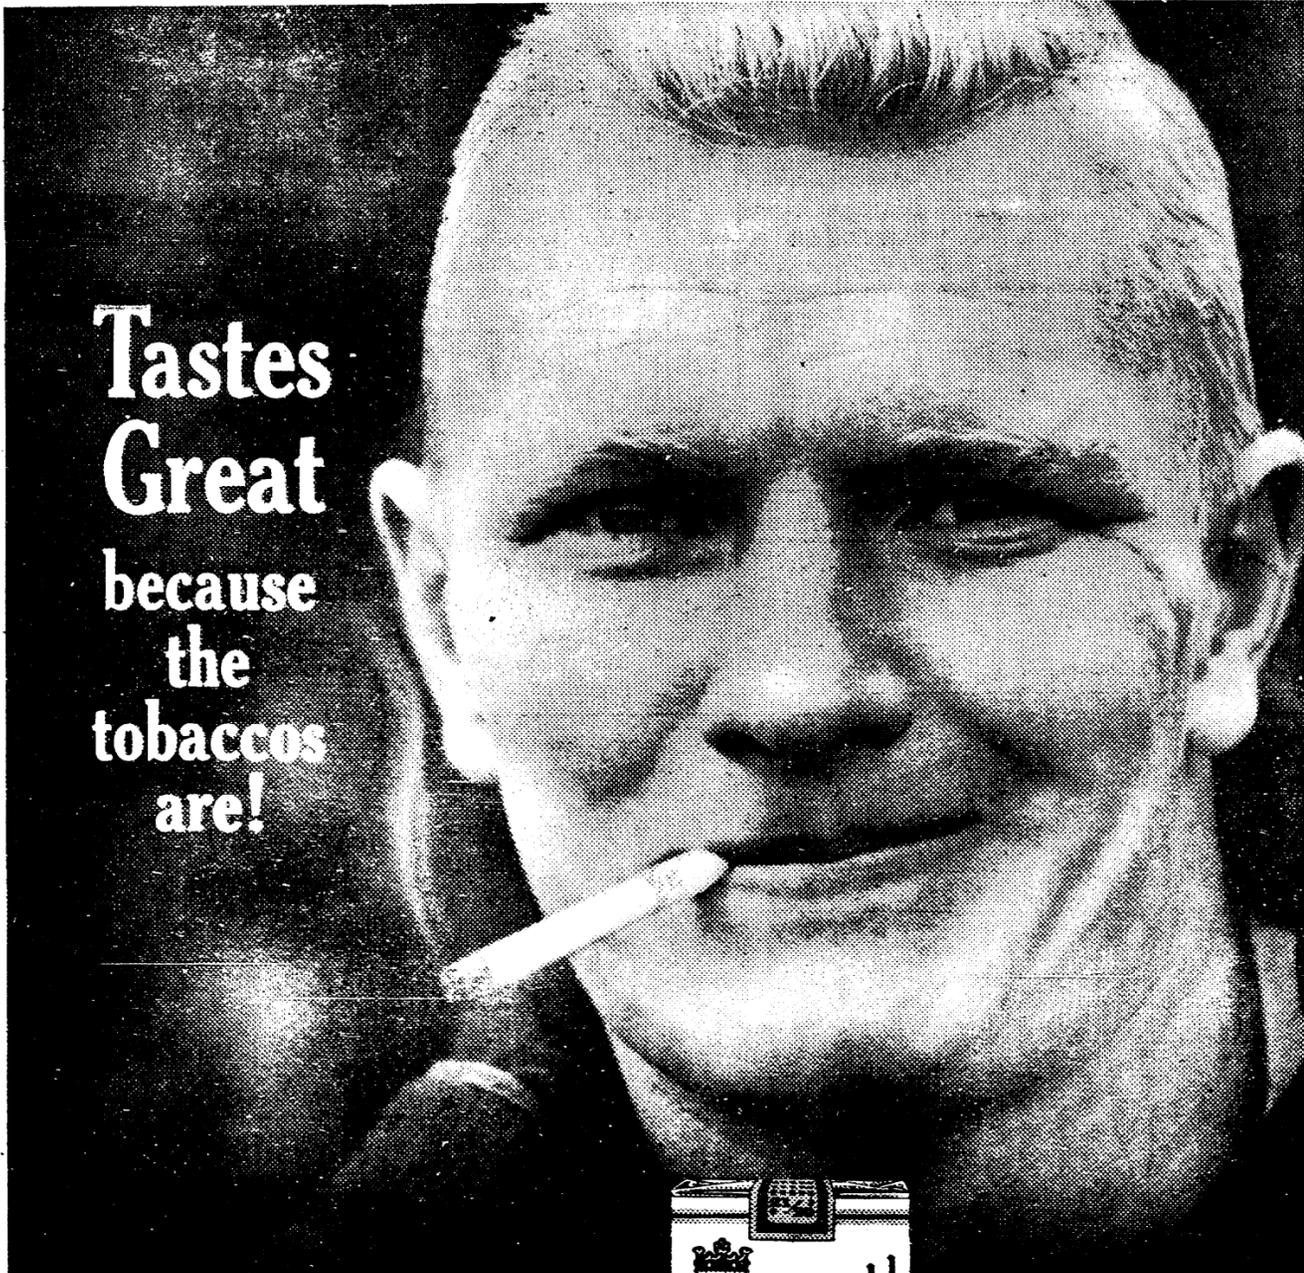

Competing with fifteen top colleges, Company A-8 scored a record high 914 out of a "perfect" 1,000 to take first place and walked off with a nice trophy at the Sixth Annual Drill Meet held at the N. J. National Guard Armory.

The opposing teams were among the best on the eastern seaboard: such schools as the US Coast Guard Academy, NYS Maritime Academy, Rutgers, Seton Hall and Manhattan College all fell before the Beavers.

In drill team competition, each unit performs its own sequence. They must complete their program in under eight minutes and squads are penalized for overtime.

Twenty men under the direction of Cadet Lt. Col. Neil W. Meoni make up Company A-8, which this year celebrates its 23th anniversary as a Pershing Rifles unit.

Company A-8 will put its prestige on the line again when it meets 24 other teams at Pratt University March 30. The Beavers hope to do a repeat performance of their successful showing of March 9.
