By RICHARD SIMON

Led by Alan Zuckerman's record-total 53 points, the College's basketball team ended its best season in 16 years with a record-breaking 106-100 overtime victory over Hartford University Saturday night in Wingate Gymnasium.

The team total of 106 points broke the old record of 101, set against Kings Point in 1957, while Zuckerman topped the 48 points scored by Tor Nilsen in 1962 against Bridgeport.

BHE Rejects Added Power For Chancellor; Finds Board Of Regents Proposals 'Unwise'

By MICHAEL KNIGHT and RONA SCHWAB

The Board of Higher Education rejected last night the Board of Regents proposal to create a strong and independent office of University Chancellor.

The BHE, by a "large consensus," sought to reaffirm its right to define the role of the Chancellor. The Regents had suggested legislation making Chancellor Albert H. Bowker the chief executive officer of the policy-making BHE in addition to being chief administrative officer of the CU.

Such "unwarranted and unwise legislation," the BHE said in a prepared statement "would tie the Board's hands."

Dr. Bowker had threatened to resign if Board-administration relations did not improve.

Dr. Bowker's role in the making of policy decisions was a chief factor in last November's "shadow tuition" controversy.

The Board compromised on other Regents proposals, however. A proposal that BHE members of 70 years of age not be reappointed was agreed to with the stipulation that it would apply to new members only. Eighty-six year old BHE member Charles

P. Tuttle, an opponent of Dr. Bowker, would have been the first to be retired under the Regents proposal when his term expires June 30.

The Regents proposal to rename the BHE the "Board of Trustees" was rebuffed. BHE chairman Gustav G. Rosenberg explained that a change from an universal name such as Board of Higher Education applicable to all higher education in the City, to Board of Trustees, limited to one University, would limit the Board's scope.

The BHE agreed "wholeheartedly" to the Regents suggestion that geographical appointment of Board members be abandoned and welcomed the Regents affirmation that the CU "should remain as at present, an autonomous institution."

The Board accepted the Regents proposal to create a "Coordinating Committee on Public Higher Education" with the provision that two BHE members be given equal standing with the Chancellor and the State Commissioner of Education. The original Regents proposal would have excluded BHE members and made the Chancellor co-equal with the State Commissioner.

The consultative committee as recommended by the BHE will consist of two representatives from the Board of Regents, two from the State University Board, two from the Board of Higher Education, and three additional officials.

The Board "concurred heartily" with a suggestion by the Regents that the State provide more funds for the University.

Drop In Evening Enrollment

By ELAINE SCHWAGER

The Evening Session Associate Degree will probably be dropped and day session classes extended into the evening by February 1967 because of a drop in Evening Session enrollment.

The College's evening enrollment has dropped 20 per cent since 1964, according to Registrar Robert L. Taylor. Forty-five hundred students have enrolled in Evening Session this term — 1300 less than two years ago.

President Buell G. Gallagher had said last week that there had been an "unprecedented and unexplained" eight to fifteen per cent drop in evening session enrollment for the Spring term. Taylor attributes the decline to the expansion of two-year community colleges and their two-year-old free tuition policy.

Neither Taylor nor Dr. Bernard Levy, Director of the School of General Studies, see any connection between the decline in enrollment and the increase in the draft. The drop in enrollment this past term was only 300, while it fell nearly 1000 when the community colleges dropped their tuition. The equivalent associate courses given here cost ten dollars a credit. Students would seem to prefer attending a full-time day session school that is tuition free.

Selective Service Sets Test Dates

The Selective Service has announced that examinations to qualify students for deferments will be given on May 14 and 21 and June 7. Applications will be made available beginning April 1.

The examination, which is similar in content to the College Entrance Examination Boards, will not, according to Selective Service spokesmen, favor students in any particular discipline.

The Selective Service has urged all students to take the test, in order that their local draft boards will have more information available before reaching a decision on deferments.

By ERICA RAPPORT

Deputy Mayor Timothy W. Costello agreed to join the March 18 "March on Albany" to demand increased state aid to the City University (CU) at Saturday's conference on free public higher education.

The all-day conference, sponsored by Student Government and held in the Finley Student Center, was attended by student leaders from all branches of the CU.

Costello said he favored an advisory commission comprised of students, faculty and alumni to meet with the Board of Higher Education. Political pressure must be maintained throughout (Continued on Page 2)

Expect Thousands To Participate

A mass march on Albany for Free Higher Education has been called for March 16 by the City University Executive Committee.

The co-chairmen of the march, Baruch Student Government President Norman Lipton and OP Associate Editor Mark Brody, said yesterday that they were aiming for a turnout of thousands to demonstrate to Albany legislators that Free Higher Education was a statewide issue which must be reckoned with.

The demands of the march are: ● increased state financial assistance to the City University to permit its expansion and enable more minority group members to enter the CU

● the maintenance of free tuition at the CU and its extension to the State University (Continued on Page 2)

Chancellor Albert H. Bowker At Center Of Controversy

The alumni presidents of the 4 senior colleges said yesterday that they were "shocked and dismayed" at the intrusion of the Board of Regents in City University affairs "without hearings." They pledged their organizations, with 200,000 members, to fight "any legislative attempt to implement the proposals."

Dr. J. Bailey Harvey, chairman of the College's chapter of the American Association of University Professors said yesterday that his organization was "in sympathy with the chancellor being the chief officer."

A Clear Threat

While the full ramifications of the Board of Regents proposals for restructuring the City University cannot yet be gauged, they seem to present a clear and present danger to the existence of the CU.

The Regents proposed that the chancellor of the CU assume greater administrative authority by becoming the executive officer of the Board of Higher Education (BHE) as well as the chief administrative officer of the CU. In a multi-university facing the problems of an ever-expanding student body, any move that has the effect of further alienating the students and faculty from the administration must be viewed with disdain.

By centralizing the control of the CU in the hands of one man, not only would the development of this schism be facilitated, but conformity within the CU would become a necessity. While desirable in some areas (i.e. library privileges, transfer of credits) this enforced compliance with uniform regulations would make impossible the local handling of local needs in areas such as academic freedom and university reform.

In one breath we are told by the Regents that they will push for legislation for a change in the BHE's name to "the Board of Trustees of the City University," a name that has a disquietingly familiar ring if one looks to the State University with its "Board of Trustees"; in the next we are told by the Regents that the CU should "remain as at present, an autonomous institution."

Even to the undiscerning eye such a close similarity in structure must appear as more than a mere coincidence. Is it not just possible that this simple "change in name" could be the first step in the gradual absorption of the CU by the State University? If brought to its logical conclusion, this catastrophe along with its companion tuition charge seems inevitably to follow from this restructuring. In fact they pointed to the "need to build growing avenues of communication [between the City and State Universities]."

In good political fashion the Regents did not forget to include the sugar coating of additional funds for the CU, but if the companion suggestions of the Regents are a condition for these life or death funds, life or death for the CU becomes a moot question.

The March

Last Saturday's Conference on Free Tuition has provided an ambitious approach to preserve Free Tuition in the City University and restore it to the State University. The March on Albany, led by Deputy Mayor Timothy Costello, deserves the full backing of every organization on campus.

It is not enough to send small delegations to the State Legislature to lobby for passage of favorable bills. Small delegations only invite skepticism as to their backing. Hopefully House Plan Association and the Interfraternity Council will see fit to urge their entire membership to participate, rather than the handful that traveled to Albany last year.

There are over 130,000 students attending the City University — to send less than 10,000 to Albany would be an admission of defeat. Student Government must act immediately to sign students up for the big push.

Seven Brandeis Teachers May Raise Marks To Protest Their Use In Draft Of Students

By RONA SCHWAB

The protest of several faculty members at Brandeis University against releasing students' grades to draft boards has met with mixed reactions from members of the faculty here.

Seven sociology teachers at Brandeis announced Thursday that they may give all of their students an "A" as a means of defying Selective Service policies.

Professor Rose Zimbardo (English) approved of a general policy of giving students high marks to keep them out of the draft. "I very much approve of the bold stand the teachers at Brandeis have taken and will take it into consideration in giving out final marks. I will not publically state whether or not I intend to give out an "A" to all of my students because I think it would make my teaching less effective."

Another instructor who very strongly objected to the College permitting the government to use the grades of the students against them was Miss Sandra Levinson (Political Science). Although Miss Levinson objects to the releasing of marks, she was wary of the action taken at Brandeis. "I approve of their action, but I don't know if it is necessary. There is

● the continued autonomy of the CU.

The march has been necessitated by the "severe financial crisis" in which the CU is entangled, asserted Lipton. If efforts for more equitable aid to the CU are not successful now, Lipton continued, the CU will be faced with the alternatives of a loss of quality and a freeze in enrollment, or a tuition charge. Either path would facilitate the absorption of the CU into the State University system, he concluded.

Committees for a March on Albany for Free Higher Education will be established at each of the member colleges in the CU. Organized on an ad hoc basis, these committees will be comprised of organization representatives and will be responsible for organizing students on their respective campuses as well as contacting local non-student organizations.

Deputy Mayor Timothy Costello, and New York Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Eugene Nickerson have agreed to join the march and a number of other state and national figures have been invited.

A rally in downtown Albany will follow the march with speeches by dignitaries and organizational representatives.

the kind of protest that would only be effective if a large majority of teachers in a particular department all cooperated and issued high marks," she added. Miss Levinson said that she wasn't about to undertake such a protest by herself but would cooperate with any workable solution to the problem of the draft.

Professor Adolph Tomars (Chmn., Sociology) thought the action taken at Brandeis was "a mockery of the entire grading system." He suggested that it was better to give no grades at all than to haphazardly give everyone an "A." "People may want to use some symbolic device to make their feelings clear, but every teacher has a responsibility to the students and to the faculty to keep the grading system meaningful," he said.

Several professors here were skeptical. Professor Richard Skolnik (History), said, "Although I am able to sympathize with their aims, I don't know if I approve of their solution to the problem. I haven't as yet decided the most effective means of rising a protest."

Professor Edmund Volpe (Chmn., English), did not think the action of the Brandeis teachers was wise. "The draft is too complicated a question to resolve in this way. It demeans the purpose of the university and violates every standard of higher education," he said.

Tuition Conference Held Here

the free tuition campaign in two ways, he asserted: a public appeal to "dramatize the necessity for additional support" and support for Mayor Lindsay's new tax program.

Nassau County Executive Eugene H. Nickerson, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, delivered a lengthy address on the problems facing free public higher education. Nickerson repeatedly scored Governor Rockefeller's handling of the situation.

"City University, if the Governor is allowed to go unchallenged," he stated, "cannot come close to meeting the higher educational needs of the youth of New York City," he stated.

Increase Contributions

Nickerson recommended that Gov. Rockefeller adopt Chancellor Bowker's proposal for the issuance of capital construction bonds. "The state should increase its contribution to the community colleges throughout New York State to two-thirds of their operating costs and permit free tuition," he declared.

Dr. T. Edward Hollander (Accountancy) was the only guest to speak out against Free Tuition. "The need for additional financing is not only great, it is monumental," he warned. However, if state aid were to be increased substantially, it would be "difficult to justify city control." The City and State presently contribute to the maintenance of the CU on a 1:1 ratio, he said.

Tuition Charge

Hollander proposed charging tuition to those students whose family incomes exceed $11,000. Underprivileged students would receive government subsidies. Hollander, who heads the Higher Education Task Force of the Temporary City Commission on Finances, called for "student statesmanship" to investigate all issues and possible solutions.

Representative Theodore Kupferman (Rep., Man.) said that "those who oppose free higher education are subversive to our free institutions." He pledged his full support and announced he would "try to seek federal aid for free higher education."

President Buell G. Gallagher called for an expansion of post-high school educational opportunities. "Anybody who wants to go beyond high school should have the opportunity to do so," he stated. Dr. Gallagher is in favor of raising revenue through the income tax.

Budget Shortage Could Cause Stiffer Entrance Requirements

The College's high school average entrance requirement may be raised from 82 to 90 next term. Dr. Albert H. Bowker, Chancellor of the City University, said this weekend that unless the state can provide additional funds to the City University, the colleges will have to raise entrance requirements to reduce the number of incoming freshmen by 100.

"This would really be catastrophic," he observed, "but it could happen if the budget situation doesn't improve. This would be worse than we have ever gone through in our history, and for many years we were regarded as an extremely hard group of colleges to get into," he added.

Dr. Bowker spoke following the release of the State Board of Regents' report on the City University.

The report states that the city is planning to maintain its present budget for the City University — an allotment of $37 million. The City University had expected to receive $46 million from the city and $45 million from the state. The $9 million difference will give the City University only enough funds to provide for 6000 entering freshmen in September, instead of this year's 10,000.

When asked if the extra 4000 students could be provided for in state funds, Dr. Bowker said, "The state gives us just about enough additional operating money for the senior colleges to offset the mandatory increment and other unavoidable increases of our present operating budget."

In its report, the Board of Regents urged Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, the Legislature, and Mayor John V. Lindsay "to act immediately and provide funds for 1966-67 necessary to assure that the possibility reported by Chancellor Bowker does not occur...."

She Moonlights By 'Muckraking'

Sandra Levinson (Political Science), an attractive young blonde who looks enough like her students to wear slacks during finals week, is currently engaged in "muckraking the Great Society" as the New York editor for Ramparts. "I don't know if Johnson reads Ramparts," she said, "If he does, Ramparts has failed."

Miss Levinson views Ramparts as "radical — politically and socially — with a concern for literature and the arts. It covers everything!" The magazine, founded in 1961 as a Catholic literary periodical, has since developed into a "national magazine which happened to be started by Catholics," according to Warren Hinckle III, an Associate Editor.

As New York editor, Miss Levinson suggests topics, examines unsolicited manuscripts, offers political advice and conducts interviews. "I interviewed Gen. Gavin a couple of weeks ago — I do whatever I have time for and like doing. It's a very flexible job."

After graduating from the University of Iowa in 1958, she attended Stamford University for her Masters. While there, she was invited to run for Congress by the Democratic Party. She refused, although she remained active in politics, serving as Norman Thomas' chauffeur on a speaking tour

throughout California. Photos by Michael Knight

Miss Levinson stumbled into her job after reading only one issue of Ramparts. "The editors asked me to help them with a particular fund-raising project in August and then decided that as long as I was there, they might as well have a New York office."

The office is her apartment in the Village, where amid a driftwood tree and a wall bedecked with covers from Ramparts, she'll keep on working "as long as they want me."

final game, the last tidy knot onto the greatest season in fifteen years. But to them it had to be more than another game, another finish. It had to be something special, something the crowd in Wingate wouldn't forget for years. As the coach said, they came to to play with integrity.

"Everytime I looked around there was the ball. The guys were tremendous." His teammates were giving Al the ball and giving him a shot at the record. But it was Al who made it work. From an opening driving layup till an amazing, off-balance shot at the half-time buzzer ("I sort of lost the ball between five guys"), he had the crowd jumping and sensing a record. Hitting 13 of 19 shots from the floor and 4 of 4 from the foul line, he bagged 30 points in the first half, only two points shy of his personal high for a full game.

The man became the game, and the game dwindled out of sight. His teammates played for him, and the fans prayed for him. Mike Pearl ("It almost hurt not to pass to him") became the quarterback and Zuckerman was his receiver. Bob Kissman, so caught up with the emotion of the game, was brought to tears by the cheers of the crowd.

And the jump shots and the layups started curling in. He broke Tor Nilsen's 48 point mark with 3:28 to play. Nilsen was a legend in his own time at the College. Offered a professional contract after graduation, he turned it down. Another layup and a few foul shots netted Zuck a total of 53 points, and who could think of a nicer way to end a career.

In a way, Alan Zuckerman symbolized the team. The team had played with class, lost with class and won with class, and now they had bowed out with class. It was a bunch of guys unaffected by their own success, and a team that so affected us all.

won-lost record to 12-6, the best since the 1949-50 record of 24-5.

Despite a 26-point lead early in the second half, it took a key steal by Mike Pearl in the overtime period to clinch the victory. The Hawks, led by Gary Palladino, fought back and tied the score at 90 with 12 seconds left in the game.

Up to this point, the game had been a remarkable exhibition by the Beavers. Feeding and con-things were yet to happen. Key steals by Paul Massey, combined with sharp shooting by Gary Palladino, closed the score. Palladino tied the game with a long jump shot with twelve seconds on the clock at 90-90. The game went into overtime as Eisemann failed to get a shot off at the buzzer.

Palladino's performance was remarkable, but it happened to come on a night on which nobody could outclass the performance of Alan Zuckerman. "Held" to 14 points in the first half, Palladino erupted in the second half and finished with 45 points. The 5'10" junior tied 6'4" Bob Foley for the team lead with 10 rebounds.

But there was no denying that this was Zuckerman's night. The explosive senior hit a wide variety of layups en route to the highest scoring total ever amassed in one game by any Beaver. Connecting on 22 of 43 shots from the floor and 9 of 12 foul shots, He caught the fancy of the crowd with his scoring spurts. But in concentrating on his assault on the record, the team lost sight of the game, and Coach Dave Polansky added a few gray hairs as he sweated out an overtime period.

After the start of the overtime period, Eisemann scored from underneath and Paul Massey countered for Hartford. John Clinton then connected on two foul shots for a two-point Lavender lead. With Palladino dribbling the ball upcourt looking for the tying basket, Mike Pearl swooped in, swiped the ball, and drove in for an easy layup and a comfortable four-point lead. Two baskets by Dave Schweid and John Clifton on assists from Zuckerman completed the scoring.

Pat Vallance had done a fine defensive job on Palladino until he fouled out midway through the second half. From that point on, Pearl had been sizing up Palladino, "I noticed that when I charged him he went to his right." Pearl charged Palladino, went to his right, stole the ball, and that was the ball game. Pearl played perhaps his greatest game against Hartford, managing 11 assists, mostly to Zu-

Zuckerman's Finale

By RICHARD SIMON

The gymnasium was now deserted. Only minutes earlier the crowd was screaming its approval as Alan Zuckerman was lifted triumphantly upon the shoulders of his teammates to cut down the netting from the basket in a symbolic climax to a successful season.

But now there was only silence as I stood at the foul line trying to feel as Zuckerman had felt standing at the same spot minutes before, gunning for his forty-ninth point and a new school record. His shot ticked the twine, and his final total of points was a great way to end a varsity career. It was to "Zuck's" greatest night performing for the Lavender, his last great night.

"The first thing I did after shot the ball was to look over my parents in the stands to see if they were watching," he said, wanting his greatest moment to be theirs also. Of course they were watching, everyone was. And as the true arc of the ball headed for the basket, and little prayers echoed through the hearing of all the fans, the night became "Zuck's night" and the record became "Zuck's record." But if you were to write the record book, you would include next to his name the names of his parents, his teammates, and his coach.

Coach Dave Polansky heaped all the praise for the season's success upon his players. Polansky, who teaches more than basketball to his men, loved this team. What he termed "my best ballhandling team ever" was his key of team. His message before the game was to "play the last game with integrity."

Zuckerman described the attitude and play of his teammates as great: "I was really touched. One is touched hearing this because it's evident he means what he says and feels what he means."

The team had played together the better part of three years. They had suffered together through defeats and rejoiced in victories. This was to be the last.

Fencers Mutilate MIT, 22-5; Five Men Score Triple Wins

By TED TYBERG

The College's fencing team completely overpowered its MIT counterpart by a score of 22-5 last Saturday in the MIT Gymnasium.

The meet was an especially successful one for the parriers as five men became triple winners. The last time this happened was in 1955. The five were Bob Cherniak and Ron Linton of the epee team, Steve Lieberman of the sabre team and captain George Wiener and Steve Bernard of the foil team.

The Lavender swept out to a commanding lead in the first round, winning it 7-2. As it turned out, this was merely an indication of what was to come as the parriers went on to win the second and third rounds 7-2 and 8-1 respectively.

All three squads were very impressive in this meet. The epee squad turned in its usual strong performance, capturing seven of its nine bouts. Coach Ed Lucia, however, was especially proud of his foil and sabre teams.

The foil team won eight of its nine contests. Lucia hopes that this squad will bring him the coveted "Iron Man" trophy, for the best foil team at the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament, two weeks from now.

One of the brightest spots of the meet was the sabre squad which won seven of its nine bouts. Until this point, the squad had been erratic. Hopefully, the squad

Steve Bernard

has now settled down and will continue its winning ways.

The coming meet will be against Navy at Annapolis, next week. It is the last dual meet of the season and it will be a tough one. Navy, which was upset by the parriers 14-13 last year, will really be gunning for the parriers this year. With a good performance from all three squads, there is a good chance that the Beavers will come away with a victory again this year, and give the team a six and four record.
