Supported by Student Fees

SG Committee Approves Institution of $27 Fee

By Jean Patman

Student Government approved Tuesday the institution of a $27 bursar's fee next term.

In a report which will be submitted to President Gallagher and Dr. Willard Blaesser, Dean of Students, a special SG committee, created to evaluate the ten dollar fee increase, endorsed the increase as being necessary under the present circumstances.

However, the three man committee held several reservations about the increase.

It expressed doubt that a consolidated fee of six dollars is necessary to cover the laboratory costs of all students. It further requested that Dr. Gallagher provide SG with figures indicating the cost of laboratory fees to each student with respect to his major.

Although questioning the need for the student to pay six dollars for finance laboratory costs, the committee approved the principle of a consolidated fee levied on all students.

"At a tuition-free college one student should not find himself financially penalized over and above the rest of the student body simply because he has decided to become a biologist rather than a historian," it maintained.

Use of a two dollar student fee provided for salary increases for the College's student aides was so questioned. The committee report said that since student aides perform "essentially the same type service" as full-time secretaries and clerks here, the city, which

SG Collects $175 for JFK Library in Four-day Drive

Approximately $175 was collected at the College last week to help finance construction of the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library at Harvard University.

A four-day drive was staged by Student Government at the request of the John F. Kennedy Library Inc. that the College contribute to the cause.

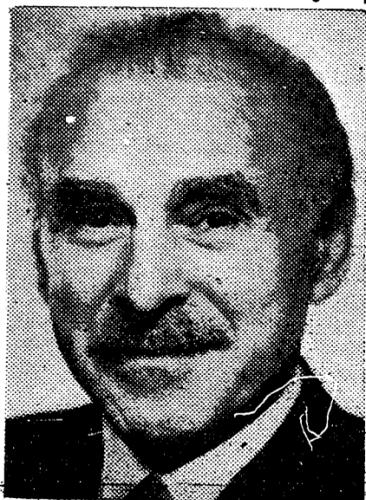

Stan Lowenthal '65, coordinator of the campaign, considered the effort a success. However, he expressed annoyance "that a lot of people refused to give for the cause."

The library is being constructed as a living monument to President Kennedy. Besides a collection of the late President's letters, it will contain microfilms and exhibits documenting President Kennedy's wartime and political career.

WBAI

The WBAI club will present "Oxford, U.S.A.," a film on the integration of the University of Mississippi, tomorrow, at 3 and 4:21-7:15 Finley.

Charter Day To Be Held At 11 Today

DR. GUSTAVE ROSENBERG will address the Charter Day ceremonies in the Great Hall today.

The College will celebrate Charter Day today with a two hour ceremony in Great Hall.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner, who was scheduled to be the keynote speaker at the convocation, will not be able to attend. In his place, Deputy Mayor Edward F. Cavanaugh will deliver a brief speech. The Mayor cancelled his address because he must preside at budget hearings at the same time as the ceremony.

An audience of one thousand faculty members, students, and guests is expected to attend the convocation.

All classes scheduled at 11 will be suspended, allowing students time for lunch after the two-hour ceremonies which begin at 11:15.

Dr. Gustave Rosenberg, chairman of the Board of Higher Education and Bob Rosenberg '64, Student Government President, will join the Mayor in addressing the convocation. President Gallagher will preside over the ceremonies.

The program includes the dedication of the flags of the Universities of Mexico and Santa Domingo. These banners will be raised alongside the flag of other universities of South America and Europe now displayed in Great Hall.

A new ceremony has been added this year to the traditional program. Fellowships and awards will be presented to graduating students. Previously these honors were awarded at a separate ceremony later in May.

Charter Day is the annual celebration of the founding of the Free Academy in 1847. The establishment of the Academy, which later became the College was authorized by a bill signed by New York Governor John Young.

Volpe To Head English Dep't. In September

By Frank Van Riper

Prof. Edmond L. Volpe was elected chairman of the English department at a departmental meeting last Friday.

Dr. Volpe, an assistant professor who has been teaching at the College since 1954, will begin a three-year term next September. He replaces Prof. Edgar M. Johnson as the department's chairman.

Professor Johnson, who has served as chairman for the past fifteen years, had told his colleagues in 1961 that he would retire after completing his fifth term. He said yesterday that a fifteen-year tenure as department head is sufficient, and praised his successor as "a very capable man with vigorous ideas."

Dr. Volpe, discussing the election of an assistant professor to a position of the magnitude of the chairmanship said that the choice "is not unusual because a chairman is elected."

"I'm certainly very glad my colleagues showed confidence in me," he added.

Professor Johnson, however, maintained that the election was "unusual but not unprecedented."

Protest of Awards Staged at Council

LARRY STEINHAUER '64 did not attend the SC meeting in a protest of honors and awards.

SG PRESIDENT Bob Rosenberg '64 reproached 3 SC members for protesting Council's decision.

Two members of Student Council walked out of last night's Council meeting to protest that body's deliberation on the recipients of honors and awards.

Mike Ticktin '66 and Joel Glassman '66 left the meeting room as soon as consideration of the awards began. Student Government treasurer, Larry Steinhauer '64, also demonstrated his protest by boycotting the entire meeting.

The three students criticized

Council's decision to distribute honors and awards because they felt that a referendum on last term's election ballot had removed Council's control over the awards.

Bob Rosenberg '64, Student Government president, reproached the three Council members for their action. "When Student Council makes a decision, every member should try to implement this decision," he said.

On March 18, Student Council voted to continue distribution of honors and awards, pending further consideration of methods to distribute honors and awards.

At that time, Danny Katkin '65, SG vice-president contended that the referendum only prohibited Council from distributing awards that were paid out of student fees. The awards to be presented this term, however, were paid for through funds allocated in previous terms.

Ticktin defended his action, and said that he refused "to take part in something I believe to be wrong and thus become a hypocrite in my own eyes."

Student Government hopes that the referendum placed on the present election ballot will clarify student opinion on whether Council has the right to distribute awards.

Peace Corps

Peace Corps representatives will be at the College all next week to recruit volunteers for the training program this summer. A registration booth will be set up on the first floor in Cohen Library and will be open from 9 in the morning to 9 in the evening. Testing will take place Wednesday through Friday. Students should consult the booth for more information.

Enrollments: Danger Ahead

By Henry Gilgoff

Next term, the College will attempt to squeeze 12,600 students into facilities that the Faculty Committee on Enrollment Policy maintains can accommodate only 7,000 students.

Whether the administration can perform this feat or not the enrollment crisis may soon reach the point where the possible inconvenience of students will only be a minor problem. In the very near future the crisis may begin to slowly deteriorate the academic standards of the College.

Registrar Robert L. Taylor has warned that "we're already reaching the danger point where students may very well find it impossible to obtain full programs. In the past year we've come close, but, if students were willing to be flexible, they were able to get their programs."

There are already indications of this impending "danger." In at least one history course, several students must stand when the class is in full attendance.

Prof. Joseph Wisan (Chairman, History) has protested this situation to the administration. "We can handle 40 students but not the 44 and 45 students we presently have in some classes," the professor says.

The burgeoning population of the College has also affected the auxiliary conditions necessary for a good educational atmosphere. In 1962, members of the faculty issued a report called Operation Breakdown which described "the pigsty conditions" that exist, not only in the lunchrooms, bathrooms and buildings, but also in the classrooms.

According to Prof. J. Bailey Harvey (Speech), chairman of the Faculty Committee on Enrollment Policy, increasing enrollments here will only aggravate these conditions.

Next September, the College will admit 375 more freshmen than were admitted last September. President Gallagher says that we can enroll these additional students "with one hand tied behind our backs."

However, the admission of the 375 students does not present a true idea of the size of next term's

REGISTRAR Robert F. Taylor said that the enrollment crisis may soon hit the "danger point."

Sitting on the Fence

It is difficult to determine from the Student Government report on the increase in the bursar's fee, if SG approves of the fee raise, as flatly stated at the report's beginning, or rather frowns on several items in the increase, as hinted further down in the document.

A $27 fee is "necessary under the present conditions," Student Government says, but six dollars to cover laboratory costs may be somewhat exorbitant. Lacking full information, it has asked President Gallagher to supply the figures on the cost of laboratory fees to each student with respect to his major.

The report carries through its inconsistency in still yet another area. City funds, not students fees, it says, should be the source of any increase in the minimum salary of College employees. And student aides, by performing virtually the same services as full-time secretaries and clerks, are, in fact, College employees. Thus, we discover that Student Government is at variance with still another portion of the fee raise.

Finally, the report bemoans the lack of assurance that fee revenue will be spent for its designated purpose. The student body cannot know from a receipt that bears no listing of fee expenditures whether a portion of the student activities fee may be providing for, let us say, athletic equipment.

Eight of the ten dollars that comprise the increase in the bursar's fee have been viewed warily by Student Government. The very manner of imposing the new fee, on a card that lacks any itemization has been criticized. Nevertheless, the $27 fee is "necessary under the present conditions."

Students at the College have the right to know where their student government stands on an issue as important as a ten dollar fee increase. Student Government, unfortunately, in its report, has failed to enlighten anyone on its opinions. We urge the members of the committee that issued the report to re-examine the document and clarify their position.

Letters

To the Student Body:

I would at this time like to express the feelings of Student Council on the admirable action taken by the President of the College in regard to the Grand Ballroom. The administration's co-operation with Student Government should be recognized. The President has made available to us information when we requested it. He has liberalized student use of the Great Hall. Dr. Gallagher has now, by working closely with representatives of Student Government, formed a policy on the Grand Ballroom suitable to all. He has constantly been helpful to Student Government, and has slowly given the student body more of a voice in the policy decisions of the College.

Too often we are quick to criticize an excellent College President but not compliment him when a job is well done. As President of the student body I think recognition is long overdue for the close co-operation that President Gallagher has maintained with Student Government.

entering class.

According to Registrar Taylor, the College will accept 650 transfer students — 250 more than last year. Moreover, "over the last few years, the survival factor at the College has become better. We're not flunking out as many. Thus there will be approximately 290 fewer dropouts."

When these figures are totaled, the rise in the College's student population next term will equal almost one thousand.

The school is risking the hardships inherent in accommodating these extra students for two closely-related reasons. First, it wishes to lower its admission standards. Secondly, by lowering these standards it hopes to be able to admit more students from minority groups.

However, it appears that the admission standards will not really be lowered and even if they were an increase in the percentage of Negroes and Puerto Ricans will not necessarily follow.

Lowered Composite Score

Before this term, a student would be accepted by the College if he had an 85 per cent high school average or a 175 composite score. Now, only the composite score will be considered and this figure will be set at 170 next term. Mr. Taylor points out that 170 score is, in fact, equivalent to an 85 per cent high school average.

Elimination of the high school average as the sole determinant of admission will adversely affect the admission of minority groups. A Student Government report indicates that the Scholastic Aptitude Test [which is weighted with the high school average in determining the composite score] is based on "middle-class culture and standards and vocabulary." A student without this background, the report concludes, will "do poorly on the College Boards." Therefore, students from minority groups, who can possibly achieve an 85 average in high school, will not do well on the SAT because of their lack of a cultural background.

Logic Is Not the Issue

The logic behind increasing enrollments, however, is not really the issue—the administration plans to increase enrollments anyway.

Therefore the College must take steps to meet the crisis.

Next term, more classes will be scheduled in the later afternoon and early morning hours.

Class size will increase in all courses. Three social science departments have experimented this term with large lecture classes supplemented by small discussion groups. Opinion is varied as to the success of the experiment.

However, even if the lectures were judged a complete success, Registrar Taylor points out that there are very few large lecture rooms available. Neither plans to make greater use of infrequently-used hours nor institution of lectures are drastic steps, and Registrar Taylor agrees that "we can squeeze by the years of 1964 and 1965 within essentially the five day week schedule we now use."

1966 Is Crucial Year

But September, 1966 is, according to the Registrar, the crucial term "when we might have to stretch the day past 6 — which will play havoc with the evening session."

The year 1966, however, will not see the crisis reach its zenith, for no new facilities will be added to the College until September, 1968.

Therefore, the College is considering several long range plans. The most extraordinary of these is the elimination of the School of General Studies and the extension of the day session into the evening session — in fact, the creation of a one session college.

The non-matriculated students who attend the School of General Studies would, under the plan, enroll in an expanded community college system. These students would still be able to obtain full degrees in community college facilities.

Necessary Steps

Such steps are necessary because the College is committed to increasing its enrollments. If the present trend continues, approximately 4000 additional students will be enrolled at the College before the first new building is constructed.

The question then is, will the College be able to increase its enrollments without drastically changing the school? All indications would tend to produce a negative answer.

Beauties Here to Join Beasts In Annual Ugly Man Contest

By Jim Fitterman

The College's venerable Ugly Man on Campus will no longer be alone—from now on he will have a girlfriend.

This year, students will not only elect the ugliest man on campus, but they will choose as his mate the most beautiful girl at the College.

"We were thinking of looking for the ugliest girl on campus, but then we decided that maybe nobody would want to enter," Charlie Goldberg '64, project director for the UMOG contest, said.

"So now the requirements are pretty easy," he added. "All a girl has to do to enter is be attractive, beautiful, and sexy."

Under the new system, a student or faculty member who thinks he is ugly enough to win will have to find a beautiful female who is willing to be his mate. The pair will be photographed, and their picture hung in the election booth.

Although the rules for entering the contest have been changed, voting regulations will remain the same as the past.

Student voters will make their selection by depositing donations in a jar underneath the picture of their choice. The couple whose jar contains the most money will be crowned "Beauty and the Beast, 1964."

The contest will be held May 13 through 15. Voting booths will be placed in Trophy Lounge in Finley Center and opposite Knittle Lounge in Shepard Hall.

Funds secured through the contest will be donated to the Heart Fund and Synanon. Students who feel that they are sufficiently ugly to win, and who can find girls with enough nerve to pose with them, can enter by contacting Alpha Phi Omega, the College's service fraternity.

SG Report

pays the wages of the regular employees, should also pay for the aides' salaries.

It urged the administration "to increase its efforts to convince the city to pay for all student wages."

The third criticism levelled in the report objected to the elimination of an itemization on the student's bursar's fee receipt listing the areas earmarked for distribution.

President Gallagher had maintained that elimination of the fee breakdown would allow for greater flexibility in the allocation of funds raised through a fee imposition.

The committee, however, believed "that the student has a right to know the portion of the fee that will support student activities" and proposed that a list of the expenses met by the fee be placed on the student's receipt.

The three members of the committee were Bob Rosenberg, '64, SG President, Danny Katkin '65, SG Vice-President, and Larry Steinhauer '64, SG Treasurer.

Both professors indicated that Dr. Volpe was not the only man considered for the position. Two other instructors vied for the post, but neither Professor Johnson nor Dr. Volpe would reveal their names.

However, the former chairman noted that "all of the three candidates were able men" adding that each one had "strong and enthusiastic support."

Election of a department chairman is determined by a majority of all instructors eligible to vote. Eligibility is granted to all professors, and to those instructors with tenure.

Dr. Volpe at present teaches two courses—a basic course in the Selected Students Program and a class in "American Literature from 1890."

Sitting on the Fence

It is difficult to determine from the Student Government report on the increase in the bursar's fee, if SG approves of the fee raise, as flatly stated at the report's beginning, or rather frowns on several items in the increase, as hinted further down in the document.

A $27 fee is "necessary under the present conditions," Student Government says, but six dollars to cover laboratory costs may be somewhat exorbitant. Lacking full information, it has asked President Gallagher to supply the figures on the cost of laboratory fees to each student with respect to his major.

The report carries through its inconsistency in still yet another area. City funds, not students fees, it says, should be the source of any increase in the minimum salary of College employees. And student aides, by performing virtually the same services as full-time secretaries and clerks, are, in fact, College employees. Thus, we discover that Student Government is at variance with still another portion of the fee raise.

Finally, the report bemoans the lack of assurance that fee revenue will be spent for its designated purpose. The student body cannot know from a receipt that bears no listing of fee expenditures whether a portion of the student activities fee may be providing for, let us say, athletic equipment.

Eight of the ten dollars that comprise the increase in the bursar's fee have been viewed warily by Student Government. The very manner of imposing the new fee, on a card that lacks any itemization has been criticized. Nevertheless, the $27 fee is "necessary under the present conditions."

Students at the College have the right to know where their student government stands on an issue as important as a ten dollar fee increase. Student Government, unfortunately, in its report, has failed to enlighten anyone on its opinions. We urge the members of the committee that issued the report to re-examine the document and clarify their position.

Letters

To the Student Body:

I would at this time like to express the feelings of Student Council on the admirable action taken by the President of the College in regard to the Grand Ballroom. The administration's co-operation with Student Government should be recognized. The President has made available to us information when we requested it. He has liberalized student use of the Great Hall. Dr. Gallagher has now, by working closely with representatives of Student Government, formed a policy on the Grand Ballroom suitable to all. He has constantly been helpful to Student Government, and has slowly given the student body more of a voice in the policy decisions of the College.

Too often we are quick to criticize an excellent College President but not compliment him when a job is well done. As President of the student body I think recognition is long overdue for the close co-operation that President Gallagher has maintained with Student Government.

Enrollments: Danger Ahead

entering class. According to Registrar Taylor, the College will accept 650 transfer students — 250 more than last year. Moreover, "over the last few years, the survival factor at the College has become better. We're not flunking out as many. Thus there will be approximately 290 fewer dropouts."

When these figures are totaled, the rise in the College's student population next term will equal almost one thousand.

The school is risking the hardships inherent in accommodating these extra students for two closely-related reasons. First, it wishes to lower its admission standards. Secondly, by lowering these standards it hopes to be able to admit more students from minority groups.

However, it appears that the admission standards will not really be lowered and even if they were an increase in the percentage of Negroes and Puerto Ricans will not necessarily follow.

Lowered Composite Score

Before this term, a student would be accepted by the College if he had an 85 per cent high school average or a 175 composite score. Now, only the composite score will be considered and this figure will be set at 170 next term. Mr. Taylor points out that 170 score is, in fact, equivalent to an 85 per cent high school average.

Elimination of the high school average as the sole determinant of admission will adversely affect the admission of minority groups. A Student Government report indicates that the Scholastic Aptitude Test [which is weighted with the high school average in determining the composite score] is based on "middle-class culture and standards and vocabulary." A student without this background, the report concludes, will "do poorly on the College Boards." Therefore, students from minority groups, who can possibly achieve an 85 average in high school, will not do well on the SAT because of their lack of a cultural background.

Logic Is Not the Issue

The logic behind increasing enrollments, however, is not really the issue—the administration plans to increase enrollments anyway.

Therefore, the College must take steps to meet the crisis.

Next term, more classes will be scheduled in the later afternoon and early morning hours.

Class size will increase in all courses. Three social science departments have experimented this term with large lecture classes supplemented by small discussion groups. Opinion is varied as to the success of the experiment.

However, even if the lectures were judged a complete success, Registrar Taylor points out that there are very few large lecture rooms available. Neither plans to make greater use of infrequently-used hours nor institution of lectures are drastic steps, and Registrar Taylor agrees that "we can squeeze by the years of 1964 and 1965 within essentially the five-day week schedule we now use."

1966 Is Crucial Year

But September, 1966 is, according to the Registrar, the crucial term "when we might have to stretch the day past 6 — which will play havoc with the evening session."

The year 1966, however, will not see the crisis reach its zenith, for no new facilities will be added to the College until September, 1968.

Therefore, the College is considering several long range plans. The most extraordinary of these is the elimination of the School of General Studies and the extension of the day session into the evening session — in fact, the creation of a one session college.

The non-matriculated students, who attend the School of General Studies would, under the plan, enroll in an expanded community college system. These students would still be able to obtain full degrees in community college facilities.

Necessary Steps

Such steps are necessary because the College is committed to increasing its enrollments. If the present trend continues, approximately 4000 additional students will be enrolled at the College before the first new building is constructed.

The question then is, will the College be able to increase its enrollments without drastically changing the school? All indications would tend to produce a negative answer.

Beauties Here to Join Beasts In Annual Ugly Man Contest

By Jim Fitterman

The College's venerable Ugly Man on Campus will no longer be alone—from now on he will have a girlfriend.

This year, students will not only elect the ugliest man on campus, but they will choose as his mate the most beautiful girl at the College.

"We were thinking of looking for the ugliest girl on campus, but then we decided that maybe nobody would want to enter," Charlie Goldberg '64, project director for the UMOC contest, said.

"So now the requirements are pretty easy," he added. "All a girl has to do to enter is be attractive, beautiful, and sexy."

Under the new system, a student or faculty member who thinks he is ugly enough to win will have to find a beautiful female who is willing to be his mate. The pair will be photographed, and their picture hung in the election booth.

Although the rules for entering the contest have been changed, voting regulations will remain the same as the past.

Student voters will make their selection by depositing donations in a jar underneath the picture of their choice. The couple whose jar contains the most money will be crowned "Beauty and the Beast, 1964."

The contest will be held May 13 through 15. Voting booths will be placed in Trophy Lounge in Finley Center and opposite Knittle Lounge in Shepard Hall.

Funds secured through the contest will be donated to the Heart Fund and Synanon. Students who feel that they are sufficiently ugly to win, and who can find girls with enough nerve to pose with them, can enter by contacting Alpha Phi Omega, the College's service fraternity.

pays the wages of the regular employees, should also pay for the aides' salaries.

It urged the administration "to increase its efforts to convince the city to pay for all student wages."

The third criticism levelled in the report objected to the elimination of an itemization on the student's bursar's fee receipt listing the areas earmarked for distribution.

President Gallagher had maintained that elimination of the fee breakdown would allow for greater flexibility in the allocation of funds raised through a fee imposition.

The committee, however, believed "that the student has a right to know the portion of the fee that will support student activities" and proposed that a list of the expenses met by the fee be placed on the student's receipt.

The three members of the committee were Bob Rosenberg '64, SG President, Danny Katkin '65, SG Vice-President, and Larry Steinhauer '64, SG Treasurer.

Both professors indicated that Dr. Volpe was not the only man considered for the position. Two other instructors vied for the post, but neither Professor Johnson nor Dr. Volpe would reveal their names.

However, the former chairman noted that "all of the three candidates were able men" adding that each one had "strong and enthusiastic support."

Election of a department chairman is determined by a majority of all instructors eligible to vote. Eligibility is granted to all professors, and to those instructors with tenure.

Dr. Volpe at present teaches two courses— a basic course in the Selected Students Program and a class in "American Literature from 1890."

Mishkin Needs Another Hurler For Batsmen's Busy Schedule

Castro Scores Four Goals But Stickmen Lose, 9-5

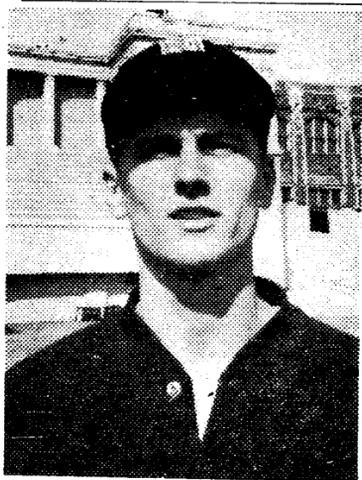

By Andy Koppel

A losing streak and an insufficient number of pitchers are the two major problems facing the College's baseball coach, Sol Mishkin, as the diamondmen prepare to play four road games in the next five days.

Today they will play Brooklyn in a non-league contest, Saturday they will face Met Conference leader Fordham in a double-header, and Monday they will meet Hunter in another non-league affair.

The Beavers have lost six of their last seven games since jumping off to a 6-0 record at the beginning of the season. Their league record now stands at 5-5 (7-6 overall) and they are far behind the Rams' pace-setting 8-1 mark.

Mishkin's problem at present concerns today's starting pitcher. He will send his two aces, southpaw Ron Muller and right-hander Howie Smith, against the Rams, Saturday and another southpaw Bill Lage, against the Hawks Monday. But this trio alone has handled all the starting assignments for the Beavers thus far and Mishkin cannot decide upon today's hurler.

The selection will probably be made from a group comprised of Roland Meyerelles, Joel Weinberger, and Paul Lamprinos. All three have pitched relief this season. Meyerelles' strong performance against Manhattan last week gives him the edge over the other two.

But Mishkin's chief problem is still the Fordham double-header. Ram coach Dan Rinaldo will send a pair of southpaws, Paul Hurrell and Gerry Macken, against the Beavers.

These two have handled most of the starting assignments for Fordham — and with great success. But the Rams have had trouble outside of the Met Conference, winning one game and losing two.

The two losses came at the hands of Army and Columbia. The Beavers were also beaten by the Cadets, but had a surprisingly easy time in beating the Lions at the beginning of the season when Muller threw a 5-0 shutout.

By Arthur Woodard

The College's lacrosse team, despite heads-up play by Emil Castro, dropped a hard-fought 9-5 contest to Stevens Institute of Technology yesterday at Walker Field in Hoboken, New Jersey.

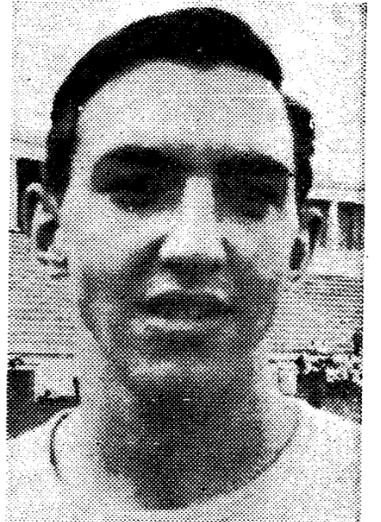

The loss left the Beavers with a 2-6 season record.

During the first period, the Engineers controlled the ball most of the time. But, through a combination of poor stickwork and bad passes, they were unable to score.

The Beavers tallied at the 5:00 mark when Castro, the team's high scorer, flipped in a shot from about ten yards away.

The second stanza was a disaster for the Lavender as Stevens tallied six times to the Beavers' once. The first goal of the period came at 2:26 when Engineer co-captain Ron Marold ran about fifty yards with the ball before throwing in a shot from some ten yards out. The Engineers followed up with goals at 7:45, 8:17, and 9:27 before Herb Silkowitz broke the Beaver draught with a twelve-yard shot. The Engineers were not to be stopped, however, and they put in two more goals before the quarter ended to take a commanding 6-2 lead.

The Beavers narrowed the

margin to 6-3 in the opening moments of the second half when Castro converted a pass from Ossi Juvonen.

The Engineer lead soon rose to five, however, as Walt Stamer, Stevens' leading scorer, and Stan Foreda put in goals.

The Beavers tallied at 12:09 when Craig Hirsch picked up a loose ball and passed to Castro, who drove it home.

The fourth period was relatively quiet. Only two goals were scored.

At 5:29, Castro scored his fourth goal of the game on a bounce-shot from about twenty yards out. The Engineers wrapped up the scoring at 12:26.

Although he gave up nine goals, Andy Markoe, Beaver goalie, was great in the nets again. He made eighteen saves ... Castro played one of the best games of his career. He now has thirteen goals and nineteen assists for the season.

The Beavers will take on Drexel Saturday at Philadelphia ... Drexel owns a 3-2 record ... The Philadelphians have beaten Townson State, 6-3, Lehigh, 4-1, and Franklin and Marshall, 18-2 ... They have lost to Stevens, 6-5, and Penn, 17-1 ... They are led by Fred Townsend, who scored three goals in last year's game (which the Beavers won, 7-6).

Drexel's style of play is basically man-to-man ... They go into a box if the opposition has an exceptionally hot player ... Nobody on the Beavers is that hot. Beaver coach George Baron says that "we're definitely underdogs." ... He couldn't be more right.

Juvonen must be looking forward to Saturday's game. He scored twice and had two assists in last season's battle against Drexel.

Netmen Take Maritime Tilt

By Nat Plotkin

The afternoon was brilliant with sunshine, but the College's tennis team shone even brighter yesterday as the squad defeated the New York State Maritime Academy, 7-2, at the Finley Center courts.

The victory was an easy one for the Beavers, although number-two man, Karl Otto, was unable to take part in the match.

The Lavender grabbed an early lead when Richie Gowing won his match in straight sets, 6-0, 6-4. The squad never relinquished their advantage as they lost only one singles and one doubles match in the encounter.

Although yesterday's match was an easy one, the Beavers realize that they have a long road to cross before they take league honors.

Brooklyn and Adelphi are the schools which will give the netmen competition for the Met Conference title. With the Beavers' loss to the Kingsmen last Saturday, it is a must that the squad win the remainder of their games. They face Adelphi in the season finale on May 13. The race could go down to the wire.

The Beavers have two more matches this week: the make-up of a rained-out contest against St. John's tomorrow and a regularly scheduled match with Pace College Saturday. The Redman contest should prove to be a tough one, but Pace should not give the Beavers too much trouble.

Runners Jump in Class At CTC Championships

By George Kaplan

When the College's track team took first place in last weekend's Municipal Championships, flames of hope may have been kindled in the hearts of Beaver fans that the cindermen might pull through to capture the top spot in Saturday's Collegiate Track Conference Championships at C.W. Post.

In case anybody sorta gets that idea, let's clear the air right now. This is written, mind you, by the same fearless forecaster who gave you the Yankees in four and Sonny Liston in five.

David will not conquer Goliath Saturday. The Beavers just don't have the manpower. Even if they still had the likes of Owen Masters, who is out for the season with a case of academic worries, the going would be extremely rough. They don't have Masters and that makes things rougher.

So where will the cindermen finish? The pick here is no higher than fifth, if that high. There are at least four schools in the Conference which have stronger teams than the Beavers: Fairleigh Dickinson (which has already triumphed over the Lavender this season), Iona, Kings Point, and Adelphi.

The cindermen will probably be beaten at every turn.

In the sprints, the strong points are Larry Milstein and Richard Jamison. Everybody connected with the team got a big bang out of it when Milstein and Jamison pulled upsets in the 100 and 220, respectively, at the Municipals. It was all very nice. But does anybody really believe that this pair can pose a serious threat to FDU's William Wheelock? Wheelock set the Lewisohn Stadium track record for the 220 when the Knights visited the College earlier in the year.

The 880 shapes up as the best event of the meet. Competing here are some of the best distance runners in the East, including Central Connecticut's Jim Keefe, Kings Point's Bill Sargeant, Iona's Robert Budwick (who ran the 880 in 1:53.0 at the Quantico Relays), and Jersey City State's Jim Barnes.
