Work continues

The College's Science and Physical Education Building opens a week from Monday making the first phase of the Master Plan a reality.

But while students are ready for the building, is the building ready for them?

Its fifteen stories, which face St. Nicholas Terrace house laboratories and lecture auditoriums for the Biology, Chemistry,, Physics, Earth and Planetary Science and Physical Education depart-

Its final touches were delayed by the massive city-wide construction that began in July, forcing work to con-tinue while classes are in session.

- · Faulty expansion joints in the second plaza area cause rain to leak into the buildings gymnasium and the Science library's stack area.
- Faulty coils in the heating and airconditioning systems can be replaced only when the Steamfitters Union settles its
- Rooms set aside for the Earth and Planetary Science department need alterations, and
- Rooms that require furniture and equipment have not received them yet.

The new building is twice as spacious as Shepard Hall which housed all the science departments but chemistry up until

It will offer some of the most modern facilities on campus, including a tremendous gymnasium with a seating capacity of 3,500, Avallone said

The gym features an artificial playing surface, in lavender, the school color

In addition, the building features a competition size swimming pool, a planetarium and all-around air-conditioning.

Avallone said, however, that no decision was reached to date to rectify an error in the pool's lane markings. Where the pool was to have six lanes it only five, already marked off in its fully tiled floor.

The Physical Education wing of the building has been named after Jeremiah T. Mahoney, an alumnus of the College who was president of the Amateur Athletic Union until 1936, when he resigned in protest over U.S. participation in the Olympics, held that year in Nazi Germany. The Science wing is as yet unnamed.

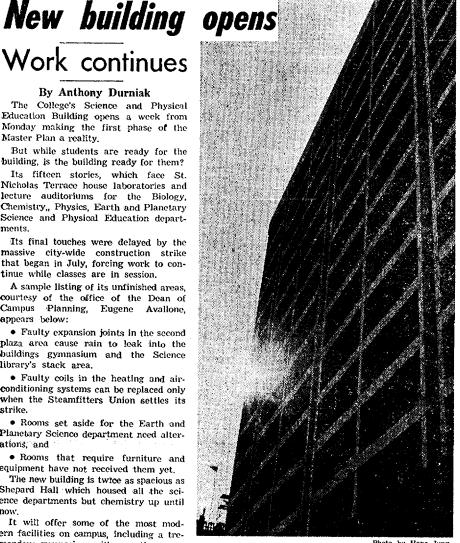

The building was funded by the State Dormitory Authority at a cost of 30 million dollars, Avallone said, warning that it would take "several million more" to complete the building.

The hall was on the College's drawing boards before the Master Plan for con-struction was ever discussed. Subsequently it was absorbed into it and scheduled for completion as the plan's earliest phase.

Its opening, two years beyond the original deadline, enables the College to provide its North Campus Gothic buildings, which formerly housed the science and physical education departments, a face-

The first buildings to be renovated are Baskerville and Wingate Halls. The target date for the two buildings is fall, 1974 with the cost of the renovation standing at approximately three million dollars.

THE COLLEGE'S NEW SCIENCE AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION BUILDING OPENS NEXT MONDAY. Twice as large as Shepard Hall, it offers some of the campus's most modern facilities including labs and lecture halfs with extensive audio/visual equipment. Its gym is capable of seating 3,500 fans for the College's basketball season which opens in December.

Marshak, ill, to stay out one mont

By Maggie Kleinman and Michael Oreskes

President Marshak, still resting after an apparent stroke, will not be returning to the College for at least one month, a high administration official revealed last week.

The fifty-five year old president was released from Mount Sinai Hospital last Tuesday after a two and a half Vice-Provost Bernard Sohmer said last week that Saul Touster, the College's first Provost, would act as deputy president until Marshak's return.

Officials at the College have generally declined to comment on the president's illness but one spokesman quoted Mrs. Ruth Marshak as saying her husband had suffered 'exhaustion.'

While Marshak's hospital physician Dr. Samuel Ellster said the president had made "remarkable recovery' he refused to comment on the nature or seriousness of his con-

But a provisional diagnosis - cerebro-vascular accident, commonly known as a stroke — was obtained by the Campus from a nurses station at the hospital, shortly before Marshak's release.

The president had complained of a sudden illness and was rushed to Mount Sinai in the wake of a peaceful one hour meeting with a group of Asian students August 3.

He had been scheduled to meet with the Steering and Planning committee of a group known as the Concerned Asian Students, but instead a group involved in community work in Chinatown approached his office at the appointed time.

What followed, according to Sohmer, was an acrimonious shouting match that ended when the president agreed

An hour later, Marshak asked Sohmer to "take the meeting out," Sohmer said.

The president arrived at Mount Sinai in his police escorted limousine no less than twenty minutes later, he continued, adding that some students walked away feeling guilty.

Touster, the College's first provost — he succeeded Acting Provost Abraham Schwartz a year ago — is also the first deputy president in the College's history.

Formerly, a senior dean would head the College in the absence of a president.

Sohmer Vice Provost promoted

President Marshak quietly named Dean of Students Bernard Sohmer Vice Provost for Student Affairs over the summer, concluding two years of talk about a top level appointment in that area.

Sohmer will fill yet another newly created post-Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs, joining the College's provost and Vice President Saul Touster, and two associate vice provosts.

The former dean's reaction to the promotion was low key. He said a vice presidential post for student affairs was "a good idea" born during the early stages of Marshak's presi-

The announcement, made last week, did not surprise him, Sohmer said.

The administrative expansion was sound, he explained in that "it made no sense" having vice-presidents, and deans as well, answer to the presi-

Vice Provost, who headed the Department of Student Personnel Services (DSPS) will be replaced by former Associate Dean of Students Herbert W. DeBerry who was named Acting Chairman of the department. The post of Dean of Students will be discontinued.

To some student leaders, news of Sohmer's promotion came as a shock.

The former dean had not only been at odds with the president over the use of discretionary funds last semester but had, in a DSPS report, commissioned by Marshak and issued by a team of outside evaluators come

A principal target of criticism in the report Sohmer was said to have lacked leadership, having allegedly failed to consult with his staff on major issues, felt it necessary to be "on top" of every critical situation within the department.

evaluation report Department of Student Personnel Services (DSI'S) submitted to President Marshak last month sharply critizes the present mode of operation and suggests a major restruc-turing of the entire department.

The evaluation, completed June 1 by a seven-man panel of educators from outside the College, is part of the overall evaluation of every department in the College commis-sioned by President Marshak last year.

The report, mailed to every member in DSPS suggests that many staff and faculty presently working in "former specialized areas (that) are no longer relevant" be "reassigned." No specific names or areas were mentioned.

The report says that the department is outmoded in its approaches to student problems and its own function. In fact, the panel says, "it was not possible for us to obtain a clear-cut statement of the presently vague goals of DSPS."

Department members were sharply oriticized for their "nosialgia." There is a desire for the 'good old days' when 'faculty and students were closer,' the report says.

"Yet everyone knows that significant and irrevocable changes are taking place and that a re-shift of resources is required and that some faculty and staff may have to be recycled.

In addition to the tendency to look to the past and avoid facing inevitable change (there is) a common practice to lament the influx of so many students who are so poorly prepared."

In addition department members were said to decry the deplorable remedial programs, 'lack of financial resources,' the physical plant' and the 'feeder high schools.

The evaluation committee said "there is admittedly little point in deploring all the obvious problems of an institution so completely locked into an urban setting, especially when physical plant and space roblems cannot be easily resolved."

They proposed that "student attitude towards administration, faculty and each other become increasingly significant and are likely more important to CCNY than most other institutions."

Dean of Students Bernard Sohmer, head of the department, also came under fire for his relations with DSPS per-

The Dean of Students," the report said "does not appear to delegate ad-ministrative function to free himself for leadership roles . . . Rightly or wrongly, the dean is presently perceived as having little confidence in professional staff and personnel workers, perhaps feeling, defensive about them. He allegedly does not rely on them in matters involving policy and organizational decisions."

Another eriticism centered about Solmer's omnipresence in decision-making events, "Another of our concerns," the report says, "is the need of the dean to be so much on top of immediate events, indicating that he personally tried to sit in on every situation that presented a possible threat."

According to the report the "common opinion of staff members concerns a frustration and impotency surrounding decision-making processes in the division. Apparently decisions are made by the dean without benefit of staff expertise and even minor decisions, usually allowed individual department chairman or staff members are sometimes allegedly prewithout consultation."

Dean Sohmer's numerous responsibilities and roles, the report proposes, may be leading to the confusion and uncer-tainty and says a "vice presidential level" appointment may be necessary to relieve him of some duties and clarify roles.

In a section designated "general comments" the committee sums up by saying "DSPS suffers from a lack of internal coherence and a faculty and student body that hardly knows they exist."

A split between member of the department and the faculty is also noted. The "regular academic faculty look upon DSPS as being less profession and unable to meet more rigid basic require-ments they maintain for themselves; nonfaculty members of the personnel staff are divided from fellow workers who have faculty status."

The staff, the report suggests, should be given equal status with tenured faculty members to make them less defensive and give them equal responsibilities.

The report also criticized:

- Faculty members, for their seeming unconcern about the College. The majority, increasingly resist remaining on campus anymore than absolutely necessary and no longer make any effort to develop relationships with students . . "
- The Student Senate, viewed "as a powerless token organization of little consequence to the lives of students or administrators."
- The lack of attention given to SEEK students and their apparent isolation from
- e rest of the College community.

 Poor quality of health care services.
- Inadequate counseling services and a lack of definition of what counseling is and should provide.

DSPS members, most of whom did not wish to be identified, reacted angrily to the report claiming it was too general to be of any value and had been prepared

One administrator called the evaluation "non-threatening" while another said he thought it has been written primarily by two graduate students, which-he claimed assisted the other committee members counter could say about what he termed "the bloody report," was that "it was as though the visitation never occurred."

The jovial dean explained, "As I see it; besides not being terribly specific . . strikes me as something not intimately connected with the visitation,

"To ever take foreigners and plunge them into a milieu and ask them to look at it from that milieu is wishful thinking (especially) over a sort period of time," Sohmer continued, "It lasted part of twodays.

In instances some major figures in the department were interviewed by the two graduate students, Sohmer said. The author of the report, Richard Siegelkow Vice President of Student Affairs at the State University of Buffalo, "a big man in his field," according to the dean, decided to bring them along.

One of the major people in DSPS was "angry." Solmer said, because he was interviewed for 45 minutes and he was met with "talk, not listening."

Aside from all of this, certain paragraphs of the report were taken verbatim from conversations, he claimed.

"They really didn't filter what they got," said Sohmer, adding that the report was more of a piece of journalism." It's not interprative at all."

The dean concluded by saying "The biggest thing I would feel free to say is that various members of the de-partment should become aware of what other divisions are doing. We have sub-divisions and some people are virtually ignorant of what others are doing."

Author extols report The chairman of the evaluating committee said this week that his report was 'a positive evaluation" and behind it."

Siegelkow, said in a telephone interview that he would not react to Sohmer's harsh criticism of the report.

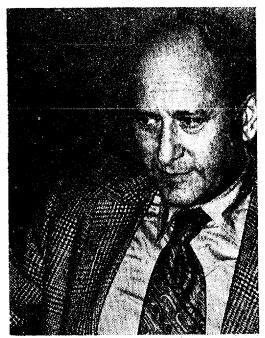

Siegelkow defended the evaluation saying that the deficiencies he found in the department are the same to be found in colleges scross the nation. In fact, he said, "We didn't find that much wrong considering the problem. This was a posi-tive report. Whatever problems we found here are the same ones at schools across the country."

Siegelkow refused to go into details about DSPS but he explained that "we're all hig boys and girls now and there's no point" in just issuing glowing praise.

Siegelkow said he had participated in dozens of evaluations of a samilar nature and found the College to be "in the vanguard of real educational change.

The appointment of this fourth so-called "horizontal dean" was an excellent way of handling the guidance of freshmen and sophemores, being that the first two years involve "sorting things out," Marshak said.

Two deanships have been discontinued to implement the changes.

Oscar Zeiner (Graduate Studies) and Myer Fishman (Curricular Guidance) will be returning to the History and Chemistry departments respectively.

The shakeup was first triggered by the President's realization that the Dean of the School of Liberal Aris and Sciences Oscar Chavarria-Aguilar was overworked.

Much of his administrative work will now be handlby the new deans.

Chavarria commented that the structural reorganization had also been spurred by a recommendation contained in an evaluation report of the school completed four years ago.

The Gettel report recommended splitting the School's four divisions into separate units. However, Chavarria warned yesterday that such a full-scale revamping, requiring faculty and City University approval, might threaten "liberal education."

A Dean's Council has been created, consisting of the dean of Liberal Arts and his four new associates, Chavarria added.

The College has received a $100,000 gift, from a 1935 alumnus, to establish a film institute here.

"The institute will offer courses and programs dealing with all aspects of film-making including directing, editing, photography, film processing and produc-tion," according to President Marshak.

Interdisciplinary courses and programs involving the Speech and Theatre, English and Art departments will also be offered by the institute.

Student workshop programs will produce film shorts on a variety of subjects and the institute will eventually sponsor film festivals and retrospectives for the benefit of College and the neighboring community.

When fully developed, it will serve as a focal point for the art of film for the and surrounding community. bringing together distinguished Artists in Residence and young film makers in a stimulating atmosphere replete with the latest equipment," Marshak noted.

College enrolls fewer frosh

The College has cut its freshman enrollment by 600 students this year, a higher cut-off score than any other senior branch of the City University, the Registrar's office announced this week.

The measure was taken by the City University to alleviate the College, last single largest recipient of freshmen requiring remedial work under the Open Admissions policy.

The median average of the entering class has remained at 79.7 for two years

The City University revised its allocation procedure last year to remedy a severe imbalance of freshmen taking remedial courses among the various senior colleges.

"But the allocation is still under review," said George Papoulas (Registrar's Office), indicating that the enrollment cutback was only a temporary measure.

In addition the College, for the first time during a summer session, offered a special remedial program for incoming students.

The program, which ended two days ago, was designed to put students requiring remedial work, on step ahead in the

No more than 2.600 freshmen are expected to enroll today and tomorrow, where 3,241 enrolled last fall.

"We are just not staffed, either in faculty or in space to properly handle the remedial load," Papoulas noted.

While none of the remedial courses offered in the past have been eliminated, class size will be greatly reduced.

But the Math and nelish which offer the most remedial work, have been ordered to dismiss several instructors and to halt the hiring of new personnel,

Wiesel to teach here

Elle Wiesel, author and interpreter of the Jewish holocaust during World War II, has been named Distinguished Visiting Professor in the College's department of Jowish Studies for this academic year.

Himself a survivor of Hitler's concentration camps, Weisel has emerged as a major commentator and moral analyst of the Jewish experience during World War II. He has been described as a "major influence on Jewish thought and culture of this generation," by critics and authorities on Jewish culture.

He has ten books published since 1961 and received the Prix Rivavol in 1964, the Prix Medicis in 1968 and the Award of the French Academy in 1972.

His published books include "Souls on Fire," "One Generation After," "A Begger in Jerusalem," "The Jews in Silence," and "Legends of Our Time."

Wiesel, who was educated at the Sorbonne, the Jewish Theological Seminary, Hebrew Union College and Manhattan-ville College, will teach a lecture course on "The Holocaust as Literature," (JWST 104.7) dealing with literary responses to World War II, and a course on the literary and philosophical themes of the Hasidim, the Judale sect founded between 300 B.C. and 175 B.C., which was revived in Poland in the 18th century (JWST 103.1).

The Bronx boys of summer

over the heroics of their beloved underdogs and all but tear down the ballpark. But never did I see anything quite like what I saw in Yankee Stadium. It wasn't the noise that got to me. It was the way those people seemed to be reaching out to be heard. They seemed to be crying out for their own identity — to let the world know they were still alive, that they still had feelings, that they were as important as anyone else.'

Seeing the Yankee battle for the pennant again is, in the pure sense, wonderful. Rooting for them has become a mystic excursion into nostalgia; a trip to Yankee Stadium a spiritual pilgrimage, The wildly ecstatic crowds at the fever-smitten ballpark consist of a prepointerance of people in their late teens and early twenties: people who are old enough to remember the final few pennants, but too g to have really appreciated them; people who, after eight years eing reminded ad nauseum about how great things used to be, been given the rarest of all opportunities: the opportunity to back the clock, and relive those days, or at least, to feel they reliving them.

For them, it evokes the warmest memories of untainted childhool; the innocence of the times when they were 12 or 13 and life was so much simpler; when all that seemed to matter in the world was how many home runs Mickey Mantle had hit and how many Whitey Ford had won.

But soon they weren't children anymore and that simple world was complicated by school, girls, and the draft and Mickey Mantle wasn't hitting home runs any longer and Whitey Ford stopped win-ning ballgames. The dynasty had collapsed and the children were becoming men. This summer, for the two or three hours they spent in the shrine of their youth, they were boys again.

This year's Yankees do not win with the mechanical, calculating consistency of their predecessors, but they do win often enough. They don't demolish their opponents, they simply defeat them. Overshadowed by their own great heritage, they appear defensive, almost apologetic, as if overtly conscious that they are not the domineering world beaters of their pinstriped past.

But Sparky Lyle stands out as a magnificent vestige of the arrogance, the professional conceit, the invincibility that epitomized the devastating Yankee machines of yore. He is a genuine reincarnate of those glory days, and he is here, right now, in 1972. Fans can relive pennants with memories of Mantle and Ford, but pennants are not won with memories. Lyle, though, is winning a pennant and bringing back memories at the same time. And that is really why the Lyle phenomenon has taken on such tremendous proportions. When Mantle came up in the ninth with the bases loaded, you just knew everything was going to be alright. When Lyle toes the ru with the winning run at the plate, you get the same feeling. It's a feeling Yankee fans haven't had since, well . . . since Mantle.

And so, with the Yankees leading the Tigers 1-0 in the ninth, Lyle, armored in the white, pinstriped foreign car that seems, so symbolically, too small for him, made his way in from right field

CELERINO SANCHEZ bas replaced Lee Trevino as Super Mex, at least in this town, He plugged a gap cre-ated by the departure of Clete Boyer and the arrival of Rich McKinney.

BOBBY MURCER occupies Mickey Mantle's former er, shares a common Oklahoma birthplace, and was signed by the same scout. Most significantly, he hits more like Mickey than any to the strains of Pomp and Circumstance and a rising crescendo of knowing anticipation from the crowd. And when he flung the ear door open, spat a thick, dark stream of tobacco juice at his feet and marched confidently, defiantly to the mound, the place went wild.

One fan noticed the irony when he said, "It was the first time that 50,000 people came to a ballgame hoping to see the home team's starting pitcher get knocked out."

Shouts of "Dee-fense" bellowed from 50,000 throats and the Count gave 50,000 hearts a scare before striking out Ike Brown with the bases loaded. "Dee-fense" gave way to "We're Number One!" and the embodiment of nearly a decade of abstinence exploded in one collossal outburst.

Now. August has turned to September and the summer of such promise is turning into the autumn of falling leaves and dying dreams. It may be an autumn that is terribly cruel to the Yankees, or one that, like the summer, is rich with reward. In this autumn the Orioles or the Tigers may tarnish the memories of August and take away the pennant from the Yankees. They may, But they'll never be able to take away the summer, because that summer, one all too brief belonged to the Yankees. And it belonged to Sparky Lyle, and to Yankee Stadium.

And, it belonged to me.

Dean of Nursing named

School of Nursing, effective tomorrow, replacing Cynthia

The former dean resigned last March in a controversy over her work load in which the College could not intervene. Kinsella held the twin post of Dean of Nursing and Director of Nurses at Mount Sinal Hospital where the College's School of Nursing is located.

Hosford, a 1945 graduate of St. John's University majored in Public Health Nursing and later earned her master's from New York University in 1947.

She earned her doctor of education degree from Columbula University Teachers College in 1962 and became Director of the Nursing Division at Trenton State College from 1966- 1972, where she helped develop a new basic baccalaureate nursing program.

Hosford became chairman of the Division of Nursing at Mount Saint Mary College in Newburgh where she instituted the first associate degree nursing program under Catholic auspices in New York State.

The new dean went on to become the Assistant Chairman of the Department of Nursing Education at St. John's University from 1962-63, both to direct the graduate program and to serve as a faculty consultant for curricular affairs.

Faculty contract due tomorrow

Serious negotiations for a new faculty contract were under way between the Professional Staff Congress and the Board of Higher Education yesterday. The old faculty contracts expire today, Although no threat of a teacher strike as signaled, the parties have been squabbling about what the union calls ross-the-board salary freeze."

The university's vice chancellor for faculty and staff relations David Newton has denied that such a freeze exists. The Professional Staff Congress representing 16,000 College teachers is a merger of two former bargaining agents the faculty overwhelmingly approved in a vote taken last June.

The vote was a rebuff to City University Chancelor Robert J. Kibbee who recommended that the three year old split between full-time and part-time faculty unions prevail.

The Professional Staff Congress is now the largest university union in the country, creating a major new force on the New York labor scene.

Sohmer named Vice Provost

by suggesting a vice-presidential ap-pointment for the dean.

"It's a question of style," the Vice Provost, angered by what he termed "the bloody report," retorted in an interview concerning the attacks

"The director of the Placement Of-fice (a division of DSPS) is competent. We meet a lot, but major policy decisions emanate from there," Sohmer continued.

Commenting on the College's dealing with "eightieth street" (the loca-tion of Board of Higher Education offices) and "Washington" Sohmer insisted that a body in touch both "locally and globally" remained essential or He refused to yield to the critic isms leveled against him in the rating, saying that in the main, he would perform the same functions, getting his "hands dirty with the tails" if and when necessary.

Asked whether the report's con-clusion about the dean had spurred the promotion. Sohmer said that perhaps it had "confirmed" an old idea.

While he accepted the post without apparent emotion, he seemed sur-prised that students were fearful his to a demotion.

The students feared he would be urged to return to a teaching posi-tion in the Mathematics Department, which he left for the deanship three years ago.

Sohmer, a popular figure among students on the campus said he regarded the view as "a bit narrow."

"It wouldn't make sense to work with someone I was at odds with," he stated, adding that he has "little disagreements" with everyone,

Apparently anxious to let bygones, such as the rift over the funds, be hygones, the vice-provost vehemently denied the suggestion that Marshak had perhaps promoted him in the hope of capitalizing on Sohmer's popularity.

can't conceive of a president appointing someone to a position of power for political ends. He would be in desperate straits." Sohmer stated. "And he's not that foolish."

Ted Brown: 'When return.

Ted Brown, President Marshak's Administrative Assistant for Academic Affairs and all-around troubleshooter, said at a going-away party this summer that he would be returning to the College after a one year stint at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton Uni-

Brown told a group of colleagues that he was planning a definite comeback a year from September. But he ruled out full-time administrative post saying when he does return, "it will be that when he does return, primarily to teach" as a member of the history department.

It was a 'guilt ridden' Ted Brown who decided to accept an offer from the College while he was teaching courses in the history of medicine at Princeton University.

He recalled having thought he was "losing his mind" there, — "it we coming ridiculous" — and that entering his position here he would have socially relevant; "guilt reducing" work before him. The College, he explained was an "institution with so many social commitments.

"I naively assumed that," Brown said recently, describing the real experience as "fundamentally maturing," one that "made me feel different about how I'd spend the rest of my life."

While he is gone Brown will be working on a book about the history of 17th century physiology, the specialty in which he earned his Ph.D. from Princeton and aside from this he says he will at-tempt to "tie up some loose ends."

During his one year at the College, his role shifted from administrator, to negotiator, to "assistant dean for ethnic as colleagues have jokingly described him.

Brown was:

- The principal negotiator when a group of Asian students formulated a list of demands they presented to the administration.
- The College's Albany lobbyist during last year's fight for free tuition and an adequate budget for the City University.
- An administrator for student affairs and academic planning.

Vice Provest Bernard Sohmer remarked earlier this summer that "no one can force a person to work fifteen hours a usual devotion and involvement with stu-

"He had a way of transmitting, rearranging student demands so they became proposable," Sohmer added.

Several administrators will succeed Brown in accordance with the structural reorganization of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, President Marshak announced early this summer.

Sohmer who has been promoted from Dean of Students to Vice Provost for Student Affairs will have a larger voice in that area and Camilla Auger, Marshak's assistant for Academic Planning will increase her responsibilities. A new assistant dean will also be named.

Brown who was once the College's student government president, graduating in 1963, went on to receive his master's and doctoral degrees at Princeton,

SDS leader on probation after JDL fracas

JDL members clash with spectators during Kahane's address

By George Schwarz
The College's Disciplinary Committee has handed down a decision to put SDS leader Niki Matsoukas on probation for one academic year, in the aftermath of emester-long dispute involving SDS and the College's chapters of the Jewish Defense League and the Young Socialists, Matsoukas was called before the Disciplinary committee for using a bullhorn in Shepard Hall while classes were in in Shepard Hall while classes were in session. Herbert Michaels, another SDS leader involved in a bullhorn incident, never appeared before the committee.

Vice Provost Bernard Sohmer, then Dean of Students, said that the papers screed incorrectly. According to the rules, the committee hearings must involve a recent matter'". summoning him to the hearing

The hearings resulted from a series of events beginning last February, when a fight broke out between JDL members and other spectators allegedly be-longing to SDS, the Young Socialists and the Young Workers Liberation League, Grand Ballroom address by JDL founder Rabbi Meir Kahane.

A final development in the case involves a highly placed national JDL figure who admitted in a telephone interview that some of the JDL members present at Kahane's speech had been carrying arms. The official explained that this was a precautionary measure, adding had been a "real threat 'to Kahane's life."

It was also learned from the official that a College JDL member, on police probation at the time, was in violation of his probation for allegedly carrying arms.

Stuart Cohen, one of the members of JDL present during the fracas, and also one of the JDL members believed to have been armed, was indicted on Monday, August 28, on charges of conspiracy, and perjury in a case involving the purchasing of three high powered rifles for JDL.

Cohen, at the time of his indictment, was out on bail. He had been arrested and charged in the bombing of the office of Sol Hurok, the impressario.

Acting in the College's behalf Sohmer uspended the groups' charters and Anvited them to informal hearings to have conducted under the auspices Prof. Balley Harvey (Speech and Thea-

SDS immediately demanded open hearings which Sohmer refused to grant. What ensued was a demonstration in front of Sohmer's office during which Michaels and Matsoukas made use of bullhorns, in violation of College rules.

Both were suspended by Sohmer. Michaels was later arrested for violating his suspension, on grounds that he had trespassed on College property. Spotted on campus by Wackenhut guards, he was immediately brought to the 126th Street police station.

Appearing in night court, Michaels agreed to plead guilty on reduced charges and was let off by Judge Hyman Solnicker with a warning.

The next day, Michaels was surprised to learn his lawyer had pleaded guilty for the defendant.

Michaels said he had never intended enter such a plea and was angered by the news.

Both SDS leaders were then given the opportunity to appear at close informal disciplinary hearings but they refused. Consequently the Disciplinary Committee met for the first time in two years.

It decided that no conclusive evidence been presented that demonstrators outside the Grand Ballroom belonged to any organized campus group bent on breaking up Kahane's speech, Thus, the cases were dismissed.

JDL leaders, meanwhile agreed to appear at the hearings, but a decision in their case is still pending.

to the strife-torn History and Anthropology Departments — both imported from outside the College — in an apparent bid to restore a semblence of stability.

In the History Department - scene of an alleged fight between two faculty Herbert R. Gutman, a pro members — Herbert R. Gutman, a pro-fessor at the University of Rochester, was named chairman,

In the Anthropology Department, where David Thomas has been filling in as acting Chairman since February when Diane Sank resigned, a professor from the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, Eleanor Burke Leacock, was appointed to the chairman's post.

In a third appointment the head of the black studies program at the University of California at San Jose, Leonard Jeffries, was named to head the program

The History appointment came after months of infighting between faculty members and most professors agreed that a pronounced "generation gap" existed.

The unusual move of bringing in a chairman from outside the College was recommended by a search committee of two professors from Columbia University. Several history professors said privately that the department was so factionalized that only such a step could restore order.

At on point during the spring semester, an alleged assault by Prof. Joan Gadol upon Prof. Stanley Page was said, by a student eyewitness, to have taken place.

Gadol has since left the College for a full-time teaching position at Sarah Lawrence College. She said a "series of wild charges" had made it impossible for her "to function as a human being' at the College.

Before her resignation she had been eligible for promotion to full professor twice but both recommendations were blocked by older faculty members in the department, according to one informed

A Faculty Senate committee established year ago to investigate the History Dept. was expected to complete its report in the near future.

The resignation of Diane Sank, who headed the department since its inception two years ago, came after apparent prodding by the administration. Disunity in the department was attributed to her and faculty, according to the student-run Anthropology Collective.

When Jeffries assumes his post here it will not be his first College job. He taught here in January 1969 for one semester before moving on to the University of California at San Jose where he was instrumental in establishing the black studies program.

A spokesman for the California university described Jeffries as "definitely not conservative, but not militant, either."

His activities in San Jose, however, have shown an intense link with the community.

At one stage he took on the trustees of the university when he invited Stokely Carmichael as a speaker. Carmichael, then a touring black spokesman, was thought by the trustees too fiery to be permitted a speaking permit. In Carmichael was permitted to give his ad-

In another incident Jeffries led a community protest against a policeman accused of killing a black man without cause. The policeman was found innocent after a trial but was dismissed from the department.

pride about being a Yankee rooter. Even though the guys who pulled for the Dodgers and Giants would sucer at you, there was always a certain feeling knowing that your team players - were the best of all. They haven't had that around here for a long time.

—Joe Falls, sports editor of the Detroit

Free Press and a native New Yorker on a recent visit home.

By Larry Schwartz

That deafening, prolonged cry of exultation you heard this summer was the rejuvenation of that adorned but until recently dormant fortress in the Bronx, Yankee Stadium, Home of Champions (hopefully) once more Pormit this lifelong Yankee fan to rejoice and pardon, if you will the deviation from our usual policy of reporting only CCNY sports, but it is thoroughly inconceivable to mention the summer of '72 without mentioning the Yankees, and it is thoroughly impossible to mention the Yankees without mentioning The Count, Albert W. Lyle, known to Yankoe fans and those who will later vote for MVPs and Cy Young Award winners as Sparky.

It was a Bronx summer that had begun not unlike those of recent vintage: dismally. Whatever promise there was in spring training had diminished proportionately with the length of the players' strike and the first three months of the season. It would be the eighth summer without a pennant, the sixth year of a Five-Year Plan that had born too little fruit and too many lemons. The Big Trade was now earning his pay in Syracuse and Yankee Stadium was becoming a depressingly desolate mausoleum on the banks of the Harlem River. The people watched Staub and Mays and then watched Torres and McKinney and the contrast was immense. The people stayed away

But suddenly, dramatically, just when the tide had seemingly obbed, things started to happen. Baltimore was stattering and acting very much like a team that missed Frank Robinson dearly. Billy Martin's Old-Age home in Detroit was evaporating under the tormenting heat of the unrelenting summer sun. The Yankees, buoyed by a 28 year-old rookle from Mexico, finally reached and surpassed the .500 milestone, a symbol of moribund medicerity in seasons gone by but good enough this year to make them a contender.

And it all came together one evening in early August. Fifty-thousand people jammed Yankee Stadium, fifty-thousand people who were bold enough to brave Dick Young's self-contrived Highwaymen, people who were enterprising enough to seek and find the inadequate parking people who were willing and able to ignore the poles and lend such unbelievably vociferous support that even the center field monuments of Ruth, Gehrig and Huggins, those of the fabled monuments of Ruin, Genrig and Huggins, those of the labled Bronx Bomber past, seemed to sense that what was happening had never happened there before and shook with the enthusiasm.

In this ora, though, that of Murcer, White and Munson, the fans were creating the thunder, amidst the pitter-patter of short Yankee base-hits, aspirins darting from the right arm of Steve Kline and tobacco juice and halucinating sliders spewing forth from Sparky

"I have seen those Frenchmen of the Forum go berserk over a goal by Jean Beliveau," wrote Joe Falls. "I have seen almost 100,000 go wild over a blazing run by O.J. Simpson in the Rose Bowl; I have seen those Mad, Mad, Mad fans of the Mets go utterly mad (Continued on Page 10)
