Enrollment Hits All-Time High; Revamp Student Life Department

Brophy Heads Administration Of New Unit

When the Board of Higher Education winds up its meeting around midnight tonight approval will have been given to the most far-reaching reorganisation of the department of student life ever to hit the College, it has been confirmed by The Campus.

Despite the fact that official announcement has not been made it is almost certain that Dr. Daniel F. Brophy, Director of the College Personnel Bureau, will be appointed Dean of Students and Chairman of the new Department of Student Life, it has been revealed by John L. Bergstresser, who is unknown at the University of Chicago.

Centralised Units

The expanded department will supervise all units dealing with student activities outside of the classroom in order to avoid the confusing condition which has already been achieved will be read the following list of functions and to secure the maximum efficiency. As a result of the new program, which should have no difficulty in passing the Senate, the Student Life Department will handle the following formerly independent activities:

Two New Functions

Supervision and guidance of student extra-curricular activities; supervision of graduates and inter-graduate veterans of the Army and Air Force; and the testing and administration of entrance examinations. In addition, two new functions have been added, supervision of physically handicapped students and organization of research.

Alumni Fete To Launch Centennial

By Herbert Kahn

The opening gun of the College's Centennial celebration will be sounded at a Centennial Dinner to be held Saturday evening, October 12, at the Hotel Astor. President Harry N. Wright announced approval last week of the decision to hold the Joint-faculty-alumni dinner committee is headed by Daniel F. Brophy '47, chairman; Professor James A. Dawson of the faculty.

Koo To Speak

Toastmaster at the dinner will be Dr. Stephen Duggan '30. Speeches will be made by Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese ambassador to the United States, Bernard Harps '29, Felix Frankfurter '92, Senator Wagner, and President Wright.

In addition to these addresses, a report disclosing how much of the $1,600,000 goal set for the Centennial Fund Campaign has already been achieved will be read. The purpose of this fund is to establish facilities for cultural and social activities at the College not adequately provided for in the city budget.

SC Schedules Meeting For October 3rd

Sixth-semester Student Council has scheduled its first meeting of the semester for Thursday, October 3, at 4, Arthur Goodman '47, its president, announced Monday. Elections for all major committees and for the approval of the various student groups will be held.

House Plan officers chosen in elections held prior to the close of the last semester are: Ed Nevis '47, president; Frank Nemeth '48, vice-president; Leah Ginsberg '48, secretary; Marvin Rossberg '49, chairman of SC delegation; Stanley Bernstein '48, Social Functions Organiser. Irving Krueghelder '49 has been appointed Assistant Director.

Swamps Registration, Forces Two Day Holiday

By Bob Stein

Casting a two-day postponement of the fall term opening, the largest enrollment in the history of the College began classes today under an expanded academic program. A record total of 7,000, representing a 2000 increase over last spring's enrollment, is attending day session classes at the Main Center this semester.

The over-all enrollment for the College reached a record-breaking mark of 8,000, a late influx of returning veterans swelled registration figures. By direction of Mayor William O'Dwyer and the Board of Estimate, the College has been admitting every veteran and every high school graduate who can fulfill the qualification for entry in addition to the returning College veterans.

Vets Open New Drive

Large increases in vet registration have made the Veterans Association the "largest active student group on the campus" according to Paul Brown '47, V.A. president.

Reaching the difficulties encountered in the receiving of student checks, the V.A. is planning a vigorous campaign to ease the situation. It is also planning action to bring about an increase in the amount of substantance received. A meeting was held with Dean Morton Getzel concerning a plan to liberalise the curricular possibilities for the vets. Such a plan would allow vets more work in their major fields. These proposals were submitted to the Committee on Curriculum and Course and Standing.

Membership Drive

The Association will sponsor booths in the cafeteria this week with a supply of terminal leaf blanks.

The swamps of registration, caused by the rush of students, have forced the College to hold the opening of classes under an expanded academic program. 'Campus' Issues Call To Journalists Hopful

You don't need a scrap of literary genius. It isn't necessary for printen's ink to flow through your veins. In fact, you don't even have to have a desire to run around swarming "Hold the presses." But if you would like to learn something about the newspaper publishing world and actually get some first-hand experience at it, The Campus is just what you're looking for.

All interested freshman, sophomore, and junior journalists can sign up for the course this fall in Room 15A, Main Classes. Classes are held from 12:30 to 1:30 each Thursday, beginning October

As I slipped inside Room 906, my first impression was of a long file of students stretching from one door to the opposite and of the rows of seats five expensively upholstered, rustling softly under your feet.

I was struck by the marked contrast between the solemnly concentrated students, and the students who asked jealously aganist the side of the long table with despair etched into their features. As I approached, the slightly-built fellow who seemed the leader of the little group glanced up and in­dignantly sent me toward me.

"Oh, hello Gordon," he said, with a bland smile, "at your ser­vice.

"Thank you, Your Excellency," I stammered, "but aren't all those students waiting to be registered?"

My companion laughed shortly.

"My dear fellow," he said, "please do not give the matter a second thought. The students are happy to await my pleasure. Besides, that's their own business in my private concern."

"Do they never complain?"

Gordon's eyes narrowed. "They had better not if they know what's good for them," he snarled. "Occasionally we discover some rambunctious draftee determined to attack us openly." Gordon's eyes glittered malevolently. "We make short work of him. After that, he never dares to show his face again. Several students shuddered and exchanged terrified glances."

Gordon's phone jangled and he snapped, "Yes, the trouble­maker is coming this way (meaning myself)."

As I slipped inside Room 906, my first impression was of a long file of students stretching from one door to the opposite and of the rows of seats five expensively upholstered, rustling softly under your feet.

"You've got him?" he cried shrilly. "Bring him to me, immediately."

I stammered, "I've got him here."

"But he's not complaining yet?"

"He's just a wretched, wretched wretch who presumes to question me, and I've got him under control."

"You'll take care of him, won't you?"

"I'll take care of him, I'll take care of every wretch who tries to break our rules."

Gordon then replaced the receiver on his desk. His eyes, which had witnessed a more hideous expression of sadistic triumph, have just seen the miserable villain, Vil­lon, chucked.

Gordon's four associates cheered. The door closed, and a dark, handsome fellow in a navy longshoreman's cap and a shabby, homespun coat hurried through the hallway. Gordon closed just before him, and pushed toward Gordon.

"You've got him?" he hissed. "You've got him?"

"Yes, I've got him."

Gordon's white gloved hand flicked the man's cap, and the man gasped one. Gordon's white gloved hand watched through the large left hand and handed Gordon a neatly made program card. A weak­chinned freshman was already philosophers, then.

Closed

Gordon spoke softly and men­tioning.

"You've heard the rum­bling which questions to presuppose the merits of our system of reg­istration, he hissed. "Schiller, bring me this man's program card. A weird­chinned freshman was already philosophers, then."

"Fran­cois, Lower Junior 2. You'll never get to be an upper junior."

Even Gordon's associates appeared hor­rified at this. "You don't mean you're going to . . . gasped one.

Gordon smiled.

"Really, Fili­lon puffed but said nothing. "Let me see," said Gordon, "you seem to be somewhat behind in Physics 54. What a shame. Unfortunately, that means you're not going to receive your registration.

The blood seemed to drain from Villon's face, and his hands became cold and trembling.

"too bad, we've decided not to give that course this year. You have to check on these in the mat­ters beforehand, young man."

Beaver Eleven Opens Season Against Susquehanna Saturday

The squad which arrived at the Beaver Mound Inn three weeks ago, for this College's first special training camp activity since 1942, was an unorganized group of freshman, holdovers, ex-eligible who had performed as much as four years ago, and of variables of varied degrees of talent. From this pool of manpower, Gehardt and assistants Coach Yulin Smith and Ted Mitchell have recruited a starting eleven which has some signs of experience to add to its thorough conditioning and preparation.

Organize Starting Eleven

Two of the most outstanding additions to the team are Marvin Peltz, an ex-Air Force corporal stationed as the club's No. 1 backfield operator, and big in experience. Meanwhile, a stripping fresh crop emerges. Pete Brown, a senior who was a regular back in 1942 and '43, has just about climbed the quarterback ladder. Wel¬come has strength and unusual speed for his 220 pounds, and has assets of plenty. He is the one who may start in the backfield in this line-up, who leads the race for the full back position. Brown is working out the first year and is engaged in college experience. Leo Wagner and Bernie Shulman, Navy and Army exoners respectively, are the best halfback bets, with Murray Berkowitz, Dan Glassman (Continued on page 7)

Women have always been running after men, lately been running after votes. They have now started running after basketball.

The College, having experienced the first two weeks of the arrival of the first female in the school, is now in the throes of the latter. Formerly occupying the Commerce Center Gym, the Girls Varsity Basketball team has now shifted to the Student Center. The JV squad, which was formed at the Army branch last semester, will continue working out here at this center. With the acquisition of the facilities of the Tech and Main Gym, the girls will have plenty of elbow room to work out some fancy maneuvers.

Store Expands Staff to Meet Record Demand

Challenged by the demands of the new registration, the College store has been operating under an unprecedented schedule for the past two weeks. Employing the largest staff in its history, the store has utilized four classrooms in addition to its own facilities in handling the distribution of texts during the registration period.

A new branch of the store is scheduled to open today at 151

Chemistry texts and supplies are available at the new branch. The Townsend Harris Hall branch is stocked with athletic supplies, while the Main Building store will continue handling the bulk

Jackson Sees Record Sales Of U-Cards

Increased enrollment of students this semester will cause U-Card sales to reach an all-time high of 5000, Lewis Jackson, Central Treasurer of Student Activi- ties, predicted yesterday.

This term's U-card offers a semester's subscription to The Campus, free and exclusive admission to the Friday evening concerts, a 20 per cent reduction in House Plan membership and a reduction on concerts and Broadway plays through Student Council. Other reductions include the SC Dance, Dramsoc performances and a special event put on by SC.

The money obtained from U-Card sales is used to support student extra-curricular organizations. Students can get their U-Cards at IA Main, 109 Main, or from the various student U-Card representatives.

PS Department Offers Playwrighting Course

Students who are looking to get a foot in the door of their chosen profession should consider the Playwrighting Course, which is offered by the Theater students. The four courses in a sequence that make up the Playwrighting Course are: a playwriting course, a directing course, a production course, and a playwriting course. The course was originated at the College a couple of years ago when Harold Cantor, a student at the College, told Prof. Gough of his desire to write plays and showed him some of his work. Upon investigation, it was found that there were several other students at the College imbued with the same desire. The course was inaugurated by the department under the direction of a well-known playwright.

This term, nine students known as Prof. Gough formed the nucleus of a new class. Prof. Gough was put in charge, and two days after registration the class was closed with eighteen students. The members of the class will not labor under solely intellectual burdens, however, for those unable to act in the Theater Workshop presentations will have to help move sets and perform other manual tasks.

President Harry N. Wright buys the first U-Card of the semester from pretty coed Rita Gots, setting an example that many City students are expected to follow. With the enrollment in the Day Session of the Main Center at a record high of 7,000, it is predicted that U-Card sales will probably reach a peak of 5,000 this term. U-Cards will remain on sale through the first week of the semester.

Females Invade Managing Board For First Time

Ever since Carrie Nation and her anti-saloon hatchet girls chopped their first bartender into free lunch, the females have been a potent force in fields outside the nursery and the kitchen. One of the first he-man professions to experience the inroads of the silk-stockinged ones was journalism.

The Campus, ever in the vanguard, bows to this trend. For the first time in the forty-year history of The Campus, the Managing Board includes female undergraduates. Natalie Afrenan '48 and Ann Marie Perensko '49 share the copy editor's slot.

The influx of the females and the return of former Campus staff from the service have made this the largest staff in the paper's history.

College history. The reorganization follows closely the recommendations of the Strayer Committee published in 1944. The Committee, headed by George D. Strayer of Columbia University was ordered at that time by the New York State legislature to study conditions in the City's college, in order to get greater administrative efficiency.

Dr. Brophy was graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1920, received his Master's degree in Psychology from Columbia University in 1924 and his Medical degree from the Cornell Medical School in 1927. He has been a member of the City College staff since 1920. In 1937 he was appointed Director of the College's Student Personnel Bureau which position he has held until the present. In 1943 he was Civilian Director of the Classification Unit of the Army Specialized Training Program for the Second Service Command and since 1944 has directed the Veterans Vocational Advisory Unit at City College under Veterans Administration, the first of these units to be established in the country. The reorganization, according to President Wright, "is in line with the trend of progressive institutions in recent years in centralizing control of all non-class-room activities." Each of the functions will be directed by a member of the department who will be responsible to Dr. Brophy.

RECORD ENROLLMENT

will attend classes this semester. Some 400 first-year business students will take an assortment of basic courses here this semester.

A combination of factors was responsible for the registration confusion, according to Registrar Robert L. Taylor. In addition to overwhelming last-minute registration of returning veterans, Mr. Taylor cited an unexpected surge toward the School of Technology from other courses and an unexpectedly heavy enrollment in the junior and senior classes as contributory factors to the postponement of school's re-opening.

Shortage of classroom space and instructors to cope with the record enrollment has necessitated an average increase of fifteen percent in the size of classes. In some instances, this will mean that students will have to double up on experiments in laboratory courses.
