William F. Ryan Condemns Tuition

Congressman William F. Ryan (Dem., Man.), has wired his support of Free Higher Education to Student Government.

In a telegram received yesterday, Congressman Ryan stated, "Sorry I cannot attend [the Open Hearing]. You have my wholehearted support in your campaign for continued free tuition in public colleges."

The legislator also pointed out the benefits of the recently-passed Federal Aid to Higher Education Act.

All colleges, tuition and tuition-free alike, are eligible for funds for construction and expansion of new facilities.

Bowker Backs Finance Study Group; Gallagher's Plan Supported By Alumni

President Urges 'Rededication'

Members of the College's Alumni Association reaffirmed their complete support of the principles of Free Higher Education at their 85th annual dinner last night at the Hotel Astor.

Master of ceremonies David Kosh, president of the Association, read a message from Comptroller-elect Mario Procaccino, an alumnus, affirming that he was "with us in the fight for free tuition." Other well-known supporters present included Bronx Borough President Herman Badillo, Gustave Rosenberg, Chairman of the Board of Higher Education, and Orin Lehman, a member of the New York City Commission for Public Higher Education.

"We are united in our efforts as never before," Kosh asserted.

Dr. Albert H. Bowker Agrees To Committee

Students, Faculty and Alumni To Form CU Committee

Formation of a study committee on financing the City University was agreed to last night by City University Chancellor Albert H. Bowker.

The committee, which would be comprised of students, faculty, alumni, and administrators, was suggested at a special meeting between Dr. Bowker and City University student leaders. Chancellor Bowker suggested, however, that such a proposal should properly come from the Mayor.

The committee would study "all administrative proposals on City University policy. It would prepare reports after consultation with the legislature, civic groups, and student groups," according to SG President Carl Weitzman.

President Buell G. Gallagher agreed to the concept in comments made before the Student Council last week.

A critical examination of the new Gallagher plan will be made tonight at an Organizational Advisory Board meeting to which Professors Bernard Bellush (History) and Stanley Feingold (Political Science) have been invited. Seymour Weissman of the Alumni Association was also asked to attend.

Federal aid to the City University is "almost probably" precluded by the substitution of his original proposal with the new plan, although it is legally "a sticky wicket," Dr. Bowker said.

Ohrenstein Backs State Aid For City U. In Lieu Of Tuition

If state aid to the City University (CU) is not increased, "we will have to examine other alternatives" for the financing of the CU, said State Senator Manfred Ohrenstein, chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Higher Education yesterday, in an exclusive interview with Observation Post. Senator Ohrenstein withheld comment on whether or not a tuition charge would be among the "other alternatives."

The Senator said that the state should greatly increase its aid to the CU. The new Administrative Council plan, however, was criticized by Ohrenstein on the grounds that it provided a decrease in City support for the CU. According to this plan, the city will reduce its support of the CU from $35 million to $20 million. Ohrenstein holds that the City should maintain its support of the CU at its current level.

Senator Ohrenstein was non-committal on the phase of the Administrative Council plan calling for an increase in state aid to the CU from $36 million to $71 million dollars. While admitting that some additional funds were needed from the state, Senator Ohrenstein said that the actual amount would be specified only after committee hearings.

Ohrenstein went on to reaffirm his commitment to mandated free tuition and pledged to fight for the restoration of the Free Tuition Mandate, repealed in 1961.

Senator Ohrenstein also condemned the Bowker plan, proposed a week ago by the Chancellor of the CU. The plan called for the imposition of a "paper tuition" at all units of the CU.

Ohrenstein said that the tuition plan, which would be offset by scholarships by the State and the City, "full of unanswered questions" as to its financing.

The plan announced over the weekend by Governor Rockefeller to build five four-year colleges in the City, under the State University, was also condemned by Ohrenstein.

Professors Hit Gallagher Plan; Angered At Faculty Exclusion

Criticism of the method and contents of the Administrative Council's new proposal have been leveled by several faculty members.

President Buell G. Gallagher Criticized By Faculty

Professor Stanley Feingold, (Political Science), who spoke at the open hearing Monday, felt it was extremely disrespectful to the faculty, students, and alumni to completely ignore them in the drafting of the plan.

Professor Feingold added that the only possible reason for acceptance of the plan by the State Legislature would be the "gimmick" of the City's appropriations connected to the magic number of $400. This is identical to the amount presently being paid by the students at the State University as tuition. "Although the city appropriation would not be considered tuition, its resemblance to tuition might influence the Legislature to accept the new plan," he said in explaining its rationale.

Professor Feingold offered three constructive proposals, but added that they "were no magic formula." His first proposal was to have the graduate studies taken over by the State University. There would be no problem of tuition, as the Graduate Student already pays tuition. This was necessary, he asserted, because the Graduate School is draining funds and equipment from the undergraduate budget without fully reimbursing them.

The second proposal made by Professor Feingold was the institution of a scholarship fee. He claimed that free tuition could no longer maintain the City University as it was originally conceived. "Free tuition is a means, not an end," he said, adding that the end is opening the doors of higher education to all, not merely to the middle class. He proposed that a charge of about $100 be paid by some students, to provide scholarships to those who could not otherwise afford to attend even a free college.

Weitzman Tactics Assailed

SG President Carl Weitzman Comes Under Attack

In an interview with OP last night Reich claimed that Weitzman was "deliberately" postponing the elections because he is "desperately searching for candidates to fill his slate (Campus First)." Several candidates on Weitzman's slate have decided not to run, according to Reich.

Reich further claimed that Weitzman was violating the by-laws by abusing the power Student Council had given him to postpone the election so as not to interfere with the Free Tuition campaign. According to the SG by-laws the special elections are to be held no later than the last week of October.

Reich added that he felt that Weitzman was "placing his ambitions before his responsibilities as President . . . Carl Weitzman has duly shrugged his responsibility as SG chief executive to seek his personal glory."

Weitzman promised to answer the charges at Council tonight if Reich would repeat them.

"total disregard for the intelligence of Student Government and Student Council."

"We must not allow free tuition to be destroyed piece by piece," he added, emphasizing that "free tuition is not negotiable. The fight is just beginning ... he warned. We must remain "free of attempts by the Governor to bludgeon the colleges into submission."

Referring to the outbreak of adverse public opinion which greeted last week's disclosure of the Bowker "shadow tuition" proposal, Dr. Gallagher lamented that it was "incomprehensible to me that anyone who has known me over the past 13 years could have believed that they read."

Vector Cancels Out

By Don Weingarten

There is a fundamental quality which is present in all good lay scientific Journals, from the elite "Scientific American" to "Electronics Illustrated," and which has been present in various degrees in past issues of "Vector," engineering magazine here at the College. Unfortunately, this term's effort lacks it almost entirely.

The ability to state meaningfully a technical thesis of interest, both to the active engineering student and the science-oriented layman is admittedly quite a talent. Nonetheless, of the three major articles in the issue, only one is within the grasp of the vast majority of the non-engineering, non-physics community.

Michael Brownstein, in his article "Computer Simulating of Traffic," discusses the recent application of computer analysis to problems of traffic flow, in an attempt to find solutions to such problems as best optimal timing of traffic lights, determination of speed limits, and road and freeway design.

Mr. Brownstein, and he alone, has written the type of article which belongs in a schoolwide publication. Where he discusses the technical aspects of the actual method by which the computers work, he somehow avoids the lengthy formulae and unexplained technical jargon which fog the clarity and detract from the value to the layman of so many other attempts.

Furthermore, there is an attempt made to maintain at all times a linkage to practical application of the methods, thus avoiding the "Theoretical Syndrome" ... a tendency to cling to figures and diagrams rather than words and descriptions.

On the other side of the coin, engineers will still find value and interest in a fairly deep exploration of yet another field opening to their efforts. The article reads, for one, like an explanation and not a textbook.

The other two articles, however, "Tunnel Diodes," by Solomon Rosenberg, and "The Internal Combustion and Gas Turbine Engines," by Abraham M. Frydman, suffer heavily from a strongly engineer-based bias. It is doubtful, in fact, that Rosenberg's article would be of interest to any students other than Electrical Engineers, Physics Majors, and the occasional very-well-read layman. The technical terms and mathematical formulae which stud this article sound its death-knell for fully two-thirds of the student body.

Frydman's text, while it suffers from the same maladies as Rosenberg's, has at least the grace to admit the fact. The "blurb" above the article terms it "A detailed analysis of both engines' operation ..."

Far more important, however, and the most valuable part of this article, albeit only to the technically initiated, is the innovation which the author brings for the first time in years to the Vector—an element of original research. Included in the article is a report of experiments by Frydman into the effects of vibration on a gasoline engine.

Perhaps the best consistent example of true "Technical Writing"— cogent, clear, and of interest to both intellectual communities — has been the "Engineering Highlights" section of Vector. As always, this issue's briefly written articles on recent developments (perhaps because lack of space demands brevity, and brevity precludes excess technicality) will, if nothing else, draw the attention and approval of the purchaser.

It is highly unfortunate that the issue cannot be recommended to any but the Engineering student. But the contributors, and perhaps more particularly the editors, have yet to learn that they are writing a college magazine, and not a technical journal. It seems a hard lesson.

the first time, Dr. Bowker revealed, while the legislature has allocated funds to pay the interest on State Dormitory Authority bonds. The law charging tuition at the State University provides that the funds be used only to pay off the bonds.

The Chancellor said that Gustave Rosenberg, Chairman of the Board of Higher Education, has known about the Bowker plan since September. Rosenberg was quoted in the November 10 issue of the New York Times, as being "shocked" at the proposal when it was revealed last week. The plan appeared in the October 25 minutes of the BHE meeting, he charged.

Bellush and Feingold Comment

Professor Feingold's third proposal was that there be a revision in the present Regents Scholarship Program. As is presently the case, scholarships are given out by county, thereby considerably reducing the number of scholarships available in the New York area. Under his plan, scholarships would be distributed on a statewide basis, according to "merit rather than geography."

The plan presented by Dr. Gallagher does not meet the question of the financial crisis, Professor Bellush declared. It will have to be adopted by the State Legislature, and the history of the State Legislature is one of "hostility toward the City University as a free institution of higher learning."

Professor Bellush asserted that last week Dr. Gallagher was prepared to vigorously defend the old plan as the only means to maintain free tuition at the City University. This week Dr. Gallagher vigorously endorsed the new plan as the best way to maintain the free tuition status of the CU.

"I do not think this plan (the new proposal) is sufficiently thought out and studied by those who made it," Professor Bellush added.

The faculty is "not asking to assume decision-making, but asking to assume the responsibility of cooperation with the President."

Wonderful Town Not Wonderful

By Rona Schwab

The best part of last weekend's production of "Wonderful Town" was the silent film at the beginning of the play. Listening to the tinny strains of the accompanying piano and watching the scenes of New York from the lens of talented camera-man Edward English was a very refreshing beginning to what one had hoped would be a very refreshing play.

Unfortunately, the freshness died when the movie ended and was only regained sporadically by one or two outstanding performers.

"Wonderful Town" can be a very delightful musical. The story of two girls from Ohio who have come to New York to "make good," it has good songs, good characterizations, good dialogue, and a chance for the director to stage some very good scenes.

Director Frank Davidson (Speech) did an excellent job with the staging of the play. The scenes flowed into one another, and the actors were placed in such a way as to give the play the appearance of a Broadway musical rather than an amateur college production.

But only in appearance was the play professional. Most of the acting and singing were strictly below par even on an amateur level. Barbara Miller, as Eileen, was most disappointing. There is no doubt that she had put a great amount of effort into trying to appear as the naive hick from Ohio—perhaps a little too much effort. She overacted throughout the entire play.

M. R. Trudel was only a little better as Ruth. Very unconvincing in the first act, she took off her glasses in the second act and obviously threw off some of her nervousness with them. More relaxed, her acting improved to the point where this reviewer was sorry that she hadn't been less tense earlier. She might then have worked herself up to the point of being very good by end of the show.

If the songs were good, most of the singing wasn't. Sheldon Fishman's voice was one of the few pleasures of the play—even if he did ham up his dialogue. Robert Blitzer, as Wreck, did a fine job with singing "Pass the Football."

Perhaps what was most upsetting was the fact that the play was turned into a "night for everyone." Extra songs were added to accommodate those who didn't have songs in the original score and whose performances proved that they shouldn't have had them in this production either. Anyone who was anything of any importance in the play had his own little "bit."

Themistocles Sapountzakis gave a fine performance when his turn came to entertain. Extremely graceful in his clumsiness, he gave a very convincing performance as Frank Lippencott. If the viewer didn't try to believe that a nineteen year old looking boy was manager of a large drug-store, he was sure to be most entertained by the show-stealing Sapountzakis. His imitations of James Cagney, Peter Lorre and Cary Grant were quite good; however, this reviewer would like to know who was responsible for including the flat jokes about the College with which Lippencott attempted to entertain the audience toward the end of the play.

The only other fine performances that stood out in this play were given by Norman Parker, Arnold Warmbrand, Randi Frankel, and Sue Kimms. Credit must be given to Nina Pakula for her make-up job and Richard Natkowski for his fresh and lively choreography.

But even the fine performances of these few people couldn't prevent the play from sounding just as tinny as the piano accompaniment to the silent movie at the start of the program.

Basketball Season Nears Opening; Team Relies On Strong Backcourt

"We've got a backcourt that can go with anyone around the country," said basketball coach Dave Polansky as his team worked out yesterday. The squad is now practicing for its season opener against Adelphi, only two weeks away. Coach Polansky has reason to expect his backcourt to be outstanding as in senior Alan Zuckerman he has one of the best around player. Polansky thinks Zuckerman, who last year made second team little man's All-America, has the potential to average over twenty points a game.

Mike Pearl, who completes the backcourt, has the talent to ensure that the opposing teams do not gang up on Zuckerman. Pearl flashed great ability yesterday, especially on several outstanding driving lay-ups. Both Zuckerman and Pearl are only 5-10, however, and cannot be counted to add rebounding to their scoring and ball-handling skills.

had rebounding skill and good defensive ability, but his offensive moves, foul shooting, and general court know-how have left much to be desired. Should Eisemann improve so as to reach his potential, and he has demonstrated signs of doing so, he'll provide the team with the really good big man it needs.

Aside from Eisemann and Kissman, the squad has no height at all. Should one of them get hurt the team would be in deep trouble.

Pat Vaillance, John Clifton and Dave Schweid round out Coach Polansky's top seven. Vaillance, a six-foot junior forward, has been playing very well, much better than had been expected of him. Clifton, another six-foot forward, has always been considered to have worlds of potential, and the team would be helped greatly if he could fulfill it.

Schweid is another one of our outstanding guards. At 5-8 his size is a drawback, but he makes up for it in speed. His quickness will be especially useful in breaking a full-court press, such as the one Adelphi may use against us.

The question-mark of the team is the forecourt, where starters 6-6 Barry Eisemann and 6-4 Bob Kissman return from last year's squad. Kissman has shown mark-

LIU Booters Win Met Soccer Title

By slaughtering C. W. Post 12-0 Saturday, Long Island University's soccer team won the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Soccer Title for the second consecutive year. The Blackbirds finished with a record of six wins and one tie in league competition. The only game that LIU did not win was against the Beavers, whom they tied, 0-0.

The Blackbirds finished with thirteen points, nine ahead of New York University.

In winning the title, LIU compiled a fantastic record. In league competition they scored forty-four goals and allowed none. In their over-all play, they

Stein Fund Gives Assistance To College's Injured Athletes

The first home game of the College's basketball team's schedule is known as the "Stein Fund" game. Few of the College's students, though, know what the Stein Fund is and what service it performs.

The Board of Higher Education, the governing body of the four city colleges, doesn't consider a student's participation in varsity athletics a part of his regular college education, and, for that reason, will not accept the responsibility for his injuries in such athletic activities. The Board will not permit funds from a compulsory student fee to pay for his hospital and other medical expenses.

With the College unable to supply money for this purpose some independent means had to be found to compensate the injured boys. Before 1939, a College physician, Dr. Sidney A. Stein, '88, generously gave his valuable medical services gratuitously to all the Beaver athletes whenever they required assistance. He was a man known, respected, and admired by everyone connected with sports at the College.

In 1939 Doctor Stein passed away while sitting on the bench watching a football game between the Beavers and Long Island University.

Soon after the untimely death of this great humanitarian, the Stein Fund was started by a small group of students and faculty. Members of the doctor's family donated a large sum of money to keep the fund moving, and it hasn't stopped since.

The famous "Allagaroo" cheer is known from coast-to-coast as the Beavers' victory cry. Nothing is known of the origin of "Allagaroo" except that it was composed by a member of the class of 1911 in that year. No one seems to know what an "Allagaroo" was but many theories have been advanced, some less credible than others.

The College's Tug-Of-War team took second place in the first intercollegiate meet held in 1887. One of the stars of the team in its early years was a tall young student named Bernard Baruch.

Baruch once told the story of the injury which led to his deafness. Known as "Home Run Lefty," he was a member of the College's baseball team in 1888. The team was playing Manhattan College. "The bases were loaded and I was up," he recalled. "The fans yelled 'Hit a home run.' I hit a long ball. The three men scored and I collided with the opposing pitcher at home plate. He dropped the ball." A free-for-all followed over the question of whether he was safe, and Baruch, like Johnny Roseboro, was hit over the head with a baseball bat. The blow impaired his hearing and blasted his hopes of going to West Point. Instead, he turned to finance.
