Exec Endorses SG Presidential Candidates Drive to Aid Tenn. Negroes To Leave Room for HP Votes

Student Government Executive Council yesterday endorsed a campus drive next week to collect food and money for boycotted Negroes in Fayette County, Tennessee.

The drive, to be conducted Monday and Tuesday by Hillel and the College's chapter of Americans for Democratic Action, was approved unanimously at a special meeting called by Vice President Ed Caprelian '61. Caprelian, who served as acting President, was asked to call the meeting because Student Council had failed to act on the drive when it met the night before.

Students are asked to bring supplies for the Negroes currently suffering reprisals for registering as voters last Spring, to Hillel House, 475 W. 140 Street. In addition, ADA representatives plan to set up booths in Finley Center trophy lounge and in Knittle Lounge, Shepard.

The two campus groups, as well as a new College chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality plan to conduct a neighborhood door-to-door drive for donations the following week, according to ADA secretary, Jane Weidinger '61.

Endorsements

The Campus will hold endorsement interviews today from 3-5 with candidates for Student Council, the Student Faculty Committee on Student Activities and major Student Government offices.

The semi-annual contest for endorsements will have its effect Monday on the Student Government Public Affairs Forum "Great Debate" among the four Presidential candidates.

Three of the hopefuls will leave the Forum, to be held at 4 in the Grand Ballroom, for interviews with the House Plan Council, which endorses candidates for major offices. The fourth candidate, Stuart Goldberg '61, said he had "given up" his hope for endorsement by any major group.

But two of the other candidates, Bob Saginaw '61 and Irwin Pronin '62, will be fighting hard for HP endorsement. Both feel that Bernard Becker '61 already has sewn up much of the "fraternity vote."

Becker, meanwhile also will seek the endorsement of House Plan, at the same time spousing the hope that the election will not be "turned into a House Plan versus Fraternity" battle.

The three candidates will probably leave separately for ten-minute interviews while the Forum is going on. Anne Ginsberg '62, chairman of the forum, will act as moderator of a panel of four student reporters, two from The Campus and two from Observation Post.

The candidates will make five-minute statements at the beginning and close of the Forum. In between the reporters will direct questions at individual candidates.

Becker, who has not been endorsed formally by the Inter-Fraternity Council, is nevertheless running with the support of a few individual fraternities. Many of the candidates for Council who are running on his Liberal Reform ticket are fraternity members. Neither Becker nor his running mate for vice president, Bruce Markens '61, belong to a fraternity.

In addition, Becker probably will get the endorsement of Al Linden '61, the popular incumbent. Linden will announce his support Monday, after the Forum.

Roa Hits US Policy Says Role in Cuba Led to Revolt

By Ralph Blumenthal

Raul Roa Jr. yesterday attributed the inevitability of the Cuban Revolution to the abuses of the United States and other foreign governments.

"The Cuban Revolution did not come out of the mountains," he said, but it was the logical outcome of Spanish and American expansionist policies, which some people call the "frontier spirit."

The son of Cuba's Foreign Minister and a member of the Cuban Delegation to the United Nations, Mr. Roa spoke before a crowd estimated at 250 in 417 Finley. His appearance was sponsored by the Student Government Public Affairs Forum.

Mr. Roa sarcastically referred to the Spanish-American war, which resulted in a United States victory and "independence" for Cuba. "We got a national anthem and a flag—that's all," he said.

"The Platt Amendment, forced into our constitution, gave the United States the right to intervene whenever they felt that the Cubans couldn't govern them-selfes," he continued. "If this is sovereignty, we have a different concept of it." The Platt Amendment established Guantanamo as a US military base.

According to the speaker, the desire to end these abuses became Cuba's revolutionary doctrine.

Mr. Roa contradicted President Eisenhower's statement that the Cuban Revolution has taken unforeseen directions. "All true revolutionists had read [Premier] Castro's plans and knew what Cuba was headed for," he said.

People who are leaving Cuba because of their dissatisfaction with Castro and the revolution, never were in accord with the principles of the revolution, he asserted, and did not have the courage to stick with its ideals.

Mr. Roa admitted that the Communist Party has been cooperating with the Cuban government. Communists occupy minor government positions because "they work for the government and do not betray it."

Hendel Taking Leave in Spring; Three Govt. Electives Dropped

By Larry Grossman

Three elective courses in the College's Government Department have been cancelled for next term, when the department chairman will take a sabbatical leave.

Prof. Samuel Hendel will be Visiting Scholar at Columbia University for the spring term. The Department last Wednesday unanimously elected Prof. Ivo Duchacek its acting chairman. Professor Duchacek has been teaching at the College since 1949.

[The Board of Higher Education agreed in October to change the department's name from Government to Political Science.]

The two sections of Political Science 32 (Government and Politics in the USSR), which Professor Hendel usually teaches here during the spring, will be postponed until next fall.

Professor Duchacek, who will have a lighter teaching load as acting chairman, will not give Political Science 37 or 46 during the day, but will teach the former in the evening.

Professor Hendel, who speaks Russian, said he will spend the first few months of his sabbatical catching up on literature in the Soviet field.

"During the remaining period and most of the summer, I hope to get a book about the USSR substantially on the way," he added. The chairman speaks Russian fluently, and has visited the Soviet Union several times.

The Iceman Cometh

—Photos by Jacobson

The Two Brothers Ice Company truck (above) stands outside the Finley Center. Machine at right is used to crush large cakes of ice in back on floor, for use in students' soft drinks (below).

Twice a day, the iceman cometh to the Finley Center Snack Bar, bringing with him an average of three bucketfuls of not-so-crystal-clear ice.

Some of the ice is then put straight into a container, to be used for students' drinks. It is never washed, although the truck which carries it is not a model of sanitation.

Dr. David Newton (Student Life), associate director of the Center, said yesterday he would investigate immediately. "If either the truck or the ice represents a danger to the health of students, the source will be eliminated," he said.

The Two Brothers Ice Company has been delivering ice to the Snack Bar ever since the South Campus concession was opened in 1955.

He Thought It Was Today . . .

Nicholas R. Doman ate lunch at the Columbia Club yesterday while an overflow crowd in 106 Wagner sat waiting to hear him speak on "The Legal Aspects of the Eichman Case."

Doman, the assistant chief prosecutor at the Nuremberg trials, had been scheduled to address a joint meeting of the Government and Law, and History societies at 12:30.

Sheldon Rosenberg '61, HLS president, said he had confirmed Doman's appointment with his secretary on Wednesday. When he didn't appear for the speech, Rosenberg again phoned his office—from a pay booth in Wagner's lobby.

Doman's secretary told Rosenberg the lawyer had collected all his documents and was anxious to speak. She then contacted Doman, who called Rosenberg back at 1.

"He had us down for [Friday]," shrugged Rosenberg. He said he'd have been glad to come right over, "but it was just too late."

The society is investigating the possibility of inviting Doman again—for December 22.

Food for Thought

Nearly a thousand Negroes voted in Fayette County last month—the first time this has happened since Reconstruction. The local White Citizen's Council has been on the job since the Negroes registered last March to insure that the good white citizens of Fayette County shall not face such an affront again. The tragic results are told in the following release from the College's chapter of Americans for Democratic Action:

Now their situation is desperate. Food is still unavailable (what little they have must be smuggled in from Memphis, a 250-mile roundtrip.) Since most of those who voted are sharecroppers, and the crop is now in, they are being driven off their land. Those who own their farms are having their crop loans called in, leaving them bankrupt.

The economic boycott of these people is so complete that two children have already died, one from malnutrition, the other because no doctor in the county would treat her. (There are no Negro professional men in Fayette County). Winters are severe in Tennessee, and unless help on a large scale is gotten to these people quickly, many more will starve and die.

Neither the White House nor most of the nation's press has taken official notice of a story that is being followed in places as far-flung as Johannesburg, New Delhi, and Caracas. As in the case of the lunch counter sit-ins last Spring, it has remained for the nation's colleges to take the lead in combatting one of the major ills in our society.

Now it is the College's turn to do its part. Action here has already been spurred largely by a meeting of metropolitan area student leaders held last Saturday. On Monday, the campus ADA will set up booths in Knittle Lounge, Shepard, and in the trophy lounge of the Finley Center, while Hillel will have a collection point at its house at 475 W. 140 Street.

One of the blessings that come with living in New York City is that there is a super market in nearly every neighborhood. Most of them hold sales on canned foods every day, and it is still possible to buy several good meals, from cans only, for a little over a dollar. Surely, students will have time over the weekend to buy some food for a family deprived of its own because it tried to exercise a right guaranteed to it in the Fourteenth Amendment. And clothing and money will also be welcomed by the boycotted Negroes, whose plight daily grows more desperate.

Once again, the students must bring home to an apathetic public a sordid story it has preferred to suppress, in the vain hope that the next day it would be forgotten. And once again, the students must not themselves be allowed to forget the meaning of ordinary human compassion.

The Plague of the Week

Act III, Scene I. The Iceman Returneth. The Place: The Finley Center Snack Bar. The Time: Any school day, any hour.

HARRY: You took the life out of my coke, Hickey.

HICKEY: What sayeth you?

HARRY: Why'd'ja put this dirt in my coke, Hickey?

ROCKY, the Bartender: This drink tastes like it was dashed through an automatic washer.

HICKEY: Aw c'mon, boys and girls. What kind of dream is that? The Iceman returneth last period and piped his cubes into your drink.

OTTO (waking): Buy me a vanilla malted you little monkey face.

HICKEY: You've got to realize how plain and hopeless your drinking really is. I licked this problem and I want to share my freedom with you. I buy my cokes from the machine.

NO DISCRIMINATION

To the Editor:

In your December 7 editorial concerning Phi Kappa Theta's approval by the Student Government Executive Committee, you state that, "PKT representatives admitted that since they had been and were following discriminatory policies in the selection of members . . . they were merely trying to bring these practices out into the open and make them legal." No such statement was ever made by a member of Phi Kappa Theta.

Perhaps in clarifying our stand which you misrepresented in the above statement, I will answer the question asked in the same editorial: "But does this action mean that PKT has amended its belief in religious restriction, or does PKT intend to continue its practices, having found no way to bring these practices out into the open?"

Holds Catholic Beliefs

Our fraternity has always held Catholic beliefs. We have always believed that anyone who does not subscribe to these beliefs would not be interested in becoming a member of our organization, and that it would be unethical to open our membership to them.

Our chapter has never had a non-Catholic member, but we have never refused membership because a man held different beliefs—no non-Catholic has ever applied for membership.

The chapter's policy under the approved constitution is this: all men who apply for membership, regardless of their religious beliefs, will be judged on their individual merit; but we doubt that the situation will be changed. Students who do not subscribe to our beliefs will probably not be interested in joining. Nevertheless, we will abide by our present constitution in letter and spirit.

We did not make these beliefs and policies public before because we feared—and this fear proved to be well founded—that, no matter how legal they were, they would not be sanctioned by our utopian campus.

YRC Changes Stand On Political Clause

By Alan Kravath

The Young Republican Club, which gained approval of its charter by the Student Government Executive Committee by eliminating a clause restricting membership to Republicans, will now attempt to have the clause reinstated.

The club will carry its plea to the meeting of the Student Faculty Committee on Student Activities on December 22, where charter approval is passed upon.

The YRC charter was approved by Exec only after the change was made from requiring that members "must subscribe to," to "must have an interest in," the club's political beliefs.

Since fraternities which restrict membership on the basis of sex, and religious organizations exist on campus, Arthur Powick '63, president of YRC insisted that political restriction should be made legitimate.

"We wish to uphold our integrity . . . and keep liberals from dominating the club," he said.

'Manana' Wins for Sis Wiley

A group of "spirited" freshmen coeds won first prize yesterday in House Plan's Second Annual Sing.

Competing with six other houses, Sis Wiley '64 swayed and sang to an original parody on "Manana," in the Grand Ballroom. They were judged winners on the basis of creativity, presentation and adherence to the theme, "The Spirit of House Plan."

Mickey Rodin, a member of the winning house, assuming a Spanish accent from her perch atop a high stool, accompanied herself on a guitar while her "sisters" shook their maracas and swayed with the beat. Mickey attributed the victory to the "spirit of the girls." Seventeen of Sis Wiley's twenty members participated in the Sing.

The winning parody becomes the HP song for 1961 and will be printed on the back of the association's membership card. The prize, which has not yet been decided, will be awarded next Thursday in the HP lounge.

Sis Mosher '64, and Remsen '63, tied for second place.

Chancellor Asks More State Aid

Chancellor John D. Everett Wednesday called for increased tax support for all institutions of higher learning.

Speaking in Syracuse at an annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Universities, Dr. Everett declared that tax exemptions now enjoyed by private institutions are "subsidies granted by the federal, state and local governments to those institutions deemed to be serving the general public interest."

The chancellor's statements came only three weeks after Governor Rockefeller's proposal for a ten percent tax rebate to all taxpayers from "surplus revenue," and the Heald Committee's recommendation for a $300 tuition at municipal colleges.

MCS to Present Review on Thurs.

The College's Musical Comedy Society will present a review of songs from its past productions, Thursday at 12:45 in the Grand Ballroom.

Members of the society will offer selections from "Damn Yankees," "Anything Goes," "Pajama Game," and several songs from its former House Plan Carnival shows.

The review will be sponsored by the Student Government Cultural Agency.

The MSC also has begun rehearsing for its next major production, "Where's Charley?" to be presented in March.

The play is described by MCS vice president Paul Blake '62 as the society's "first big costume show."

An Author Meets His Critics

An author and his critics disagreed yesterday on whether the structure of society must change in order to preserve the individuality of its members. But the critics also disagreed with each other.

Prof. Kenneth B. Clark (Psychology) and Milton Barron (Chmn. Sociology), the critics, attacked author Paul Goodman for the gloomy philosophy expressed in his novel, "Growing Up Aburd." The central theme of the book is the frustration of the individual in today's society.

In his book, Mr. Goodman advocated the substitution of many small neighborhood societies for the present complex society. This change would eliminate the indifference of society to the individual, he wrote.

Professor Clark attacked this view as "utopian." He declared that we must accept the existing structure of society and live with it. As an alternative to the logic of suicide, "we must settle for what is absurd," he said.

Professor Barron took exception to the views of both his fellow critic and the author, in the discussion, held at Hillel House.

Professor Barron said there is hope for society as it exists now. "I see no need for the gloom that Mr. Goodman expresses," he declared.

He further noted that if members of society feel there is room for individuality, they will assert it. "Prophecies tend to be self-fulfilling," he observed.

Five' Going to Any Length To Find Its First Victory — 200 Miles to Bucknell

When the College's basketball team takes the court against Bucknell University tomorrow night, it may appear as if it had to travel 200 miles to find a team that was in its class.

But from the looks of Bucknell, the journey will be made in vain.

Bucknell appears almost on a par with the Beavers top Metropolitan rivals—NYU, St. John's, Manhattan and Fordham—which were dropped from the schedule this season in favor of teams that were said to be more in the College's class of play.

Although the Pennsylvanians have lost two games while winning only one, their opposition has been of high calibre.

They won their first game of the season over Gettysburg, 72-66, and lost the second to Rutgers in overtime, 58-55. On Wednesday they lost a close decision to Cornell, 52-50.

Bucknell will have a terrific height advantage over the Beavers. Its starting team averages 6-5, while the Lavender starters average 6-1.

The standout for the Pennsylvanians will be 6-4 forward Joel Steiner, who has been averaging 26 points-per-game and 14 rebounds per-game. Don Lampos, 6-5, will play the other forward position.

In the backcourt Bucknell features a scrappy duo in Dick Knissen, 6-2, and Bruce Babich, 6-3.

And Beaver center Shelley Bender will spend a good part of the evening looking up to Bucknell's pivot man, 6-11 Mike Krasnick.

But before the Beavers begin to worry about defending against Bucknell's impressive offensive array, they must worry about their own offense.

Against Columbia they took only 44 shots. Worse yet, they hit on only 14 of them for a .318 percentage—their best this season.

Undefeated Riflers To Face CW Post

The College's undefeated rifle team faces C. W. Post today, confident of its fifth victory of the season.

"We should have no trouble with Post," Coach Sergeant Bernard Kelley said. "They're a new team and they haven't been firing too well."

Kelley is counting on three men, Don Nunns, Bernie Renois, and John Hirth, who have been the high scorers in the first three meets, to be the mainstays of the squad.

Nunns has been the team leader with scores in the 290's, but Hirth, a sophomore, has been the biggest surprise of the team with scores in the high 280's.

After the sure victory over C. W. Post at home today, the riflers will face Queens and the United States Merchant Marine Academy in a triangular meet on December 16. On January 7 they face a non-league opponent in Army, the toughest team on the schedule.

Fencers Face Yale Tomorrow; Lucia: Our Most Crucial Meet

The College's fencing team will travel to New Haven, Connecticut tomorrow, in quest of confidence.

Naturally the fencers are hoping for a victory over highly favored Yale, but the primary concern is for a good showing that will give them confidence in themselves.

"This will probably be our most crucial match of the season," coach Edward F. Lucia said. "If my boys can perform well, it will affect the whole rest of our schedule. They need self-confidence to improve," he explained.

The Bulldogs, who were beaten by the Beavers last season, 16-11, have three starters returning and six newcomers.

The outstanding fencer on the team is sabreman Bill Profeta, who took fourth place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships last season.

The biggest surprise of the season for the Beavers has been in the performance of sabreman Fred Marcus. With a triple victory against Penn, he emerged as the fencers' newest potential champion.

COACH EDWARD F. LUCIA

"One rose doesn't make a summer," coach Lucia commented, "but against Penn he certainly fenced like a champion."

COACH DAVE POLANSKY

DR. FROOD ON FINE ARTS

In which Lucky Strike's gift to the arts selects "The World's Greatest Masterpieces" and reveals all—in fact, more than all—that is known about each.

Whistlers' Mother: This painting, by an unknown artist, depicts the housemother of a college sorority patiently waiting for a dance to break up in the next room. Note how the artist has captured the anguish and devotion of this lonely woman as she frets over her young charges (who were nicknamed "The Whistlers" because of the way in which they obtained dates).

Early Rembrandt: That Rembrandt was born a genius is conclusively proven by this little-known masterpiece. This, his first known painting, astounded critics and made the name Billy Rembrandt famous throughout Europe. Believe it or not, Rembrandt created this masterpiece when he was two years old!

The Venus de Milo: Sculptured in the second century B.C. on behalf of a Greek pencil manufacturer, this great statue has won fame through the ages as the symbol of beauty parlors, bowling alleys, upholstery firms and reducing pills. Today it is used primarily as a vivid warning to small children who bite their fingernails.

The Thinker: What is The Thinker thinking? This has been as baffling to scholars as the riddle of the sphinx and "Who's on first?" But now it can be revealed that this statue is actually a Roman warrior who had been asked, "Remember how great cigarettes used to taste?" When he failed to answer, "Luckies still do," he was turned to stone.

Woman in Water: Here is the original of a great "lost" masterpiece which I was able to acquire for the ridiculously low price of $8,500. I mention this only to show what great bargains you can find in art if you know your subject. I determined the authenticity of this priceless original by proving that the small stain, upper left, was made by Renoir's favorite coffee.
