The Candidates Hold a Sedate Debate 6 New PhD's Asked

For CU Next Fall

By Joe Berger

The City University revealed plans Tuesday to add six new doctoral offerings next fall to its PhD program.

The new offerings will be in history, political science, sociology, education, physics and mathematics.

The number of programs to be initiated will depend on the amount of state aid the CU receives for its graduate studies, according to Dr. Mina S. Rees, Dean of Graduate Studies at the City University.

If the CU receives $1 million, the amount granted by the state for doctoral programs this year, only the PhD in history will be instituted, Dr. Rees said. She explained that the CU is committed to institute the history program because it has guaranteed those students taking a Masters Degree in history a doctoral offering next fall.

The CU has asked the state to provide $2½ million for its doctoral program. They have asked the City for $1 million towards next year's PhD program, the same amount granted this year. The CU will seek an additional $500,000 needed for the program from sources such as tuition fees, gifts, and federal grants.

Six doctoral programs are already maintained by the CU. They are: English and American literature, economics, chemistry, engineering, biology, and psychology.

Dr. Rees explained that the state is being asked to pay the largest share of the doctoral program because the city already assumes "the burden of undergraduate education."

Foreign

The Foreign Students Committee will hold a reception and tea today at 12:15 in 121 Finley. Dean William Colford and Dr. Carolyn McCann (Student Life) will attend.

DEAN MINA REES said the number of PhD's offered will depend on the size of state aid.

Students to Tutor In Harlem for JOIN Starting in January

Students at the College will serve next January as tutors in JOIN (Job Orientation in Neighborhoods), a program for rehabilitating high school dropouts in the city.

The $3 million JOIN project is a joint federal government-New York City project. The federal government supplied $2 million, and the city $1 million. The program provides vocational training and remedial instruction in reading and mathematics.

Students from the College will be used primarily as tutors in remedial reading, according to John Zippert '66, co-ordinator of the project at the College. The tutorial program is being sponsored by the College's chapter of the National Student Association.

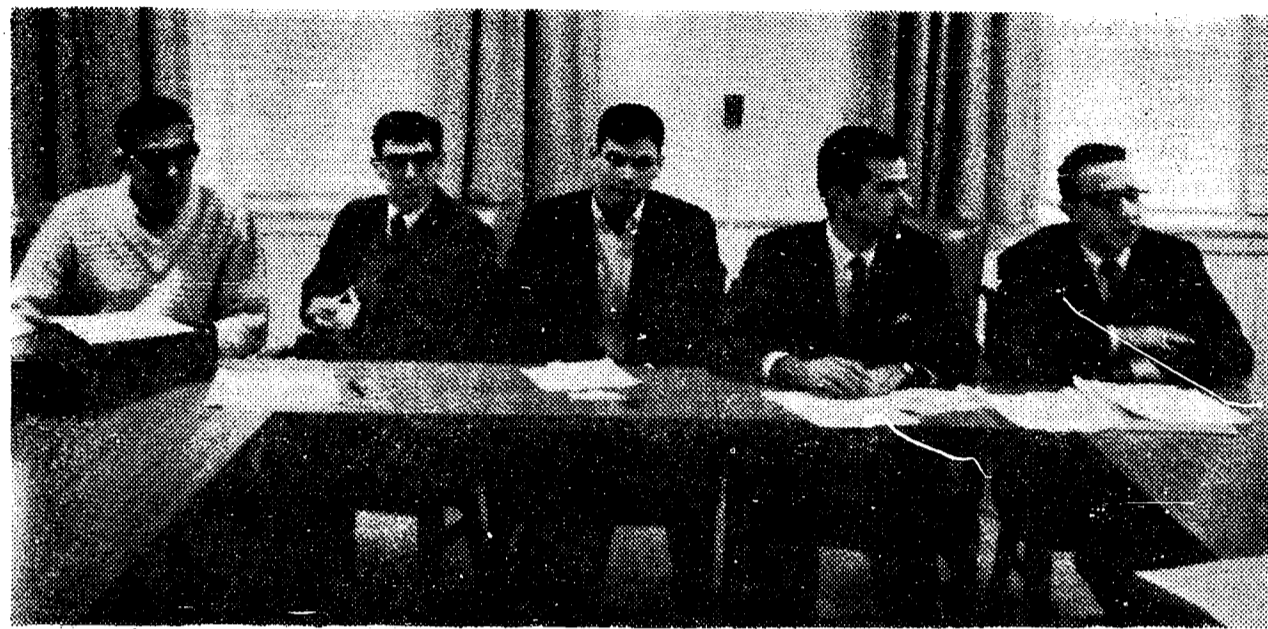

The students will work at a center on 104 Street in East Harlem, the site of the first JOIN project in the city.

SG Reorganization Is Discussed

The four candidates for Student Government President debated yesterday in 212 Finley and stuck to the issues. It was a quiet debate.

With no charges flying back and forth, and an audience of 20 listening sedately, the four, Bob Levine '64, Bob Rosenberg '64, Howie Simon '65 and Barry Smith '64 dealt with the reorganization proposals and the enrollment crisis.

In the five minutes allotted him, Simon—who authored the reorganization proposals, which include a year's term for S.G. President—said that their passage is more important than any candidate's election.

Rosenberg, who is against the proposals, said that they will not help S.G. become more effective, and that the only cure is increased rapport between S.G. and the individual student organizations.

All four candidates agreed on the importance of President Gallagher's enrollment proposals for the College, and all questioned their wisdom, except Smith, who said we should not automatically disagree with Dr. Gallagher because he's been with the College for ten years and "he has the interests of the students at heart."

Smith also used the occasion to mention a clause in his platform that provides for an exchange program with students from Venezuela.

Shriver: Corps Women Have Beauty and Security Clearance

Want to meet a girl who has been screened for intellectual capacity, good physical shape, psychological balance, and, in some cases, for security clearance?

Simple. Join the Peace Corps. According to R. Sargent Shriver, director of the corps who spoke here yesterday, all women corpsmen fulfill the rigid qualifications noted, above.

Shriver told an audience of 500 in the Aronow Auditorium that all men who join the peace corps "know more about the people there than you do about the girl sitting next to you." For the girls, the director offered another fact: there are two men for each woman in the Peace Corps.

Mr. Shriver said the Peace Corps offers college graduates a chance for a "terrific education."

"Service in the Peace Corps gives you a chance to see yourself as others do, objectively. You leave your own culture and have a chance to re-evaluate your ideas and actions."

Interrupted frequently by applause, Mr. Shriver regaled the audience with anecdotes about

US Aid May Help Construction Here

Congress has approved a $1.195 billion college aid bill which may allow the College to receive construction funds for two new buildings.

The Senate approved the bill Tuesday and then sent it to President Johnson who is expected to sign the bill shortly. The House had passed the bill earlier in the session.

The bill provides for a 3-year program of grants and loans to help finance the building of classrooms, libraries, laboratories, and other academic facilities in colleges and universities.

The bill notes that colleges and universities planning to expand their enrollments would be preferred in the allotment of funds. The College plans such an expansion for next September.

Dean Leslie Engler (Administration) said in October that the bill may contribute funds towards the construction of the new science and physical education building, scheduled for completion by 1968.

DEAN LESLIE ENGLER said College may get aid for construction from US government.

He noted that the final authority on distribution of the funds would "probably be the state."

The College may also receive grants or loans for the new humanities building, which is expected to be constructed behind Klapper Hall.

Planning funds for the humanities building are requested in the current Board of Higher Education capital budget request.

Grants of $835 million and loans of $360 million are authorized under the bill.

Approximately $145 million of the grants would be used for graduate schools. The remaining grants would be available for construction of libraries and facilities for undergraduate work.

The bill is the first major new federal program of college aid since 1958.

Visiting Prof

Professor Louis Gottschalk, a modern history teacher at Chicago University, has been named Buell G. Gallagher Visiting Professor for the spring semester.

Former president of the American History Association, Professor Gottschalk has authored several books, including "The Letters of Lafayette to Washington," "Lafayette Between the American and French Revolutions (1783-99)," and "Understanding History. A Primer of Historical Method."

Doctor Bills

Like most of the City University's problems, desires and ambitions, the creation of an effective doctoral program hinges on money. We have an excess of willing students and talented teachers, but very little money for the necessary pedagogic and research facilities, and faculty salaries.

That our students have the ability to make excellent use of a complete and well-equipped doctorate program can be gauged from recently-disclosed statistics that show the College to be the country's leading undergraduate institution in the production of students who eventually obtain PhD's. But the University's own PhD program is a stepchild — uncared for where it counts, in the pocketbook. In the face of the nation's much talked of shortage of highly trained personnel, the City University's wasted potential borders on the criminal. Certainly it does not take a PhD-holder to realize that the Board of Higher Education's current request should be dealt with generously by the state and city.

Letter

To the Editor:

Barry Smith, in a letter to the Campus Friday, attacked me for "an act of capricious irresponsibility . . . the highest form of contempt for the [SG] presidency and for any 'individual commitment to principles.'" He also charged me with misrepresenting him, not "playing by the rules," and forgetting that "an individual without general principles and the courage to stand up for them will accomplish nothing." For fear that the facts may have been lost amidst Mr. Smith's rhetoric, I would like to set the facts straight.

All I did, in fact, was decide not to print his statement of principles together with the platforms of the two major slates in Observation Post's election issue. I believe my action was warranted—and I would even go so far as to accuse Mr. Smith of ingratitude—for the following reasons:

• Observation Post published only the platforms of slates, not statements of individual candidates. There are forty-seven candidates for Student Government office.

• Mr. Smith had been intending to run for vice-president on Bob Levine's slate, and only at the last minute did he decide to become a presidential candidate "for individual commitment." The other platforms had been submitted well in advance; they were actually set in type before Mr. Smith threw his hat into the ring. Mr. Smith should be satisfied to know that I redid the front page of the OP Election Guide in order to make room for a personal profile of him as a presidential candidate.

• Finally, it was only at my suggestion that Mr. Smith even thought of having his statement of principles published. Moreover, when I made this suggestion, I warned him that because of the late date at which it was submitted (and its extreme length—it would have filled at least a quarter of a newspaper page) I could not guarantee publication. Mr. Smith had no complaint then.

Mr. Smith demands an "equal opportunity." I submit that he received it.

Brunswick Charges Poor Heat Control Ruins the Pianos

By Eileen Safir

Professor Mark Brunswick (Chmn. Music) charged last week that the pianos in Finley Center are being damaged because of the Department of Buildings and Ground's "failure" to control the heat in the music rooms.

Professor Brunswick stated that "since 1956 all we have wanted to do is turn off the heat."

He has sent repeated letters, the last one on February 14, 1963, to Mr. Kenneth Fleming, director of the Department of Buildings and Grounds, requesting that a heat control device be installed on the radiators in four music rooms. He has also requested an asbestos covering for the wall pipes. Professor Brunswick said that he hasn't received a reply to his last letter.

Mr. Fleming stated that he "knows nothing about the charges." He added that "they're [the charges] out of a clear blue sky." He stated that he thought there were radiator controls in the rooms.

Prof. Brunswick said that at present there is no device to control the heat. The only way to cool the room is to open the windows and the rapid change from hot to cold air is damaging to the pianos, he said. The instruments cost about $1000 each.

Professor Brunswick stated that the seeming inability to get any action on his recommendations might be due to "Mr. Fleming's lack of a large enough staff." He added that there "seems to be no system or a very faulty office system for categorizing" the jobs to be done and for starting work.

service in the Peace Corps.

He told of:

• two elderly women volunteers teaching school in Ethiopia who shared a farewell dinner of champagne and caviar with Emperor Haile Selassie.

• a married volunteer who had her baby in the slum where she was working despite the recommendation of doctors that she go to a hospital.

• a volunteer who was elected to the board of directors of a slum community in Lima, Peru.

Mr. Shriver praised the work of the 44 College alumni who have served in the Peace Corps.

He also announced the start of a new program under which students may enroll for Peace Corps training during the summer of their junior year at college. After completion of the senior year, the students will go directly overseas for assignment. Presently, students may enroll for training only after graduation from college.

The Peace Corps has been assured of President Johnson's support, Mr. Shriver said. "This gives us a great feeling of confidence and security," he said.

The Peace Corps director's speech was piped into the Grand Ballroom where an audience of 500 listened.

He answered students' questions in both the auditorium and the ballroom. Before leaving, he was mobbed by autograph-seeking students.

Mr. Shriver's speech was the highlight of a week-long Peace Corps recruiting campaign here.

Lincoln

operation on the statue outside Shepard Hall was not a plastic surgeon but a paint scraper who shaved off the lately acquired paint on Lincoln's head.

President Gallagher claims the defacement of the statue was the "work of student pranksters."

The department of building and grounds said the incident is not the first case of vandalism nor the last.

Mr. Kenneth Fleming, the superintendent of buildings and grounds, feels that such acts can only be tolerated as long as they do not result in permanent damage. He cited the case of the Beaver statue on south campus, which had also been decorated with paint but which cannot be completely cleaned because it is made of sandstone which absorbs paint.

Actually there is little the department or the school can do to find the vandals because the artists did not sign their work.

Blume to Be Questioned Today On Violation of Campaign Rule

By Bob Weisberg

The Elections Agency will hold a hearing today to determine whether Alan Blume '64, candidate for Student Government Treasurer, is guilty of circulating misleading campaign literature.

Blume's opponent, Larry Steinhauer '64, yesterday registered a formal complaint with the Agency that Blume had posted a flyer claiming that he was endorsed for Treasurer by Tech News. In its election issue, which appeared today, Tech News supported Steinhauer.

Steinhauer further complained that the false notice was posted before Tech News published its issue.

Blume admitted posting the flyer, but added that his actions "were not a willful attempt to violate regulations." He dismissed the charges as "just a minor incident which will be cleared up."

Steinhauer, however, said that "it does not matter whether this is minor or major—it is an abuse that should never have occurred. It is unfortunate that anyone would stoop to something so low."

An informed source in Student Government said it is "doubtful" that Blume will be disqualified from the race by the Elections Agency. Barry Domber '64, chairman of the Agency refused to disclose possible consequences if Blume is found guilty.

The hearing will take place at 12:30 when statements by both Blume and Steinhauer will be reviewed.

A complaint has been lodged against Blume from another quarter. In a letter to The Campus, Stuart Simon '64 noted that an advertisement placed by Blume in the December 10 issue of The Campus, incorrectly stated that he supported the candidate for treasurer.

"He [Blume] had never asked for or been given any indication that I consented to the use of my name in an ad of this type, or indeed, any indication, that I am even supporting him for the position, WHICH I AM NOT (sic)," the letter said.

Simon added that "this is among the many election abuses . . . that stand in grave need of correction by Student Council."

Tutors

The tutors will work at the center twice weekly in teams of two or three. They will participate in a training session in remedial reading techniques before the JOIN center opens in January.

Israel Immigration Praised by Sharett

The "freedom to accept people from outside has been the outstanding feature of Israel's history," Moshe Sharett, former Prime Minister of Israel said here yesterday.

Speaking before 300 students and faculty in Aronow Auditorium, Mr. Sharett described the establishment of the state of Israel as the culmination of 70 years of struggle.

"Before 1880, there was not a single house in the world where Hebrew was spoken," Mr. Sharett said. Hebrew is now the national language of Israel.

Mr. Sharett is the chairman of the Jewish Agency for Israel. He has served as the foreign minister of Israel, and was the nation's Prime Minister in 1954-5.

His appearance was sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization of Israel.

Tables Turned For Smolev; Now He Helps Beaver Cause

Athletes' Pre-Enrollment Is Sought by Varsity Club

By Ray Corio and Arthur Woodard

Forty-six seconds had elapsed in last Saturday's opening game with Brooklyn College, and neither team had scored.

Suddenly, a whistle pierced through stuffy Wingate Gym. Brooklyn's Al Blanc had fouled the College's Ira Smolev.

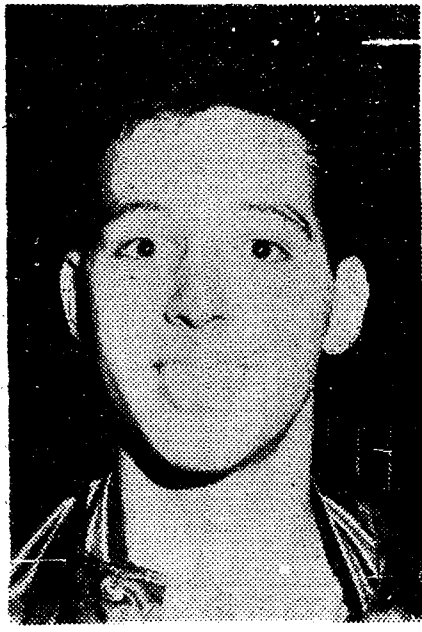

Smolev strode to the free throw line and calmly spun the ball through the net. It was only the beginning.

Four more times Smolev shuffled to the foul line during the game, and four more times the ball effortlessly swished through the hoop.

Tie-Breaker

At 4:14 of the first half, Smolev drove past the startled Kingsmen and rang up a Beaver basket. He chalked up seven two-pointers in eleven tries during the night, but this was the most important one because it broke a 6-6 tie and put the cagers ahead for the rest of the game.

Then, with only two and a half minutes remaining in the game, cager coach Dave Polansky removed Smolev. Beaver fans cheered him as he left the court after having netted 19 points. Surprisingly, so did the Brooklyn fans.

Maybe the Kingsmen supporters were cheering from force of habit, though. After all, for a year and a half Smolev had been the big gun for them.

Last year, in fact, he had averaged twenty points a game for them for half a season. In the Beaver-Brooklyn contest a year ago he had topped that average by one.

Then last semester, the call of engineering bade Smolev to the College. Brooklyn's loss became the Beaver's gain.

Fantastic Score

It didn't take long for Smolev to endear himself to his new fans. Who will ever forget that unbelievable last second basket he scored to send the opening game with Columbia into overtime?

Let Smolev tell what happened: "The coach called the play during the time-out we took with one second left.

"When we returned to the court Dave (Schweid) heaved the ball to me. The Columbia player who was guarding me was going to intercept it, so I got in his way and caught it like a football. After that, I was in perfect position for the shot."

Smolev closed that night with 17 points. He's followed with scoring spurges of 13, 19 and 21 points for a four game average of 17.5.

That's second only to captain Alex Blatt on the team. It's also a strong indication of why the Lavender hoopsters have become an offensive powerhouse this season, averaging nearly 88 points a game.

Remembers Brooklyn

But it's the Brooklyn game that sticks in Smolev's mind the most. Throughout the night his ex-fans and former teammates bombarded him with a variety of catcalls and cheers.

"Hey Ey—ra baby," someone shouted teasingly every so often from the Kingsmen rooting section.

"Gee he still looks great," a member of the Brooklyn press corps mourned regretfully. "Why can't we have an engineering school too?"

Don't think that all of this didn't affect Smolev. They're all my friends," he said after the game. "I wanted to beat them, of course, but they're still my friends.

"Before the game I tried to make myself believe that this one wasn't anything special," he continued, "but I'll admit that I was a little more nervous than usual."

Beavers Serious

In comparing the two City University teams he's played for Smolev stresses the fact that the attitude at the College is a much more serious one with regard to basketball.

"It might be because we play a little more big time competition over here," he said. "Take the Columbia game. The whole team really took that loss hard."

But Brooklyn College needn't weep over a departed Smolev. Ira has a seventeen year old brother, Barry, who played for the Kingsmen in Saturdays freshmen game. Appropriately enough, he led both teams in scoring with 18 points.

"We play a lot in the schoolyards around Brooklyn," Smolev said. "He's not too bad either."

Now if only Barry wanted to become an engineer . . .

The College's Varsity Club is making an effort to obtain the privilege of early registration for all varsity athletes at the College.

Club president Walter "Red" Brown (Lacrosse) will meet with President Gallagher next Tuesday to discuss the possibilities of a plan whereby Beaver athletes will be permitted to register with the senior class.

Currently, all Lavender athletes are forced to register with their designated group in the same way that every student at the College does.

However, according to Brown and the varsity coaches, this method hurts the school's teams.

"It's impossible to field a good team if the entire squad never gets a chance to practice together," Brown said.

"Why, sometimes the coach doesn't see a player until the day of the game because the fellow has late classes and can't attend the practice sessions," he added.

Brown revealed that he is also making an attempt to gain the support of the College's Alumni Association.

Prior to the basketball scandals of the early 1950's, all Beaver athletes were allowed to register before the student body.
