GF Group Stand Negative for PL

Case Not Relevant

A special session of the General Faculty Committee on Student Activities (GFCSA) refused yesterday afternoon to recommend any intervention on the part of the College in the Grand Jury investigation of the Harlem riots.

Members of the Progressive Labor Club, a group accused of having inflamed the riots, have denied being asked any questions by the Jury about their activities on campus.

"We have seen no evidence so far that they are being harassed for their political activities on campus," Dean of Students Willard Blaesser said.

"If they were, that matter would have been brought to us," he added.

The matter was referred to the GFCSA after President Buell G. Gallagher refused on February 6 to "extend the authority of the College into the civil life of students on campus."

"What they are balking," Dean Blaesser said, "is a guardianship in loco parentis sense. We don't punish students for offenses committed off campus, we leave that to the civil authorities. Similarly, we don't expect to be involved in school discipline of the kind we have here."

Dean Blaesser said that he had a history mentor.

"I will facilitate the liberalization of the curriculum," he said.

A convention of student leaders held its first organizational meeting in the Student Government office on Wednesday.

A new phase of the free tuition campaign, aimed at getting mandated free tuition restored to the State Education Act by the end of March, took form at a city University Free Tuition Coordinating Committee meeting Monday night.

The consensus of opinion among the City University student leaders present was that the mandate must be restored now, while the Democrats control the Legislature, if it is to be restored at all.

The College's SG President, John Zippert, summed it up: "This is the last chance; this is the best chance."

"John Stark of the College's Alumni Association, put it another way: "It's now or never; do or die."

The major emphasis of the new campaign will be on letter-writing — by students, their parents, labor unions, church groups, civil rights groups, and the man-in-the-street. Letters from prominent members such as Paul Wellstone, may be solicited in an attempt to influence Republican legislators, who, in a year where the Democrats captured seats in the Assembly, this is the last chance; this is the best chance."

An executive committee was formed with one member to be appointed on the size of the free tuition plurality in the Legislature.

FSM For College

Formed At Sit-In

By ANN EPSTEIN

The Berkeley situation was brought to mind Monday night when the college acquired its FSM — in this instance, Free Student Movement. The organization, formed temporarily at the last Thursday in the administration-building held its first organizational meeting in the Student Government office on Wednesday.

Students present at the Thursday sit-in formed a temporary federated organization of student groups which was directed to initiating a letter-writing campaign to get the FSM back. The students have been told to lay a solid structural foundation, and also to amplify and modify the original statement.

Major components of organizational structure were decided upon at the Monday assembly as a result of motions passed by those attending.

An executive committee was formed with one member to be elected by the students. (Continued on Page 7)

The Bellush Analysis: Berkeley FSM On Its Way Out

Professor Bernard Bellush (Sub-Chairman, History) visited the Berkeley Campus last term during an interview trip to the West Coast for the College's Alumni Association. He took the opportunity to discuss the Free Speech Movement with students and teachers there and drew several conclusions from these discussions. The following impressions were given Observation Post in an interview with Prof. Bellush.

"The Free Speech Movement (FSM) at Berkeley will collapse," predicts Professor Bernard Bellush in evaluating the present state of affairs at that campus, as a result of changes which have occurred in the administration following a year of student unrest and demonstrations.

Whereas formerly the administration could be described in having a "closed door" policy towards the students, with the installation of a new chancellor at Berkeley this policy has changed, according to Prof. Bellush, to one of "facilitating students' problems." This attitude is the result of including Chancellor Mayerson, who recently replaced the "totally incompetent" Chancellor Strong, who will facilitate the liberalization of the Berkeley campus, asserts the concerned history mentor.

Most observers agree that Berkeley has suffered tremendously from the events of the past term: faculty as well as students differed on aim of the FSM and took sides in the controversy which in some cases caused friendships to end; some faculty members even contemplated leaving the university. These negative results of the FSM prompted Prof. Bellush to comment that it was "unfortunate that these events had to take place," but that "the situation was more complete than most people seem to think." The administration furthermore made two errors last fall without which Prof. Bellush feels "no major eruption would have occurred: 1 — The doors of communication were closed; 2 — Students were called in to spell the FSM demonstrations which resulted in mass arrests.

These were errors served to unify the student body behind the FSM even (Continued on Page 3)
"So we put Monstrosity all by itself — right in the center of the gallery," she said. "From the moment we opened the doors, Monstrosity was the star attraction. Hundreds of art lovers and experts have seen it and argued about it."

She said one woman viewed Monstrosity as "the expression of a disturbed soul." An art critic thought it represented "the modern world chaos — the tubes were circles men trap themselves in."

Miss Cain said her own analysis was "that it was man and woman entangled in a love triangle. Then a teenage girl offered us $10 for it because she wanted a part from it for a hot-rod he was building."

"That made me suspicious, so I called the boys who delivered it and asked about the artist," she said.

When the three students broke the news to Miss Cain, she apparently didn't believe them. "She said she wouldn't let us sell it to the kid with the hot-rod," he continued sadly.

PALO ALTO, Calif. — Contrary to popular opinion, and sex before marriage, women have not swept away the American college campus, a Stanford University researcher contends.

Merrin Friedman, assistant dean of undergraduate education and a research associate at the Stanford Institute of Human Problems, bases his conclusion on a detailed study of an Eastern women's college in which 49 students were interviewed. Several hundred students were tested, and on an historical survey of research on the sexual behavior of women undergraduates.

Among his findings:
• Three-fourths or more of America's unmarried college women are virgin.
• Premarital intercourse among college women is usually restricted to their future husbands.
• Promiscuity is probably confined to a very small percentage of college women — probably a lower proportion than high school girls.

While attitudes toward sex are often liberalized in college, "the Puritan heritage has by no means passed from the American scene," Friedman said.

SALT LAKE CITY — The record for the world's longest shower has been shifted to the University of Utah, where a freshman engineering student underwent 75 hours and 24 minutes of continual drenching.

The student, Craig Hardy, splashed into a two-by-four-foot shower at Battil Hall, a men's dormitory, and remained under the nozzle for over three days. He refused to leave his warm stream of water for anything, even food. When he got around. After all, who could resist the deal.

College Institutes Program to Help Students in Need

The College has just begun to participate in a federally supported college work-study program. Under a provision of the Economic Opportunity Act, needy undergraduate and graduate students will be employed to perform educational or relevant work on part-time assignments on or off campus. Although $40,000 in federal funds has already been allocated to the College for the current semester in stipends, the funds provided will vary from $1.25 to $1.35 per hour. Under the provisions of the program, students will be paid 90 per cent of the cost, while the College will pay 10 per cent.

For the current semester the College Insititutes of City College, and administrators of the program, said the work-study program will work as an avenue of free higher educational opportunities for minority group youngsters with academic potential.

Wide Open Spaces

The snackbar is usually filled with students at this or any other time of the year. Due to renovation designed to make the snackbar more enjoyable to the students it has been closed since the beginning of the term. According to Finley Center Director Edmond Barth, the installation of the fountain and new chairs and tables will be completed next Tuesday.

The snackbar traditionally opens the first day of the term but its long delayed renovation began too late. This led to the Faculty Senate's recent decision to place a snackbar in Room 217 Finley with a small adjoining dining room.

The lack of the exclusive power lines and water pipes to these rooms is a comparatively minor menu problem. Pop, and chocolate milk and orange juice are the drinks offered while the hot meals can be had upon request. After many days of dominance the faltering and the ice cream sandwich and candies are the new prominence as the abundance of pastries turned into a few cakes.

Congratulations must be offered to those loyal few who suffered this trial rather than have rented a treat to the cafeteria.

Peace Corps Placement Tests will be given on February 23 and 24 in Room 409 Finley from 10 AM to 12 Noon and 2 PM to 4 PM. This examination is aptitude test for which no preparation is necessary. It is non-competitive, and cannot be passed or failed. Questionnaires, available in Room 116 Shepard, should be filed prior to or at the time of the examination.

Grammar With The Rainbow

By NANCY EBBRICH

A completely new method of teaching grammar in all languages through the use of color has been developed by Joseph R. Edelman, a graduate student in the School of Education.

The "Color-Tense Language Teaching System," will be on exhibit in the Cohen Library Lobby for the next two weeks. This innovation assumes that students will be able to learn tenses more easily when they associate them with something familiar. Edelman chose the colors of the rainbow for the words in a natural sequence which can be equated with the natural time sequence of future.

He picked a frequency of 757 millimicroseconds in the yellow band to represent the present tense, since he felt that yellow looked most like daylight, and so in "today" the student could get a "kick" from yellow on the spectrum to derive the past tense and "forward" into the future tenses, with every tense having its own corresponding color.

Another feature of this system is that it presents the tense on a horizontal plane, rather than the usual vertical plane because Edelman felt that the average person sees times as a horizontal sequence of events.

He developed the method while teaching a first year high school Spanish class last Spring. These students' results showed a marked improvement after the color-tense method was introduced. He therefore set out this system on a group of five to seven years old. A group of 196 of these children for a period of six months, without any intervention of instruction, he tested their ability to "derive" the color tense. He then taught a control group of six months, with every intervention being of the concepts. After a ten minutes review the students showed no retention.

Board of Education approval is pending for a pilot project next fall in LaGuardia School, one of the largest in the city, to be coordinated with the College. The school is located on 133rd Street and Convent Avenue, across from the Apollo Theater. Edelman hopes that his program will eventually be expanded to other levels.

Berkley FSM: Administration At Fault?

though there were many divisions and no common ideology among the students.

Underlying and complementing the immediate issue of freedom of all campus political organizations to organize, advocate and solicit for their respective causes on a twenty-six foot strip in front of the main gate of the Berkeley campus, were several other factors, according to Prof. Bellush.

The area, known as the Sather Gate Area, was used by supporters of Governor Knowland, Democratic Party candidates for Governor, Senator William Knowland, Goldwater's California campaign manager and several leaders of the anti-war movement, against Governor Knowland, explained Prof. Bellush. A bond issue for increased state aid to the university was on the ballot for the November election, he continued.

The Escalator

The escalator is escalating — rapidly. It is becoming more and more likely that those of us who are male will soon be asked to put down our books, don the modern army green, and shoulder rifles in Viet Nam. And — as if the thought of leaving school to go kill people were not bad enough in itself — events constantly remind us that in Viet Nam we would be killing to preserve a brutal dictator which came to power by violating the 1954 Geneva Convention and which even now does not have the support of its own people. To fight for freedom and democracy and to protect the people and the national Communism is one thing; to fight for the South Vietnamese puppet government is another. And — as our older brothers who had to interrupt their educations to fight in Korea can remind us — this is an issue which only concerns students, an issue on which students should make their position felt.

It is not that we are unconcerned with the fate of Viet Nam, distant though that nation be. It is that we read in our newspaper men dying in Viet Nam; and when we ask "To what end?" we receive no meaningful answer.

True, sometimes we are told that Americans are dying in Viet Nam in order to help stabilize the Saigon government as a bastion of anti-Communism. But the wars of the United States have been called to defend a democratic way of life in the South Vietnamese army that the Vietnamese themselves are apparently unwilling to give their lives for. We read statements in the NY Times like the following, made by an American officer after the Pleiku disaster, "Any of the people in the hamlet could have warned us the Viet Cong was around, but they didn't" — and we are convinced that the government presently in power in Saigon is not one likely to win a democratic election. If we died in Viet Nam, we would be fighting for a democratic government. However, if one is willing to give up one's life for freedom or any other noble ideal, but only to maintain a govern­ment which seems to resemble fascism more than democracy.

When we look, moreover, at the position which the Unit­ed States has taken in Viet Nam — admittedly a position more forced by circumstances and a static foreign policy than chosen — we wonder again. Is this a posture in which we as a nation want to be seen by the world? And is this a posture in which a government which wishes to save the world for democracy and free enterprise can af­ford to be seen? We think not.

We read in our newspapers that Americans in force in South Viet Nam are bombing North Viet Nam in response to Viet Cong attacks on American bases. The Viet Cong, as nearly as we can ascertain, is a South Vietnamese guerrilla force rebelling against the government which we certainly would not want to live. According to the NY Times, "North Vietnamese direction and support of the Viet Cong effort is not considered more than a 20% factor in the present guerrilla campaigns, even by those who have urged bombings of North Viet Nam." The Times also quotes a spokesman for the Pentagon as saying it was "an almost inescapable conclusion" that the mortars used in the Pleiku attack were American "because no other army in the world uses such a caliber of artillery." North Viet Nam is simply too far away for us to know how we would like it if Cuba bombed New York City on the grounds that the US supports anti-Castro guerrillas.

As students vitally concerned with our education and with our moral principles, we believe that if our American forces in Viet Nam are bombing North Viet Nam, it is not a war on freedom. It is a war on the people of Viet Nam, not a war on the American government. And this is the kind of war we do not want to fight. Only a few weeks ago Elinor Goldstein, in the Page 6 of the Escalator, wrote:

The current situation of Pro­gressive students in Viet Nam is an interesting one. But even more interesting to PL's un-funded and irrational viewpoint concerning the Grand Jury, the Fifth Amendment, and the legality of self-incrimination.

PL seems to feel that the Grand Jury investigation is "a blatant effort to intimidate students and to make a political circus out of our legal system."

But, would it not be reasonable to assume that "campus political activities" for the sake of Viet Nam's and the world's future are more important than our criminal rear-ends? For while the Grand Jury may not be able to find much evidence of anything, it is trying to "force students to give the impression that they are willing to become informers, to betray their associates; a very noble ideal."

As a result, they ask for "information on him when he is in jail. Should a crime? Fortunately (or unfortunately) for Progressive Labor, our case will go on trial in the court of public opinion and the PL members had not been welcomed by the City College students. For they would had to have answers to questions concerning their friends.

The main point made by PL is that "the Grand Jury is try­ing to pin the riots on PL" and that "the riots are not caused by any students who are militant and active."

But firstly, an investiga­tion of Pro­gressive students' attitudes is not to find the truth, and not to "get" anyone. The fact that a per­son's affiliations are political does not mean that he will go to jail. This is especially true in this case, where the indictments were granted immunity from prosecution.

Secondly, even if (by miracle) this particular Grand Jury harbors some grudge against PL, if PL really did not have any connection with the riots, it seems highly unlikely that it will be blamed for them. Of course, the PL writings could have spurred the riots away the questions put to them but it seems like a reason can be shown to the Grand Jury.

Since Miss Goldstein, Naka­shima, Prestruck, and Shiffall apparently refused to do this for some reason that makes sense only to them, it is not our business to determine that their indictment was well with in the bounds of proper legal action.

Baffle

BY DON WEINGARTEN

"Marcello Mastroianni," my girl, Baffle, told me the other night, "is possibly the greatest living actor."

Having seen but one of his pictures, I had been able to form a rather concrete impression of his capabilities. I am always distressed when I must pass judgment upon an actor on the basis of several films; almost invariably, to quote Sam Levinson's remark about the waltz, "a single movement..." It is far easier to jump to a conclusion on the first viewing, and to remain firmly rooted in one's belief thereafter.

"It's steady. I can almost, positively, be frightened for a moment."

"It's a symbolic picture," she said softly. "It's representative."

Almost without thinking, I asked, "but what does it mean?" Instantly, I snapped my mouth shut and flinched back, in painful recall of the first time I had asked that question — in the Guggenheim Museum. But I need not have worried. An explanation was forthcoming.

"You'll notice it's a black-and-white film," she began. I had, of course, noticed, but in my ignorance had assumed it merely a matter of choice. I don't believe I have ever seen a foreign film in color, except that Last Year at Marienbad, however, purport the idea in favor of an expansion of the Department of Defense's already existing study of manpower requirements.

Nelson himself introduced a bill in June, 1964 which would have directed the Secretary of Defense to present alternatives to the draft to Congress by 1967. His new resolution will be phrased so as to invite support from Senators who might have some reservations about the re-enactment of the draft, but who would like a voluntary system if enough evidence could be forthcoming.

The Senator is known to feel that Conservation thinking in the military and cost-consciousness "are permeating the body to a recommendation that the draft be ended, and that an Congressional vote of confidence for its elimination would strengthen the hand of those in the Executive who agree with him.

He is now beginning to collect co-sponsors for the resolution, which may come before the Senate within the next month. The public decision which it is hoped the resolution will affect is whether the present Selective Service System will fill the screen. The sound track will simulate the wail of an air-raid siren in a low basso voice.

Free Tuition Campaign — A Failure

Attempts were made to inform voters about free tuition, persons who would not be in favor of the restoration of the mandate. Student Council unanimously approved the restoration of the mandate in September of 1964 under SG President Bob Rosenberg. Initially they were conceived to urge constituents to write letters to the Assemblymen urging restoration of the state law guaranteeing free tuition for the City University, University President John Zippert was the target of a campaign on Saturdays and holidays. For example, in the 9th AD Queens, the Democrat continued with its plans for an attempt to convince constituents not to vote for the incumbent, John Burns. Most critics agreed that the campaign did not give the movement a chance to be heard. SG neglected to take into account the political differences in the various districts covered. The literature distributed with different messages was employed in downtown Manhattan, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, Flushing, Queens and Staten Island. In the case of Staten Island, the Johnson sweep seemed to have a backlash effect as the Democrats suffered losses, while the Republicans gained ground. In the 13th AD, the Democrat suffered losses, while the Republicans gained ground. The 9th AD, the Democrat suffered losses, while the Republicans gained ground. The campaign of the Restoration of the Mandate was conducted by College students and "lefties," and one was asked why the fraternity made such a move.

The fraternity has for one of its most important goals, the conduct of College students is selective in that it invites into its membership those who are capable of running a successful campaign. With a Democratic majority in both houses of the legislature and the support of Governor Rockefeller, the entire concept of the value of district campaigns materialized. The fraternity seeks to afford its members a well-rounded experience through the cooperative planning and execution of social and athletic programs. Thus, the fraternity man must be a good citizen. Therefore, the fraternity seeks to afford its members a well-rounded experience through the cooperative planning and execution of social and athletic programs. Knowing that a good fraternity member must be familiar with "take" and "give" of life, the fraternity seeks to afford its members a well-rounded experience through the cooperative planning and execution of social and athletic programs. Through its ritual, fraternity gives a real purpose to its existence on a moral and philosophical level of a continuing nature rather than basing its reason for existence solely on temporal objectives of immediate interest. Thousands of fraternity members have been found for themselves that social, athletic, and professional experiences have become mature, sincere and firm friendships which endure for all time. Fraternity teaches tolerance for the viewpoint of others; acceptance of the decision of the majority; appreciation for the responsibility of a chaplain officer or committee member; loyalty to one's school, friends and fraternity; achievement of scholarship; service to one's community and fellow man. Knowing that a good fraternity member must be familiar with "take" and "give" of life, the fraternity seeks to afford its members a well-rounded experience through the cooperative planning and execution of social and athletic programs. Unfortunately, in the final analysis, the entire campaign was confined to Bay Ridge, but, unfortunately, it was encountered in varying degrees throughout the campaign. Future anti-tuition efforts must contend with this image and must take steps to avoid it. One solution would be to align the campaign with "re- spectable organizations," such as local political clubs.

The fraternity, through its ritual, fraternity gives a real purpose to its existence on a moral and philosophical level of a continuing nature rather than basing its reason for existence solely on temporal objectives of immediate interest. Thousands of fraternity members have been found for themselves that social, athletic, and professional experiences have become mature, sincere and firm friendships which endure for all time.

Why Fraternity? Is one of the most frequent questions asked by college men. While the question could best be answered by a fraternity member himself, participation in fraternity experiences, it is the feeling of Zeta Beta Tau that a fraternity is a brotherhood of men, which more than any other type of organization instills in its members the virtues of tolerance, scholarship, social poise and citizenship.

From out early youth, we select our friends on the basis of common likes and dislikes. Ourgregariousness leads us to the company of those who share similar interests, goals and backgrounds. This desire to band together leads us to the establishment of ZBT.

Opponents of the fraternity system claim that fraternities are un-American, that they breed un-Americanism and perpetuate discrimination. Nothing can be further from the truth. Fraternity members are expected to treat people right, to treat them as they would want to be treated. Rider Dumps Beaver Hoopsters, 84-72

By STEVE ABEK

The College’s basketball team was not outclassed last night — but it was “outted” everything else. They were out-shot from the floor. They were out-ganged from the fowl line. They were out-rebounded. They were also out-scored 84-72 by Rider College.

The best thing anyone did all night was score 23 points. Alan Zuckerman did that and moved to third place in the Tri-State League scoring race with 20.8 ppg. Overall Rider took 39 rebounds to the leader could only grab 6, which were the leading scorers, while Rider had four more men in double figures.

Cryan, at 5-9, used a deadly, ” improves that dropped him to fourth in the race with 20.6 ppg. At future home basketball games, only student photo-identification cards will be accepted towards free admission. Papers will not be accepted.

Free Admission...

At future home basketball games, only student photo-identification cards will be accepted towards free admission. Students at the College, the Department of Athletics announced today. Bursars cards or other College identification cards will be accepted.

The only question is why the fans. Rack that one up for the Beaver’s 28. They also hit 31 of 52 field goal attempts as compared to the cager’s 29 of 78. Those two statistics tell the story of the game. In the first half the Lavender hit only 9 of 33 floor shots. By half-time that kind of shooting put them back 45-26.

In the second half they stretched it to a 28-point lead, 77-47, with 6 minutes to go before the Rider began to pull up a little bit.

The only question is why the Beaver cagers had such cold hands. Coach Dave Polansky teaches a ball-handling type of game. In fact on a given night, he believes, they could beat the best teams in the country in ball-handling. Last night they were not ball-handling. They were picking up the ball and shooting without waiting for the best opening. And they only got one shot because Rider had the height to nail the rebounds.

The Rider fans once again put on the referees who had somewhat of an off night themselves. At one point in the fray, the ref called one of the Beavers for a foul near the fans. Right in front of a nest of rabid Lavender fans, the ref gave the out of bounds play to Rider. Standing no more than three feet away from the fans, the referee was within breating distance of the cries of “evil, evil!” which were being blow out of the stands.

On the ensuing inbounds play, the ref did even wait for any one to touch the ball as he immediately called a foul on Alan Zuckerman. The foul was converted into a point for the Rider cause. Rack that one up for the fans. The Beavers are now 1-4 in Tri-State League play while Rider is a 3-2 league mark. Overall the Lavender is 7-6, Rider 8-9.

Вторым результатом был 77-47, с отрывом в 30 очков. Вторая половина была более упорной, и Rider смогла уменьшить отрыв до 14 очков. Но они все равно остались без шансов.

Командные статистики показывают, что Rider в этом матче играла на более высоком уровне, чем Beaver. В общем итоге Rider взяла верх, выиграв с минимальным счетом 84-72.
