The position of Secretary is being sought by Al Kurzawa, Phyllis Horing and Barbara Simon.

Sheldon Sachs and Peter Vogel are candidates for the position of President in tomorrow's IFC election. The Vice-Presidency is being sought by Michael Bromberg, Dennis Hoogerman, Steve Kauffman, Jeff Traub, and Bob Winick.

All HPA and IFC executives hold office for one term.

High-Salary Summer Positions Available For Students Here

By MARK BRODY

Part and full-time summer jobs paying from $1.50 to $2.50 an hour are available to students from limited income families under a new work study program at the College.

The two hundred-fifty-two positions as group and recreation workers, clerical workers, counselors in sleep away camps and aids in rehabilitation centers have been created as a result of the 1964 Economic Opportunities Act. Most of the jobs are located in Manhattan, the Bronx and Brooklyn and all are with non-profit organizations.

The purpose of the program is twofold according to Dr. Harry Meisel (Student Life): to provide funds for qualified students with potential from limited income families to attend college, and to provide additional personnel in non-profit agencies in social welfare, health, education and recreation.

Hot SG Campaign Sees Largest Turnout Ever

The Student Government elections, which started Tuesday, have been marked so far by the heaviest turnout ever. Knowledgeable observers place the total for Tuesday and Wednesday at 2,500. This approximates the overall total cast in last May's election. This term's election will continue today and tomorrow.

Predictions of who is ahead are harder to come by, but a tentative consensus seems to be that Carl Weitzman, head of the Campus First slate (CF), is ahead. This is based on large turnouts on North Campus, where engineers are voting overwhelmingly for Weitzman. Zippert's strength lies with the South Campus voters, who are not voting for him by as large a margin as North Campus voters are for Weitzman.

No one is willing as yet to predict the ultimate outcome of the election, because with two days of voting left, anything can happen.

Paul Biderman
Unopposed For Office

The polls will be open today and tomorrow from 11 AM to 3 PM. South Campus voters can cast their ballots opposite Room 152 Finley, while those on North Campus can vote opposite Knit-Lounge.

Other executive candidates are Marty Kauffman (CF), who is running against Bob Travis for Executive Vice-President; Mark Landis (Z) and Mike Sigall (CF), who are running for Treasurer; Herman Berliner (CF) and Ellen Turkish (Z), who are contesting the Educational Affairs Vice-Presidency; Rubin Margules (CF) and Larry Yermack (Z), who are running for Campus Affairs Vice-Presidency; Paul Biderman (Z), who is

SC Bans Picketing

Student Council voted last night to ban indoor picketing at the College.

The move came after the General Faculty Committee on Student Activities (GFCSA) decided that Student Council would be the sole interpreter of the GFCSA's regulations regarding such demonstrations.

SC also passed the remaining part of next term's budget. The allocations included: fifty-three hundred dollars for Observation Post, and fifty-two hundred for Campus. The recommended allocations for Tech News and SG were also passed.

An OP Editorial:

Dirt

If you cannot run on your record, attack your opponent's; if you cannot attack your opponent's record, attack his character; if you cannot attack his record or his character, lie about both; if you cannot win by honest campaigning, use illegal and unethical practices. Don't bother with the facts. Don't be ethical. And if the dirt is thrown around enough, perhaps the truth will be ignored and forgotten; perhaps you can slip into office, wipe the filth off your hands, stand up, straighten your tie, and call yourself a "student leader."

A small clique of students, purporting to represent the Campus First Slate, have elected to follow this low road to what they hope will be victory in this week's Student Government election.

Zippert Endorsed By Kinsler, Pollack

Former SG President John Zippert has been endorsed in his bid for re-election by Queens College SG President Ronald Pollack, and Michael Kinsler, President of the College's Evening Session Student Government.

Pollack stated, "In my work with John Zippert in the Free Tuition Campaign, I have found him to be one of the most competent and dynamic SG Executives I have encountered."

Kinsler said, "I have worked three and a half years in Evening Session Student Government; as an SG President leaving office I'm aware of the experience and ideas that a term in office give you. He will be able to carry out these ideas with distinction if re-elected."

Kinsler also endorsed SG Treasurer Martin Kauffman for Executive Vice-President, Larry Yermack for Campus Affairs Vice-President, Ellen Turkish for Educational Affairs Vice-President, and Josh Mills and Linder Weber for Council '67.

Openminded?

One of the less virulent pieces of publicity distributed by these ruin-to-rule forces was inserted illegally in Tuesday's issue of Observation Post. It was entitled "Is OP Openminded? Definitely Not!" It claimed that OP was not open minded because it had endorsed John Zippert on March 16. This is true. At that time OP decided that of all the people in Student Government eligible to run, Zippert was the most qualified. We still hold that view.

The leaflet concluded by asking students to ignore OP's endorsements, since they were pre-determined (pre to what it did not say) and "biased."

OP is biased towards candidates with intelligence and imagination. OP is biased against candidates who think Student Government should concentrate all its energies on such projects as field days and benches on Convent Avenue. OP is biased towards a progressive SG, one that will not hesitate to represent the students' interests when representation is needed.

This piece of vicious, illogical propaganda (which did not bear the required registration number) was signed: "The Members of the CAMPUS FIRST Slate."

We wonder if Herman Berliner, Campus First candidate for Educational Affairs Vice-President, actually saw this nonsense, and approved it, as the signature would imply. We do know he spent some of his valuable campaigning time removing the leaflet from copies of OP. We wonder if Clifford Tisser, Campus First candidate for Student Council, wanted OP's endorsements ignored. After all, OP endorsed him. In short, despite the signature on the leaflet, we cannot accuse everybody on the Campus First Slate of having the low ethical standard implied by the campaign being waged in their names. We think that many Campus First candidates sincerely believe in the platform they are running on, and expected an honest, ethical campaign based on that platform. All we can say is that they were morally stupid to run with the presidential candidate who heads their slate.

Goldwater Republican

We say morally stupid because they must have known Carl Weitzman was a Republican activist of the McCarthy-Goldwater school. They must have known he has gyrated from position to position, dependent on the circumstances. They must have known he had supported the speaker ban, which would have resulted in controversial speakers being banned from this campus. They must have realized that Carl Weitzman does not support the principle of Free Higher Education. If they joined the slate without investigating these things, they simply showed a lack of wisdom.

The clique in control of the Campus First slate has asked the student electorate to ignore OP's endorsements. OP would ask the students of this institution of higher learning to read the scurilous publicity of the Campus First Slate, and judge for themselves whether the arguments presented are fair and factual, or whether the point is made through implication and innuendo. Discount 50% of the facts, if any are presented, as untrue or distorted. We think you will come to the same conclusion we have: publicity emanating from the leadership of the Campus First slate can be ignored.

It should be.

You're A Hypocrite

By DON WEINGARTEN

Hypocrisy, in whatever form it appears, seems quite at home here at the College. Of late, the vast majority of students specializing in English have exploited yet another opportunity to prove themselves in this respect.

I address this column to you, Mr. "English Major."

I address you, who have stood in front of Finley Hall and demanded student involvement in matters of curriculum. You are two-faced.

I address you, who have been too lazy to draft proposals or conduct debates; who have but lamented to your friends in the snack bar about the sorry state of a school where students and faculty cannot work more closely for the benefit of both.

Early in the course of last semester, there was formed, at the suggestion of the English Department, a student-faculty liaison group, the English Majors Advisory Board (EMAB) whose aims were to be the following:

- To bring about an effective and efficient medium for the exchange of ideas and recommendations between the faculty of the English Department and the students concerned with English courses at the College.

- To provide a forum for student views and opinions regarding English courses currently offered, or desired by students.

- To serve as an informational body which could draft, publish, and dispense the multitude of pertinent data which is of inestimable value, although usually inaccessible to students.

- To serve informally as a forum for the exchange of student-faculty ideas concerning the proposed curriculum changes now being considered by the department.

You had a chance, "English Major."

You had a chance at better student-faculty relations.

You had a chance to have a real, meaningful, constructive say in the administration of a department which gracefully asked for your views and worked honestly and straightforwardly with this committee.

But the vast majority of you were, of course, too busy. You were snowed under with schoolwork, had papers, tests, and oh-so-very important club meetings to attend.

Somehow, no matter how well publicized the meetings were, the turnout was small. But everyone we spoke to wished us luck, and declared that they were with us. It was a wonderful thing we were doing.

But at the first meeting we had 27 people, at the second we had 3 and at the third, 6.

And so a small core of us — myself, Ann Epstein, and Ron Platzer — have tried to do the committee's work. We have met with the faculty members on the committee, Professors Merton, Hamalian and Mirollo, and with the Department Chairman, Professor Volpe. We have drafted a fact sheet concerning vital areas in the English and Liberal Arts curricula of which students have not previously been informed. That sheet has been officially approved by the Department. We have consulted with the Department on their proposed curriculum changes, and have made suggestions based on opinions gleaned at our first meeting.

Of course, we can't be sure of how representative our opinions are — there were only about 30 people at the meeting, you know.

Those recommendations, incidentally, are being considered by the Department.

We are tired of playing the little red hen for you. EMAB is too large a concept to be driven by so few. Potentially, it could be one of the greatest tributes to student-faculty cooperation in the College; a valuable asset to both sides. But no one is interested enough.

It is great fun to belong to a club. There are parties, and functions, and the meetings are filled with either impressive rhetoric or boisterous jollity. Occasionally, you have convinced yourself that you were performing a valuable function.

Perhaps you picketed for a voice in curricular changes?

Was the picket fun? Did you all have a good time in the bar afterwards?

You are hypocrites.

Unless (and I don't believe it will) reading this brings about some sudden realization on your part, EMAB is dead. We will let it die.

This is neither a threat nor an ultimatum. The choice is up to you. Show this to those in your English classes, if you wish, that they too may choose.

There is now in the English office, Room 310 Mott, a sheet upon which you may, if you wish, enter your name.

If, and only if, there are 100 or more names on the list by 5:00 PM next Wednesday, May 19, EMAB will meet at 12:30 on Thursday, May 20th. Only if there are 100 or more names.

Do not sign if you do not intend to come. If there are 100 names, we will expect 100 people. The room in which the meeting will be conducted will be printed at the top of the form you must sign.

But we believe that there will be no meeting. We believe that EMAB is dead. After all . . . the form is way up on the third floor of Mott, and we aren't being very nice about inviting you, and finals are coming up.

There are probably some good club meetings going on, too. . . .

It's your choice.

Huntley at Charter Day Today

The College will celebrate its 118th birthday today at the annual Charter Day ceremonies beginning at 11:30 AM in Great Hall.

All eleven o'clock classes will be dismissed at 11:30 AM.

NBC news broadcaster Chet Huntley will deliver the Charter Day address and President Buell Gallagher will preside at the event. Faculty members and graduating seniors who have received academic awards will be honored.

Charter Day commemorates the fateful signing into existence of the College by Governor John Young on May 7, 1847. This move was later approved by a three-to-one majority of New York City's voters in a special referendum.

Job Chances Seen as 'Generally Excellent' In Labor Department Survey of June Grads

Job prospects for June college graduates were rated "generally excellent" by the Labor Department.

The department's annual survey indicated the demand was highest for graduates in scientific and technical fields. Most sought are those holding degrees in electrical, chemical and mechanical engineering, in chemistry, physics and mathematics.

Employment opportunities for those with degrees in accounting also were described as excellent. And, the report noted, "One of the most encouraging aspects of the current placement situation is the increased demand for liberal arts graduates."

According to the survey, engineering continues to be one of the best-paying fields for new college graduates, with starting salaries generally between $575 and $650 a month.

The starting salary for an engineer with a master's degree generally is between $700 and $800 a month and is considerably higher for an engineer with a degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

In other fields the report gave this outlook for employment prospects:

PHYSICAL SCIENCES—Very good for graduates with degrees in chemistry, physics and astronomy and with new graduates at all degree levels being sought by industry and Government. Starting salaries for graduates with the bachelor's degree in physical sciences generally is in the range of $550 to $625 a month, and is considerably higher for those with graduate degrees.

HEALTH PROFESSIONS — Opportunities described as very favorable this year and excellent for physicians completing their training this year. Great demand for professional nursing graduates, favorable prospects for optometry graduates and good opportunities for veterinary graduates.

BUSINESS—Accounting graduates among the most sought after. Supply of qualified applicants well below the needs. Increased demand for business administration and liberal arts graduates for sales representatives and sales training.

TEACHING — Opportunities very good. Demand for elementary teachers strong.

LAW — Good opportunities for graduates from widely recognized law schools and those at the top of their class.

JOURNALISM — Numerous openings with newspapers as well as advertising, public relations and trade and technical publications. Particularly strong demands for writers with background in electronics and communications. Starting salaries $400 a month or more.

SOCIAL SCIENCES — Those with graduate training have good employment opportunities, especially in college teaching.

CIVIL SERVICE — Federal departments and agencies plan to recruit more than 15,000 well-qualified young men and women.

PEACE CORPS — Corps is growing, and graduates, especially with liberal arts background, provide the corps back bone.

Correction...

Regents Awards Outside of NYS OKed in Albany

Both the New York State Senate and the Assembly passed only slightly differing versions of a bill, Monday, that would permit Regents Scholarships winners to receive their awards at out-of-state schools.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller has already said that he would veto any legislation of this type.

State Assemblyman Moses Weinstein sponsored one version of the bill providing that the State Board of Regents should allow 15 per cent of the scholarship winners to attend out-of-state colleges. A second restriction was that the schools could not discriminate on the basis of race, creed, color or national origin. While the Senate passed bills are being considered in the Assembly's Ways and Means Committee, Weinstein said he was hopeful the Senate would pass his version in a few weeks.

Chairman Samuel Greenberg of the Senate Finance Committee said that he had been assured by Senate Majority Leader Joseph Zaretzki that the two bills passed by the Senate and the Weinstein bill would all be passed. He noted that this would leave the choice of bills up to Governor Rockefeller.

Limited Use of Pep Pills During Exam Periods Not Considered Harmful by Medical Officer

By Collegiate Press Service
WASHINGTON — Using pep pills for one or two days around exam time does not seriously impair health or performance, according to a Food and Drug Administration medical officer.

Dr. Norman Alberstadt discussed the physical effects of using stimulants and sedatives in a seminar of the annual meeting of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators.

Among the stimulants are amphetamines, including amphetamine itself, methamphetamine, desoxyephedrine, and phenmetrazine. Amphetamine drugs are also known as "bennies," "co-pilots," "hearts," and "footballs." Among the sedatives are barbiturates, such as phenobarbital, pentobarbital, and amobarbital. Barbiturate drugs are also known as "red birds," "goof balls," "yellow jackets," or "blue havens."

Amphetamines are prescribed chiefly to cut appetite and relieve depression, Alberstadt said. Their effect is influenced by the personality and mental state of the user. "Generally, a normal dose produces wakefulness, alertness, increased initiative, elevation of mood, talkativeness, and increased motor activity," he said.

Studies of individuals who do not use amphetamine habitually but who take normal doses for two or three days show that the drug is most effective in "mitigating the effects of fatigue on psychomotor performance," Alberstadt reported. These studies, however, give "no assurance that amphetamines taken daily for one or two weeks of hard work and minimal amount of sleep would be equally effective in avoiding fatigue, or that they are not harmful to bodily health when used in this way. When non-fatigued subjects are studied, psychomotor performance is not raised strikingly above normal," he continued.

Both amphetamines and barbiturates have been restricted by government regulation because of hazards — in extreme cases even death — that could result from their excessive or continual use.

Taking barbiturates the night before an exam would not be a good idea, according to Alberstadt, for "there is impairment of psychomotor performance for several hours after awakening." Another side effect of longer-acting barbiturates, such as phenobarbital, is a "hangover," consisting of lassitude, dizziness, and gastrointestinal symptoms the morning after the drug has been taken.

Horowitz Almost Evades Coed
Hours of waiting on line appeared to be wasted as Judy Harris heard a gloating policeman shout, "No more tickets, all sold out, everyone go home."
Last Sunday afternoon Judy, an art major at the College, was waiting for standing room tickets to hear Vladimir Horowitz play at Carnegie Hall. The world renowned pianist was giving his first recital after a twelve year retirement. All the seats to the concert had been sold out weeks ago, within two hours after they went on sales.
When the standing room line began to move, Judy was hopeful, but she really didn't think that she would make it in. Then the line grew shorter and shorter. Her excitement rose higher and higher. But when the policeman made his announcement hope turned to disappointment, depression, despair. Judy was 135th in line. 112 tickets had been put up for sale.
Judy was despondently waiting around when a woman suddenly came up to her and offered to sell her a ten dollar seat for twelve dollars. Judy grabbed up the offer immediately. She was ecstatic. She had gotten a choice seat to the concert when a moment ago it appeared she would get nothing.
People who had been standing on line all night, including one boy she met who had slept in his truck, had merely gotten standing room. Judy really couldn't believe what had happened.
She was overwhelmed by the precision of Horowitz's technique and the clarity with which he played each note. Her seat was so good that she could see his fingers as they raced across the keyboard.
Not only did Judy get to see Horowitz but she also appeared on television. The story of how she got her ticket appeared on the 11 o'clock news on Channel 2. Her spot came on right after one about a penguin who escaped in a subway car.
Judy had planned to get tickets when seats were first put on sale. However she had a History mid-term that day and by the time she could arrive at the theater the seats were sold out.

Tennis Team Defeats NYU, 5-4; Doubles Matches Decide Outcome

By JERRY HOENIG

Defeating NYU 5-4 yesterday, the College's tennis team picked up its eighth victory of the season against only one defeat.

The deciding match was that between Joel Litow and Pete Schaffer for the Beavers and Ira Lewis and Alan Weinberger for the Violets. Litow and Schaffer won 6-1 and 6-3.

The other doubles win for the Beavers was taken by Marty Deitch and Arnie Garfin against Don Henderson and Rich Price. The scores in this match were also 6-1 and 6-3.

The Beavers' lone doubles loss was at the hands of the Violets' Dave Segal and Harry Greenberg. They defeated Chuck Mattes and Pete Willman 6-3, 5-7, 7-5. Mattes and Willman blew a four game lead in the final set.

The meet was decided by the doubles combination, as the match was tied 3-3 at the end of the singles play.

As for the singles competition, Arnie Garfin turned in the Beavers' most impressive performance. He won his match in two sets without losing one game to his opponent, Ira Lewis.

Pete Willmann did not have much more trouble as he handily defeated his opponent, Harry Greenberg, 6-3 and 6-2.

However, Elliot Simon did not have such an easy time. He had to go to three sets to earn his victory, defeating Alan Weinberger 7-5, 2-6, 9-7.

Marty Deitch, the Beavers' number one man had extremely tough competition in NYU's Dave Segal. Segal defeated Deitch 6-1 and 6-0.

Joel Litow, who had previously not lost a set for the Laverder all season, dropped his match, 6-4 and 6-2 to Rich Price.

The Beavers close out their season on Friday against Pratt on the Finley Center courts.

Diamondmen To Face LIU; Team Cast in Role of Spoiler

By KEN GELLER

Although the College's baseball team has lost all chance of winning the Metropolitan College Baseball Conference title this year, the Beavers will play a decisive role in deciding who does capture the coveted championship. The Diamondmen's final game of the season, Saturday, pits them against powerful Long Island University, who, by virtue of their 7-3 loss to Manhattan yesterday, are tied with the Jaspers for the Conference lead. Both Manhattan and LIU have one game remaining on their schedules, so a loss by either team would seriously endanger its winning the title.

Beaver Coach Sol Mishkin, eager to play the role of spoiler if not that of champion, will probably send his ace right-hander Howie Smith to the mound against LIU. The Blackbirds will counter with their standout hurler Don Cook, who is reportedly being sought by Major League ballclubs. Cook has started every league game thus far this year for LIU.

Macombs Dam Park, where the game will be played, will almost surely be filled, if not by fans then by scouts. It will be interesting to observe how the Beavers play before a large crowd, something which they have not seen all season at their home field because of student apathy.

The Diamondmen currently sport a 4-4 record in league play.

If Smith does pitch, it will mark his last appearance on the hill for the College. The Senior pitched the only no-hit game in the College's history, when he defeated Hunter last year. Game time is 1:00.
